Baptist Campaign Has Put $4,000,000 Into Care of South's Orphan Childre

Benevolent Phases of Forward Movement Are Set Out In General Statement From Headquarters—Hospitals and Ministerial Relief Greatly Extended.

A Group of Happy Homeless Boys Provided for in a Baptist Orphanage.

Of the $46,500,000 that has been collected in cash on the Baptist 75 Million Campaign to January 1, 1924, the sum of $7,782,831.53 has gone to such benevolent work as caring for orphan children, healing the sick and ministering to aged, worn-out preachers, it is announced by the headquarters of the Campaign.

$4,000,000 Went to Orphanages.

More than half of the benevolent fund, or $3,999,192.63, has gone to the 21 Baptist orphanages of the South, two of which have been established as a result of this movement and all of which have been greatly helped by this forward program. Nearly 4,000 orphan boys and girls are being housed, fed, clothed, educated and trained for Christian citizenship in these orphanages and the Campaign has put between $800,000 and $900,000 into the maintenance of these institutions each year. The orphanages are now caring for more children than their normal capacities permit, but despite this extra effort the institutions have been compelled to turn down the applications of 2,000 other orphan boys and girls, simply because there was no room for them.

Sick and Suffering Aided.

Large advance has been made in the ministry of Southern Baptists to the sick and suffering during the four years of the Campaign. At the time this movement was inaugurated Southern Baptists were operating twelve hospitals. The number now in operation has grown to 22, six others are practically completed and ready for service, while two more have been projected. At the time the Campaign began the value of Southern Baptist hospital property was $2,227,000, while today it has grown to approximately $9,000,000 among the institutions already in operation. The number of hospital beds has increased from 1,623 to 3,000.

During the four years of the Campaign a total of 170,000 patients have been treated in these hospitals. Approximately $1,000,000 worth of charity service has been performed there for needy but deserving persons.

925 Old Preachers Helped.

Into the work of ministerial relief the Campaign has put the sum of $1,440,133.31. More than $500,000 has been put into supplying the needs of aged and dependent ministers and their families. This, representing the efforts of four years, is far more than Southern Baptists had ever done for old preachers in all their history prior to the launching of this forward movement. At the same time the Relief and Annuity Board has gathered an interest-bearing endowment and sinking fund for relief alone of more than $450,000, and has gathered for its annuity work an interest-bearing endowment and sinking fund of more than $1,100,000. Today 925 beneficiaries are carried on the rolls of the Relief and Annuity Board.

An effort is being made to bring the 75 Million Campaign to a successful completion during 1924, it is announced by the headquarters office, and forces are at work in every state in the territory of the Southern Baptist Convention with a view to enlisting the churches in the immediate discharge of the task they assumed in this five-year movement.

Golf Balls Kill Birds.

Driving a long, low shot from the tenth tee, W. L. Wass, playing on the Thorpe Hall golf course, Essex, saw his ball hit a titlark as it rose about fifty yards from the tee, and such was the force of impact that the bird was killed. Ten minutes later, Wass's partner, A. F. Hart, playing his second shot, struck a lark in flight, the ball killing the bird outright.

Antelope Swift of Foot.

The antelope or prong-horn is the swiftest runner on the continent. He lives on the open plains, depending upon his eyes, his nose and his swift legs for protection. These have failed him as the country has settled up. He cannot survive wire fences and modern firearms.—Nature Magazine.

THE HOME NEWSPAPER BOOSTS YOUR TOWN

What does your home newspaper mean to you?

It happened in the office of a small town newspaper. A business man of that town called and asked the price of some letter heads and when informed that a certain number would cost a certain price said "Gee Whiz, I can get that job done at the cut-price printery in another town for much less." Whereupon the paper man replied:

"All right; take it to the cut price printery, but let me tell you something before you do so. We are boosting this town 52 weeks in the year with our weekly newspaper. We have an overhead expense and we furnish employment to others; we are endeavoring to boost this town to make business better for you as well as ourselves; we are operating our newspaper so that we can pay a living wage and at the same time make a fair profit; we cannot operate below cost and neither can you. You make a profit and yet it seems you don't expect us to do so". Before he could go further the business man interrupted him and said: Wait a minute—I'm not kicking, go ahead and turn out the job."

Too many times the business man, the merchant and the professional man forget that a weekly newspaper does mean to his success in his home town and that such an institution is really entitled to every cent that can be thrown into the newspaper's hand—that many of the small papers run a printing office to supplement their income in order to make a living.—Ex.

Long-Lost Ring.

Three years ago a woman lost her diamond engagement ring on the sands at Frinton, Essex. The local police were notified at the time, but nothing was heard of the ring until a few weeks ago, when she was informed by the Clacton police that it had been found on Frinton sands.

A New Crime.

A police constable stated that he heard a torrent of expletives coming from a house, lasting for half an hour. The occupant, brought before the Bath police court, declared that he had been swearing in his sleep. He was bound over.

Thimbles as Ornaments.

In the days of Queen Elizabeth ladies wore wonderfully decorated leather thimbles, which covered the whole finger, as ornaments.

The Shark Sucker.

The shark sucker, a defenseless and retiring fish, takes a shelter in the mouth of the savage and voracious shark, but it is not harmed by the shark.

Pawnee Indians Were Whirlwinds in Battle

The Pawnees were never disciplined in a military sense. On one occasion when they were to start on a scout early in the morning, three days' rations had been issued to them. They ate every ounce that night and had nothing to eat until the afternoon of the second day, when they shot a few antelope.

They obeyed orders and suggestions preliminary to a combat, but in a charge or sudden attack they reverted to their own methods and were whirlwinds in a fight. Major North stated that in an engagement near Wood River, Neb., where the Sioux were completely surprised, the scouts charged, firing their repeating carbines, flung them aside when empty, used revolvers in the same manner and wound up the fight with bows and arrows. They had to go over the field afterward to recover discarded weapons. I saw the command as they passed through Julesburg; they had eight scalps decorated and stretched on hoops. The next night I witnessed their scalp dance. It was the most thrilling savage rite I have ever seen.

A Pawnee stripped for action and in war paint was a striking object. The head was shaved excepting a narrow ridge of hair in the middle that stood erect like a roached mane from the forehead to the crown where it ended in a scalp lock. A large circle about each eye was filled in with black, the rest of the face and portions of the body were streaked with vermilion and yellow. At a short distance their faces resembled decorated skulls.—E. T. Scoville in Adventure Magazine.

Fox World's Greatest Debater at Age of 19

Recent rivalry as to who is the "baby" member of congress has caused some of the bookishly inclined to hunt up records, revealing that although William Pitt was premier of England at twenty-four, and although Charles James Fox was acknowledged to be the greatest debater in parliament at about the same age, having got in when he was nineteen, there once was a young man elected to the congress of the United States when he was twenty-four years old and too young to serve under the Constitution.

This young fellow was John Young Brown of Kentucky, who could not take his seat until the second session of the Thirty-sixth congress, who later served in two other congresses and was governor of his state.

John Randolph of Roanoke, on account of his youthful appearance, was challenged by the clerk of the house, who asked how old he was. Randolph replied that he had better "go ask the people who elected me."

Henry Clay is the only man in history who served in the senate before he was thirty years old, "but he knew enough to keep his mouth shut about his age and no one else thought of it," the late Champ Clark commented. Clay was later secretary of state under John Quincy Adams and twice defeated for the presidency, by Andrew Jackson in 1832 and by James K. Polk in 1844.—Kansas City Star.

Sea Gypsies' Homes in Boats

The sea gypsies, who are also called mawken ("the sea-drowned folk"), belong to the Mergui archipelago, and the march to the sea has forced them first from the mainland to the islands and then to the sea. They consequently live their whole social life at sea, and while they are healthy, temperate, fearless, peaceful and chaste, says Prof. J. Arthur Thomson in "What Is Man?" the boats, which are their homes, are the last word in dirtiness to our western notions. Everything from fish—their staple food—to pearl oysters is cleaned in the boat. Because "anything that would attract the sharks is fatal, hence nothing is thrown overboard. It is horrible, but intelligible."—Detroit News.

Quick Witted, but—

Afraid to breathe, almost, the returned reveller crept quietly into his bedchamber as the gray dawn was breaking. Sitting on the edge of the bed, he cautiously undid his boots. But, with all his care, his wife stirred in bed, and he presently was all too well aware of a pair of sleepy eyes regarding him over the edge of the sheet.

"Why, Tom," yawned the little woman, "how early you are this morning!"

"Yes, my dear," replied Tom, stifling a groan, "I've got to go to Montreal for the firm today."

And replacing his footgear the wretched man dragged his aching limbs out again into the cold and heartless streets.

Joy of Going to Work and Returning Home

From the time I was six years old and started out to school until the time when I got married and started keeping house, it was part of my routine to get up and get dressed, eat breakfast and go somewhere in the early morning. The two years before I married Bill I walked to the schoolhouse where I taught every day, rain or shine, hail or snow.

And many a morning since I've been married have I wished, when I rose, that I had to get dressed and hurry and walk off somewhere, past the farm and the schoolhouse, a couple of miles or so, to my work. For the love of the outdoors, and the meeting it in all weathers is in my blood, and will never be wiped out. Yet many days my duties keep me in the house from dawn till dark, and, in spite of an honest effort to get out, the days sometimes slip by one after the other and I am scarcely out of doors, with all this open country around me.

I'm not willing to admit that there are any disadvantages in being married, but if I did admit one, it would be this—that the wife and mother rises in the midst of her work—her family and her duties are upon her often before the clothes are on her back—and she retires also in the midst of it, often taking off, at bedtime, the very apron that she tied about her waist before breakfast.

It's nice to go to work—to get up and dress and go out of doors for a brisk walk in the morning freshness, and to come home again in the fall of dusk to lighted lamps and a singing kettle.

But then, if mother wasn't home to do those breakfast dishes, and wasn't there to put the kettle on, perhaps the rest of the world couldn't have the joy of going to work and coming home again, and better for some of us to have it than none of us at all, writes Margaret W. Jackson, in Farm Life.

Declares Neat Farms Indicate Prosperity

If you want to realize the need of tidy farms just take a trip through a country new to you, says a writer in Farm Life. I never had the same respect for what a little care of lands and home grounds could mean for a farm as I did after passing through hundreds of miles with the varied aspects that such a trip can afford. It is natural for the traveler to gauge the prosperity of the farmers and the production of the soil by the homes and farms. I have traveled for a whole day without seeing a single really badly kept farmhouse and nearly every farm had a big, well-painted barn of two and silos and orchards and well-kept grounds. Generally trees were planted to protect not only the home but the barns and stock yards from severe north and west winds. It did not take assessors' figures to tell me that such a community was prosperous. I would not expect to buy farms there for a price I should pay for a farm even within a day's travel where few really well-kept homes were in evidence and where fences, grounds and farm lines were neglected. I saw just such differences in two states on my trip. I suppose I could have seen them everywhere. The soil looked about the same and the crops were looking much the same. Creameries were abundant in both, and I saw many good herds of cattle. And probably, if the real facts were known, the prosperity was not greatly different. But we could not help but feel that we were among a less prosperous people and, friends, paint was about the biggest point of difference.

Journalist in Church

A preacher, at the close of one of his sermons, said: "Let all in the house who are paying their debts stand up." Presently every man, woman and child, with one exception, rose to their feet.

The preacher seated them, and said: "Now, let every man not paying his debts stand up." The exception, a careworn, hungry-looking individual, clothed in last summer's suit, slowly assumed a perpendicular position.

"How is it, my friend," asked the minister, "that you are the only one not able to meet his obligations?"

"I run a newspaper," he answered meekly, "and the brethren here who stood up are my subscribers and—"

"Let us pray," exclaimed the minister.—Our Dumb Animals.

Right Place

"I am trying to find a lady whose name I have forgotten," said the stranger at the door, "but I know she lives in this neighborhood. She is a woman easily described, and perhaps you know her—a singularly beautiful creature, with pink and white complexion, lovely eyes and hair such as a goddess might envy.

"Really, sir, I don't know," replied the servant.

"Jane, tell the gentleman I'll be down in a minute," came a voice from the head of the stairs.

Deep Soil Is Required for Growing Licorice

Licorice belongs to the pea and bean tribe. In this country the plants flower scarcely once in ten years, and they do not ever appear to bear seed. As long ago as the Sixteenth century licorice was first grown in Pontefract, near Leeds. Pontefract possesses an unusual depth of soil, without which it is impossible to grow the plant.

The whole usefulness of the plant lies in the root, which grows to a depth of over six feet. This contains a substance known as glycyrrhizin, and it is this transparent yellow juice which gives licorice its medicinal qualities and its distinctive flavor.

The plants are propagated by sets or stools something in the style of rhubarb, and in Pontefract these sets are guarded with the utmost care. Nowadays there are probably not more than eight or ten growers.

The roots often take five years to mature, and for the first two or three years other vegetables are grown between the rows of licorice.

In its raw form licorice looks rather like a dark kind of glue. It is boiled down in a cauldron with treacle and sugar to give it the desired flavor. Later it is pressed out into a pliable mass and carried to tables, where girls make it up.

After pounding it to the correct degree of pliancy, the workers break off pieces, which they pull out into a kind of string; and then at enormous speed they nip off small pieces and throw them onto a tray in long rows. In Pontefract 500 people are employed in this industry.—London Tit-Bits.

Malays Build Homes on Posts to Foil Tigers

An American who had seen service abroad as a consul tells of some interesting dwellings in the Orient. The ordinary Malay house is built on posts from five to seven feet high, but sometimes safety measures add considerable to the length of the posts, this being particularly true of tiger-infested districts.

As tigers have been known to leap 18 feet from the ground, a lift of 20 feet is considered the safety limit for prospective builders in such sections. At best the Malay house is a frail and flimsy structure of sticks tied together with rattan, thatched with palm leaves and walled with plaited bamboo or tree bark. It is, therefore, an easy matter for a tiger to break into a house. Many tragedies, with a hungry tiger as the villain, have been recorded. In one case a whole family, with the exception of one man, was killed. He climbed to the roof and thus escaped the notice of the tiger, but was the horrified and helpless witness of the cruel slaughter of his relatives.

Canine Intelligence

"You can't overestimate the intelligence of a dog," declared Col. Spotswood Telfair, of Mountain View, gazing reminiscently at his favorite hound engaged in snapping feebly at the pestiferous flies.

"When Towser was in his prime he had an uncanny way of knowing in advance the sort of game I was going to hunt. For instance, if I left the house carrying a rifle Towser would dash for the woods and trail nothing but squirrels. If I started out with a shotgun Towser would trail nothing but rabbits.

"One day I decided to puzzle the old rascal, so I took down my fishing pole and started to the river. It may sound preposterous, gentlemen, but when I got to the edge of the yard I found that derned dog scratching up fishing worms for me!"—Judge.

Scarce Articles

At the club they were talking of germs and germ carriers. One member maintained that kisses carried germs. Another considered paper money the chief offender.

"Your opinions are merely vague guesses," declared a third. "What have the scientists found out on the subject?"

Nobody knew. A college professor drifted in and they called on him.

"We were discussing germ carriers, professor. What do the scientists have to say about kisses and paper money?"

"Kisses and paper money, eh?" echoed the professor. "The average scientist has had little experience with either."

Knew Her Dad

A small child was having her first ride in a subway train. Suddenly the train passed over a switch and the lights went out for a moment.

When they went up again, the little girl said: "Did you do that, daddy?"

Daddy denied it.

"Well," replied his small daughter, "it's just the sort of thing you would do."

His Reputation

"Prisoner," said the magistrate, "you have already been sentenced 11 times for vagrancy, violent assault, embezzlement, theft and so on."

"Would you mind not speaking so loud, your worship?" was the reply. "My intended father-in-law is in court, and you might damage my prospects."

Absent

A negro woman was telling a friend that she had been to a wedding. She described the bride's white satin gown, the veil, the slippers, the flowers, and everything.

"And what did the bridegroom wear?" asked the friend.

"Well, do you know, that good-for-nothing fellow never showed up at all."

"My husband, who was a great believer in Cardui, having seen what it did for me in former years, went and bought six bottles; insisted I take it steadily, which I did. It helped me. I did not suffer so with my head and back. My limbs that had felt weak and shaky grew stronger and Cardui helped me through this period. I feel it did a great deal for me."

Brocaded Canton for Afternoon; Dainty Ginghams for Children

WARM-WEATHER gowns for afternoons will endear these best-beloved of our belongings still more to our hearts. The variety of fabrics used for making them gives chance for so much diversity and the afternoon frock is mainly concerned with being beautiful. Other considerations are overshadowed by this first essential.

In the procession of likely fabrics there are beautiful printed crepes and ...ks, plain and printed voiles, laces, find colorful rivals dotting the landscape everywhere. The perennial and beloved ginghams that have been broadcast so far are the prettiest that have been to our fate allotted for many a year. Now that so much attention is given to plaids in all fabrics the weavers of ginghams are experimenting with new designs and they are adepts in the creation of plaids. Some of the new finer ginghams are as dainty and elegant as any fabric plain and changeable taffeta, embroidered batiste and net, new knitted materials, organdie and satin. It seems impossible that anything new can appear in crepes, but wonderful new patterns are here in the richest of the season's novelties.

With organdie frocks filet lace is liked for embellishments, in bandings, fine tucks also and girdles and sashes of narrow velvet ribbon. Organdie is especially well adapted to the tunic dress. Voiles are also made up with laces, the narrow Nottingham patterns used in insertions. Ribbon bows and need be and in all grades the color combinations are very attractive.

Women are taking on new morning frocks and house dresses, using the plaids and checks in combination with a plain color in many instances. The plain fabric may serve only for bands, collar, cuffs and pockets or it may be used in the composition of a dress as in models with plaid gingham skirts set onto plain bodices, with the plaid pattern reappearing in decorative features on the bodice. Plaid gingham is used for children's dresses more extensively than any other way, and long ends make a sprightly finish for frocks of this soft material.

But nothing outclasses brocaded canton crepe for afternoon frocks. It is shown in many colors and is so decorative in itself that it looks best without trimmings. A handsome model is pictured here in a one-piece wrap-around style. A frill of plaited georgette at the neckline and in the split sleeves relieves the plainness of the design, and two long flat silk tassels hanging from a jeweled ornament provide a side fastening in keeping with the richness of the brocade.

The flowers that bloom in the spring this year are destined to plain gingham or pique furnishes collar, cuffs and bands. The latter combination is shown in the pretty frock pictured for a little miss between eight and her teens. The pique collar, cuffs and side band are piped with a plain color and the narrow sash is made of the plaid gingham. The side fastening and the split collar are effective style points in the design which is merely a straight, easy bodice with a plain skirt gathered to it.

Fine ginghams with touches of white organdie make frocks a shade more dressy for grownups and for children.

Unusual Conveniences Arranged in Kitchen.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Virginia housewives, inspired by the efforts of their home demonstration agents, have been sprucing up their kitchens and competing with each other in putting in conveniences and labor-saving devices at small cost. The prize-winning kitchen in Albemarle county was improved for a total cash outlay of only $3.70, most of which was spent for paint and three new window shades. The woman who won the prize did all of the work herself with the exception of a little help from one of the men in the family in making a table and altering the doors to the kitchen.

Details of Improvements.

Some of the improvements this woman made may offer suggestions to other housewives. In a report received by the United States Department of Agriculture, the following details were given:

She filled in cracks and breaks in the walls and ceiling with plaster of paris, and then tacked gray building paper on them. This was treated with cream-colored wall paint. Cracks in the floor were filled and the whole oiled. With the man's help, windows were cased and old doors were made over and painted. A little old table was braced, enameled white, and fitted with casters, to serve as a tea wagon. An old food safe was painted white and put on casters. The woodbox was raised on legs, to be reached more easily, and the whole painted. A child's chair was made into a kitchen stool. On the back of the kitchen door a shelf rack was made for brooms and the mop, which had large nickel rings from old curtains screwed into their ends to serve as hangers. Three new window shades were purchased at a cost of $1.30, the largest single expenditure.

Perhaps the most unusual improvement in this kitchen was the making of a sink out of an old dishpan, which was enameled blue and cemented to a shelf built over an old drain pipe. A hole large enough to hold the stopper was cut in the bottom of the pan and through the shelf, and lined with cement. This connected with the drain pipe. There was not enough room for an adequate drain board, but a small one was improvised so that the water would drain back into the dishpan sink. A lower shelf was put in to hold the water bucket.

Handy Work Table.

A work table about three feet wide and six feet long was designed and built from old lumber. One end was set against the kitchen wall, and the other had two drawers fitted with glass knobs salvaged from an old piece of furniture in the attic. A set of movable shelves was placed about two feet back of the drawers, allowing a convenient work space, while the other end of the table is used as a dining-table for the family. On these shelves were set containers for groceries made from lard cans, baking-powder tins, and other boxes, enameled blue and neatly arranged. Cookbooks and glass jars for other supplies completed the shelves. The work table was painted white and given a coat of waterproof varnish. An ingenious place for small equipment that could be hung up, such as basting spoons, potato masher and egg beater, was made of a rack for buggy whips, also enameled blue, which was found in the store formerly run by the family.

A lamp with a tin reflector was changed from its former position and placed to throw light over the stove. The fixture was painted to match the wall. A rack was placed back of the stove from which to hang frying pans. A towel rack was placed near the stove and another back of the door. Little changes of this sort often mean a great saving of effort and time in doing the housework.

ECONOMICAL PLAN TO USE ALL LEFT-OVERS

Cut Off and Reserve Tail-Ends of All Meats.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If you know the tail-ends of steak or chops will not be eaten, why not cut them off before serving and reserve them for a stew, hash, meat balls, or other "made" dish at another meal? It is economical to cut meat into individual portions before serving and keep the part not needed at the meal out of sight in the kitchen, where it will not tempt the appetite unnecessarily. Meat left-overs kept too long and allowed to spoil are a total loss. Remember also that overcooked meat is often wasted meat. Fuel saving is often food saving, the United States Department of Agriculture reminds us.

Another thrifty idea is to make a good deal of gravy after cooking a roast as many of the good meat extractives are in the roasting pan. Save what gravy is not served at table to warm up the left-over slices for use in a "shepherd's pie," to thicken croquettes, or to combine with vegetables, macaroni, or noodles.

Will Clean Brushes

Cornmeal will clean hair brushes quite as well as ammonia and there is no danger of injury to the back of the brush. Take a cupful of cornmeal and fill the brush, rubbing the bristles gently with the hand. As it becomes discolored from absorbing the grease shake it out and replace it with fresh meal until the brush is clean.

GRAPE JUICE USED TO MAKE DESSERTS

Also Favored as Flavoring for Beverages.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Grape juice, whether canned commercially or at home, can be used for a number of delicious desserts, as well as for a refreshing beverage. The following dessert recipes, using unfermented grape juice, have been suggested by the United States Department of Agriculture:

Grape Sherbet.

Mix 1 pint of grape juice, the juice of 1 lemon, and 1 heaping teaspoonful of gelatin dissolved in boiling water; freeze quickly, add the beaten white of 1 egg when almost frozen. This quantity is sufficient for eight persons.

Grape Ice Cream.

Mix 1 quart of grape juice, 1 quart of cream, 1 pound of sugar and the juice of 1 lemon. Freeze.

Syllabub.

Mix 1 quart of fresh cream, the whites of 4 eggs, 1 glass of grape juice, and 2 cupfuls of powdered sugar. Whip half the sugar with the cream, the balance with the eggs; mix well; add the grape juice; pour over sweetened strawberries and pineapples or oranges and bananas. Serve cool.

Bohemian Cream.

Mix one pint of thick cream and 1 pint of grape juice jelly; pour into small cups and set on ice. Serve with lady fingers.

Test for Eggs

Boiled eggs which adhere to the shell are fresh. A good egg will sink in water. Stale eggs are glassy and smooth of shell. The shell of a fresh egg has a limelike surface. A boiled egg which is done and dries quickly on the shell when taken from the saucepan is fresh.

Cover Jars With Paper Bags

Save your paper bags and slip them over your jars of fruit, writing the name of the fruit on the bag. Twist the top of the bag tightly and the fruit will keep better and the jars will be free from dust.

I refused to have it done took a full course of your medi- for six months, then after the course I took a bottle of Lydia inkham's Vegetable Compound week or two, also Lydia E. ham's Blood Medicine every Spring. I am well and stout and still have my organs they wanted to remove. It was while I was in the hospital that I heard your medicines praised by other patients there. I have recommended them to my friends and to my own family. You may use this testimonial far and near, from the smallest paper to the largest, and I will gladly answer letters from women who wish to know what the Vegetable Compound has done for me and what it will do for them if they give it a fair trial." — Mrs. J. RICH, 322 N. 40th St., Camden, New Jersey.

Through neglect, some female troubles may reach a stage where an operation is necessary, but most of the common ailments are not surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same.

Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after operations have been advised.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, over 100,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 reported that they had been benefited by its use. This statement is important to every woman. For sale at drug stores everywhere.

Gold at Earth's Center?

The way in which earthquake waves travel through the earth helps scientists to form a hypothesis of the composition of the earth many miles below the surface. At best, drills and shafts will reach only a mile or two into the interior, but vibrations set up by immense slips in the crust indicate the nature of rocks to a hundred miles below the surface. The effect of tides on the earth taken in conjunction with its weight makes it probable that the core of the earth is made of heavy, dense and elastic metal, probably iron, with perhaps fabulous deposits of gold and platinum at the center.—Current History Magazine.

Croatia and Its People

Croatian Men in Native Costume.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Croatia is about to become an active partner in the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, after being a silent partner for nearly four years.

The Croats were not at all pleased with the dominance of the Serbs in the new kingdom, and since the adoption of the constitution in June, 1921, 96 Croatian members of the national parliament—nearly a quarter of its membership—have abstained from taking their seats. Their decision to sit now, however, does not mean that they are any more pleased with the situation, but that, according to one of their spokesmen, they are going to use their votes to help the opposition. They have been spurred to this decision by the treaty between Italy and Yugo-Slavia turning Fiume over to Italy and smaller near-by ports to Yugo-Slavia. Fiume was originally Croatian, and against the wishes of the Croats was carved out by Hungary as a royal town. After the World war Croatia hoped to see its ancient possession returned but D'Annunzio and diplomacy have thwarted these hopes.

Croatia has a coast line of nearly 100 miles on the bays and channels of the northeastern Adriatic from Fiume southeastward, and extends inland toward the Save and the Drave rivers about the same distance. The Croatians are the most western of the Southern Slavs both in location and in culture, for they were permitted to develop under their Austro-Hungarian overlordship while the lots of their fellow Slavs were cast in a less promising environment.

Croats are by no means unknown to America. Before the World war the emigration stream from Croatia flowed from Fiume and Trieste as constantly as the water trickles through and under the limestone plateau of the Karst region, a noteworthy physical feature of Croatia.

Development Is Lacking.

Though "Croatia and Slavonia" is rich in agricultural land, has vineyards, pastures and forests, lack of capital has handicapped commerce and industry. Indeed its southwest, rich in forests and grazing land and accessible to the sea, is accounted one of the least developed regions, economically, in Europe. The chilling blasts of the bora have something to do with the sparse population and backwardness of this region.

Wine is cheaper than water in some sections. A curious by-product of the vineyards is the "grape cure" at Zombor, a sanitarium where the chief prescription is a stipulated ration of the variety of grapes held to be beneficial for the ailment under treatment.

Croatia's chief city, center of her politics and culture, is Zagreb, formerly known better by its German name, Agram. It sits in the lap of the Croatian hills and looks off across a fertile plain. The city is divided into three parts, one of which contains the palace of the banus, who under the rule of Austria-Hungary was the local administrator, and is reached by a funicular railway or by winding streets from the lower town.

Up from the railway station, almost to the main square of the city, there runs a fine mall, in the midst of whose lawns there are various fine public buildings, and a little to the left, as one looks toward the hills behind the city, there are the beautiful grounds and buildings of the University of Zagreb, which is unsurpassed in all Yugo-Slavia.

Market Day In Zagreb.

Except on market day this great square is a drab, uninteresting place. Early in the morning on the days of the market long lines of tables are placed on the cobbles until they reach to the very tables of the coffee houses along the southern side, and the country roads are alive with attractive figures, clothed in their holiday best, en route to the market.

The waists and skirts of the women are of white, with much red embroidery up and down the front, around the waist and across the apron. Stout white hose with roll tops and ribbon garters fill in the space between the knee-length skirts and the moccasin-like slippers of soft leather. Around the head is worn the Slavic shawl, that form of self-beautification which reduces the high cheek-bones of the Slav to a pleasing oval that would honor a Madonna of Italy.

The women are both venders and shoppers. But many a sturdy wife is assisted by the presence of her picturesque man, whose costume is just as colorful as her own. His rather full white trousers are worn loose or strapped in at the bottom with the thongs which secure the sandals, and his heavily embroidered shirt hangs down outside to a truly Slavic length. The yellow vest, with scores of bright buttons and gay stitching, is likely to be worn unbuttoned unless his shirt lacks ample decoration.

Almost always one is likely to see some of the gypsies of the region and, spattered with fire as is the white costume of the Croatian women, they seem lacking in color when a gypsy woman strides by. Her head shawl is a blaze of Turkey red. The massive red flowers or other designs in her waist may or may not be carrying on silent war with the tone of the headdress, but if by any chance they harmonize, the bright colors around the bottom of the apron surely do not.

The gypsy woman's main decoration, besides the bright rings of base metals which emphasize the proletarian quality of her hands, is a long necklace of the huge silver cart-wheel currency which bear the head of Francis Joseph and make him popular throughout the now defunct empire of the Hapsburgs.

In a Beautiful Setting.

Behind the city there are lovely valleys reaching into the hills and livened with singing brooks on their way to the Save, with peasant houses flanked by huge haycocks hiding in the trees, and along the ridges are scattered the eeries of suburbanites who love the air.

Here, too, is one of the finest wild parks in Europe, its vegetation untamed and full of beauty, with benches pleasantly located to look off across the city and the valley of the Save.

But perhaps the prevailing impression of the visitor is not concerned with loveliness which Nature has lavished on the surroundings, but the way in which man has kept the place attractive. The tables of the coffee shops are as spotless as the white skirts of the women, and as soon as the market is over, usually at noon, the cobbles of the square are polished till they shine. Every bench, lettuce leaf or plum pit is spirited away so that its presence may not add a touch of variety to the great gray square in which, but a few hours before, a thousand gayly-dressed people surged back and forth in the eternal drama of barter and sale.

Out in the wide plain beyond the cathedral there is an amusement park or circus ground, where the Croatian peasant follows his main delights of eating, drinking, singing and dancing. But with nightfall these colorful folks are well out on the white roads which lead to their farms, the women toiling along under the large willow basket with the newly-purchased geese rubber-necking from their elevated coign of vantage, and the man, his brimless black felt hat, compromise between dunce-cap and derby, with its bright band around it perched over one ear, and his yellow vest, studded with small brass buttons until one can scarcely see the leather, flapping idly beside his care-free bosom. A veritable spotless town, Zagreb emphasizes the labor of women in a way which reminds one of the electric sign in which a woman is constantly fighting dirt.

Dogs Carry Cards

A new fad among the women of Paris is the lapdog visiting card. French bulls and toy spaniels that go visiting with their mistresses have their own tiny pasteboards tucked away in little pockets of their outdoor coats. Such dogs have two sets of cards, which are duly left for the dogs at the houses where they are calling with their mistresses. One card gives the dog's pet name and pedigree and the other the name of its mistress.—Kansas City Star.

ALL IN THE STATE OF MIND

If you think you are beaten you are.
If you think you dare not, you don't.
If you would like to win, but think you can't,
It's almost a cinch you won't.
If you think you'll lose, you're lost
For out in the world you'll find—
Success begins with a fellow's will—
It's all in the state of the mind.

Full many a race is lost
'Ere ever a step is run
And many a coward fails
'Ere even his work is begun.
Think big and your deed will grow;
Think small, and you'll fall behind;
Think what you can, and you will—
It's all in the state of the mind.

If you think you're outclassed, you are,
You've got to think high to rise,
You've got to be sure of yourself before
You can ever win a prize.
Life's battles don't always go
To the stronger or faster man.
For sooner or later the man who wins
Is the fellow who thinks he can.

HOW YOU CAN GET OVER A HALF MILLION VOTES

Here's an example of how easy it is to get over a HALF MILLION credits in this campaign.

40,000 votes are allowed on each 5 year subscription to the Shelby County Reporter, provided the same is turned in before the close of the First Period on April 19th.

Ten 5 year subscriptions, amounting to $75.00 in business, would entitle you to 400,000 REGULAR CREDITS. And according to the rules of issuing 50,000 EXTRA credits for every club of $20.00 turned in, ($75.00 constitutes over three clubs) you would be entitled to 150,000 extra credits. This number added to the 400,000 Regular Credits makes a grand total of 550,000 credits for just ten 5-year subscriptions to the Shelby County Reporter.

Therefore the ten 5-year orders, or the equivalent in shorter term orders, would mean over a HALF MILLION votes. Easy enough, isn't it? Haven't you ten friends who would help you to the extent of a 5-year subscription to the Shelby County Reporter toward winning that luxurious four-door Ford Sedan, valued at $800.00? Of course you have. See them now.

One of the most recent entrants in our $2,700 prize giving campaign is Miss Lucy McGraw of Vincent. She says she determined to win one of the automobiles we are giving. That is a fine spirit, and if she really feels that way we would bet on her—if we were the betting kind.

Miss Anna Mae Campbell, of Calera, is holding forth as Calrea's favorite, and will no doubt make the race warm for some one near the end. She says she is enthusiastic and feels like it will be a lot of excitement to even participate.

A letter from Miss Georgia Wheeler Route, 1, Wilsonville, states that she is out to win the fine sedan, and gratefully thanks her friends who are promising to assist her.

Mr. J. A. Cates, Route 2, Columbiana, who is well known to the people of this county has announced his intention to work in the campaign in his spare time. Mr. Cates says that he is rather busy at this time of year starting his crop, but believes his spare time will be well repaid working in the campaign.

Mr. C. B. Davis' many friends are pleased to know that he has entered the contest, and they predict that he is going to be one of the biggest winners, as he is well know the county over for his energy and determination,as well as for his pleasant smile—and delicious steaks.

C. S. Day, Jr., a hustling and ambitious young man of Montevallo, uses the expression that he is "going to put it over big, both for the Reporaer and for himself." We believe in Mr. Day's ability and believe he will make a fine showing on May 10th.

One of Columbiana's first entrants was Mr. Whitson Finley. "Whitt" says that although the can't spare much time from his studies at school that he is going to leave no stone unturned to win one of the biggest prizes. We believe that anything "Whit" says, he means, too.

Then comes Norman Lefkovits, of Columbiana, who is showing real salesmanship ability in handling his prospects. He shows the people just how they get more than "value received" when they subscribe for the Reporter—and when he "writes 'em up" they really feel like they have done themselves and everybody else a good deed—and they have.

Our most untiring candidate and one who is bound to achieve a big prize is Mrs. E. E. Walton, of Columbiana. She says she finds it easy to sell the Reporter, and really enjoys canvassing for her home paper. She and her friends are confident that her efforts will be crowned with success on May 10th.

H. R. Justice, of Calcis, is bringing up his part well. He says that campaigning is just like any other business proposition. Just what you make it. He has his work systemized and is going about it in a way that will insure him success in the few remaining weeks of the contest.

Shelby is rallying to J. G. Hendricks. J. G. is attending school, and hasn't much time—but after all anyone who really ever does anything is always doing something else at the time they take it up. It takes a person who has "done things to be able to do "bigger things."

Candidates who are striving to win the extra $20.00 in gold will bear in mind that one 5-year subscription will give them 5,000 times as many points as a 1-year subscription. It is the candidate who realizes this that will make this liberal $2,700.00 offer mean most to them.

The Shelby County Reporter is not hard to sell— in fact it is becoming more popular every day. This very campaign is doing more for the paper and Columbiana than anything that any organization or institution has undertaken in the history of Shelby county. Candidates, our goal is: The Reporter in every home in Shelby county." Help us put it there. By doing so you will have a chance to benefit wonderfully by a little well-directed spare time. YOU can do it. You can do anything else you want to. You are learning something every day that will be worth thousands of dollars to you later in life. You are learning to SELL. It isn't what you produce that nets you an income; it isn't what you have that keeps you going. If you didn't know how to sell your cotton for more than five cents a pound that would be all you could get for it. Everybody has something to sell, and the individual learns to sell his own particular product the best is the person who is going to succeed most in life.

When a person decides not to take the paper, don't become the least bit discouraged—just determine all the more to sell the next prospect, and you will soon find that you have mastered the art af salesmanship, and few prospects will be able to convince you they don't need the paper.

When a man says that he 'does not need the paper" and at that believes he is dead right—he is DEAD, right!

The Shelby County Reporter is not a partisan paper. It is an institution for the upbuilding and general welfare of Shelby county. It is what you make it—and it takes circulation to make any paper. Anybody can afford to invest $1.50 in their paper, especially a worthwhile paper. Convince the prospect of this and write them out a receipt.

Just take this view of the matter, and see how pleasent the work will become after doing it. Every time you write a receipt for the paper just say mentally "well, that's another $1.50 check that I can give the Reporter for one of the automobiles they are giving on May 10th, and it isn't costing me a cent, either; and what's more I have done this customer a good turn by taking his subscription. In six or seven weeks from now he will be receiving one of the best weekly papers that honest effort and money can produce. I know he will like the paper, and therefore I feel that everybody benefits alike." That's the attitude to take. It is the attitude of a winner in everything worth while in this life. The desire to benefit the other fellow as well as yourself.

CANDIDATES CLOSELY GROUPED AS END OF FIRST PERIOD APPROACHES

SATURDAY IS DAY OF DAYS IN CAMPAIGN; BIG CREDITS WILL BE OVER ON APRIL 19

Many Surprises Due as the End of First Period Hoves In Sight—Big Votes Wll Be Over When All Reports Are in Saturday Night—The Crucial Test Is Now at Hand.

IT'S ANYBODY'S RACE—A NECK AND NECK AFFAIR— LATE ENTRANTS GAINING GROUND

A Few Long Term Subscriptions Now Would Make a Mighty Big Improvement in Anyone's Standing—Votes to Decrease One-Third–Better Be Safe than Sorry.

The bars are up! The track is clear. The preliminaries are over. The Shelby County Reporter's Big Automobile Circulation Campaign is on in earnest. Now the race for the rich prizes, headed by the brand new $800-00 Ford Sedan, swings into the fourth week with but a handful of subscriptions separating high and low contenders. In this issue will be found the standing of the candidates up to Wednesday.

Records will be made and records will be broken with the ending of the First period. Never before in the history of this campaign have so many votes been issued for subscriptions. Never again will it be possible to secure as many ballots as now. Just two more days and big votes will be a thing of the past. To WIN or NOT TO WIN is the question of the hour.

CANDIDATES

The crucial test is now at hand! If you ever intend doing anything in this race, DO IT NOW! Instead of being in second, third, fourth or fifth place, GET UP AT THE TOP AND STAY THERE. Now is the time to secure an insurmountable reserve vote. Now is the time to make reasonably sure of the prize you most desire.

Never again, after Saturday night, April 19, will it be possible to secure the full voting power on subscriptions. This is a final and fair warning. To hold back now, or rely on "promises" to subscribe at a later date, simply means that you will have to take less votes on such orders. We are putting it up to you squarely. If you entertain any desire of being declared winner of the beautiful Ford Sedan, worth $800.00—to be awarded on May 10—do not fail to turn in every available subscription to your account before the close of the First Period. Not to do so simply means that you will have to redouble your efforts during the remainder of the race to make up for lost ground. A few long-term subscriptions NOW may be the very ones needed to "cinch" the big prize; they could hardly help but winning one of the major awards.

HOW "PERIOD" WILL CLOSE

The First Period will end with the closing of the Reporter office Saturday night, April 19th. The time is set for 10 o'clock, but should any candidate be unable to report in full by that hour, the time will be extended sufficiently to meet the requirements.

Candidates are requested to come to the office as early as possible in the evening. They will be waited on in order, first come, first served. The Reporter office will be closed as soon as all candidates have reported in full, and with its closing, the First Period of the campaign ends and the the big votes will be over. There positively will be no subscriptions accepted after Saturday night, no matter what the conditions, EXCEPT such subscriptions that might be contained in letters postmarked Saturday, April 19th. This arrangement permits out-of-town candidates and friends of candidates residing outside of the city to mail subscriptions as late as the closing hour of the First period and receive big votes thereon, even though the orders do not reach the Reporter office until Monday.

IF YOU HAVE CONTEMPLATED HELPING A FRIEND IN THIS CAMPAIGN SUBSCRIBE BEFORE 10 O'CLOCK SATURDAY EVENING, AND GIVE YOUR FAVORITE THE BENEFIT OF THE THE BIG VOTES.

After Saturday the vote schedule goes DOWN, Down, Down, and the voting power of subscriptions is tremendously reduced. Therefore, act NOW!

With all reports not yet in for Wednesday evening count the standings are reported herewith.

So close are they arrayed that it is anyone's race—just a few "clubs" and the lowest one in the race could be in the lead, and it is up to the individual members and their friends to improve their chances for the grand prize before the end of the First Period.

With but TWO more days –Friday and Saturday—in which to turn in subscriptions and receive the maximum votes for the same, and with but THREE weeks to go before the race comes into a close, interest in the competition intensifies.

Each candidate realizes that the prizes, stupendous in value, lay practically in reach, either to be claimed for their very own or forfeited to more aggressive opponnents during the next three weeks, dependng to a great extent on the efforts being put forth while the BIG votes are being issued.

DON'T FORGET THIS!

Now, let's figure this this thing out. Get a pencil and paper and get down to brass tacks. First, put down the value of the Grand Capital Prize—a four-door Ford Sedan at $817; second, put down the value of the second prize—a Ford Touring Car, at $370.50. Note that the difference in value of these two awards is $446.50—a sum equal to six months' wages of the average head of the family, and more than 99 in a 100 save in a decade. Then set down your choice of the radio set, phonograph etc. Now, how much effort is it going to take you to win these prizes? How many votes will it take? The answer to your question is: it will take your very best effort during the next three weeks.

The answer to the second question lies in the fact that it will be necessary to get every vote you can and right NOW.

Don't forget that this is a battle hereafter. If you halt for a single moment or weaken for a single day, or if you overlook one opportunity to better your chances to win, you are taking the desperate chance of losing the fine Ford Sedan, already partially won, and which really belongs to YOU. You are nearly certain to bring dismal disappointment upon your self as well as your friends who will feel your defeat as keenly as yourself.

The closing of the First Period is all-important. Don't forget that fact for a moment. Still, it is only a step forward, not a goal. The goal is May 10th, when the campaign ends, but every step forward is nearing the goal, and the "First Period" represents the biggest step in the campaign.

Liken yourself unto Guiliver and step over the heads of your competitors. YOU CAN if you try.

Candidates, Last Chance For Big Votes

Saturday night of this week is absolutely your last chance for big votes. So, if you wish to be a winner, Saturday night of this week must show some results on your part. Thousands of votes may be lost if you withold subscriptions now. It would be better to win by a million votes than to lose by a paltry thousand . Don't fail to have every available subscription in at the Club Office on Saturday, April 19th. The 20th will be too late. ACT NOW!

Sunday School Elects Officers

New officers were elected for the Bethel Sunday school at a recent meeting of the school, as follows:

J. W. Heflin, superintendent; L. P. Mooney, assistant superintendent; Miss Hazel Mooney, secretary; Mrs. J. M. Lyons, Mrs. J. A. Cates, Miss Mary Pitts, Mrs. P. M. Henderson, and Mrs. O. K. Bazemore teachers.

EASTER PROGRAM AT BAPTIST CHURCH

An Easter service will be held at the Baptist church in Columbiana next Sunday with the Beginners' Primary and and Junior departments of the Sunday school in charge of the program. The children are being carefully trained for their parts in this program and the service promises to be of unusual interest. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

At the evening service the music will be given by an orchestra composed of Mrs. L. L. Saxon, Mrs. W. T. Taylor, Louis Averyt, and Charles Horsley, violins and Mrs. J. L. Davis, piano. The pastor will preach at this service.

E. Stinson of Bethel community received a message Thursday that told of the death of his brother, George Stinson, in Texas.

TO THE VOTERS OF SHELBY COUNTY:

Contrary to the age-old custom I am not entering this campaign at the request of friends, but on account of the encouragement I have received after having approached a large number of voters in regard to the matter and I have decided to become a candidate for the office of County Treasurer.

I AM NOT A POLITICIAN.

I am entering the race strictly as a business proposition: If elected I shall give you a business-like administration of the office.

Although I have heretofore advised a number of my friends that I would be a candidate for this office; having heard that there would probably be an effort made to have the law creating the office of County Treasurer declared unconstitutional; I have waited to make my formal announcement till the Democratic Executive Committee of Shelby County, the only authorized agency of our party having power to do so, had called a primary of May 13, and had stated in this call that at this primary a candidate for County Treasurer would be nominated.

I hope to be able to see you before the primary, but if I fail in this, I shall nevertheless be grateful for your vote and influence.

Respectfully soliciting your support, I am Yours truly,

(Paid political advertisement.) E. E. WALTON.

Mrs. Wallace Heard Over Radio from Atlanta

Mrs. Mildred White Wallace of Columbiana, who is visiting relatives in Atlanta gave a radio concert that was broadcasted from that city Monday night.

The program included a number of Mrs. Wallace's own compositions including the popular "Dream Boat." Radio Fans in Columbiana "listened in" on the concert by Mrs. Wallace and greatly enjoyed it.

ORATORICAL CONTEST FRIDAY NIGHT

Friday night, at eight o'clock, the Fourth Congressional District Oratorical Conntest will be held in the High school auditorium. The movement for such a contest is fostered by the Birmingham-Age Herald. The three contestants representing Shelby, Dallas and Cleburne counties will speak on some important phase of the Constitution. The suceessful contestant will be presented with a handsome $20 gold medal.

Ezra Crumpton, a member of the Lincoln Debating Society, represents Shelby High. He will speak on the Constitution and its makers In the event he is successful Friday night, he has a chance to win a scholarship to any college in the state of Alabama.

Come out and back our home boy, who is trying to work his way thru college.

The High school has selected as its judge Mr. Luther Fowler, editor of the Reporter. Cleburne county High has asked Judge Leeper to act as its judge. The judge to be selected by Selma Hi has not yet been appointed.

DOWN WITH CULLMAN

Do you remember the licking Cullman gave us last fall? We now have a chance at them again. We play Cullman in baseball Friday and Saturday. The Wildcats are out for revenge.

This will be a feature game. The entire county should turn out to see the game. Cullman won in football; they can't do it in baseball.

We have a good team, Folks, turn out and support it.

If you don't see this game you'll be sorry, for it's going to be a humdinger.

Board of Revenue Report in This Issue

The semi-annual report of the Board of Revenue which will be found in our columns this week should make interesting reading for the tax payers of Shelby county.

Their capable secretary, Mr. Oliver Miles, has arranged his figures in such a way that any information may be obtained with very little effort—the various funds being kept separate, the expenditures listed according to the objects for which the payments were made, and the names of the payees appearing in alphabetical order.

This condensing of the matter with which the document purports to deal, the ready accessibility of the figures, and the arrangement of the report as a whole will be a welcome change from the usual method of presenting official statistics; and the Board is to be commended for the adoption of this efficient and simple system of reporting the county's receipts and disbursements.

Wanted: 100 present tonight at Bible Study class.

MR. DURANT MAY BE MADE FIELD WORKER

A joint meeting of the Executive Committee of the Shelby Baptist Association, and a special committee appointed at the last meeting of the association, was held in Columbiana Sunday afternoon, to consider the employment of a full time field worker for the association. It was stated to the meeting that the association could secure the services of Rev. R. L. Durant for this important work and after a full discussion of the matter a committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangement.

Mr. Durant recently tendered his resignation as pastor of the Baptist church in Columbiana to take effect not later than June 1. It is the hope of those in charge of the movement to secure his service as field worker that he will enter upon this new work after he has had a few weeks rest.

Those attending the meeting Sunday afternoon were: J. T. Lovett, chairman of the Executive Committee, B. C. Kirkley, T. C. Rush and W. J. Horsley, members of the Executive Committee; W. G. Parker, member of the special committee; Rev. C. H. Morgan, J. L. Peters, Thos. Minor, and J. M. Templin. The committee appointed to complete arrangements is as follows: Rev. J. R. Curry, Montevallo, D. W. Boyd, of Calera; G. C. Meadows of Vincent; W. J. Horsley and T. C. Rush, Columbiana. Mr. Horsley is chairman of the committee.

CAMPAIGN PRIZES ON DISPLAY AT OFFICE

The grand prizes in the Shelby County Reporter's Greater Circulation Campaign can be seen at any time at the Reporter office.

The brand new four-door Ford Sedan was brought from Montevallo last Saturday, where it was purchased from the Reid Motor Co. It is the last word in luxury and beauty, as well as service. The total cost of this car, including extras, was over $800.00.

The Ford Touring Car, second prize, can also be seen at any time. This is a brand new 1924 model 5-passenger touring, as will be presented candidate in second place.

CHANGE IN PRIZE LIST

It was announced at the beginning of the campaign that the Reporter would award a radio set, valued at $100. However, a better set, costing $135.00 has been secured, and will be given as third prize, because it is of greater value than the Columbia Grafonola which is valued at $125 and will be given as fourth prize.

The Reporter, being unable to secure a first class set for $100, decided to go the limit and get the best that money could buy, and bought of Matthews Electric Company, Birmingham, a Kennedy 3-tube set, which is a combination of rare beauty and perfection.

Matthews Electric Co. leads all others in selling the best raido supplies on the market, and has grown to be the recognized leader of all Birmingham dealers.

This set arrived last week, and is equipped with batteries, headphones, tubes, etc., everything needed. This set will be sure to please. Can be seen at any time at the Reporter office.

All other prizes are on display at dealers from whom the Reporter purchased and will be gladly shown anyone interested.

Odd Tahiti Rite

The rite of fire-walking in Tahiti as practiced by the priests is explained as follows: The stones used are basalt, of volcanic origin, porous and nonconductive. A stone, heated red-hot at one end remains comparatively cool at the other. Because of this fact the native priests and their acolytes may with impunity walk over the surface of the glowing rocks.

Curious Bowlder

A tremendous bowlder, weighing some 17 tons and perched upon a flat rock, apparently so nicely balanced that a glance at it almost convinces a person that but little force is needed to throw it over, is to be seen in the Berkshire hills of Massachusetts, not far from Pittsfield. It is called the "Balance Rock," but, despite its name and appearance, is firmly fixed and makes no movement whatever.

Church Designs Studied

Modern religious thought and new economic conditions are bringing about a demand for a change in church conditions and as a result several of the leading denominations have named a special committee to study designs best suited for small or medium-sized congregations. The object is to find the economic value, if possible, in a more liberalized church architecture.

Americus, Ga.—Mrs. Cornelia H. Clopton, who lives near here, is 84 years old, but keeps house for herself and has active charge of the management of her farm. She is the widow of Dr. Thomas Clopton, who fought with the Virginia militia in the War of 1812, and she draws a pension from the government for that reason.

Mrs. Clopton, according to her statement, has had a long experience with Black-Draught.

"I have been taking Black-Draught constantly for the last two years," says Mrs. Clopton, "and I find that it is the best relief for constipation that I can use.

"For over twenty years I have known about this splendid medicine. A neighbor of mine recommended it to me that long ago and I have taken it when I needed anything of the kind ever since.

"For the last two or three years I have been troubled frequently with constipation and . . . complaints and, when these troubles come on, I take Black-Draught. I keep a box of Black-Draught always in the house. We are never without it."

Millions use Black-Draught. If your supply is running low, get more from your druggist today.

Lesson for April 20

ELISHA: TEACHER AND STATESMAN

LESSON TEXT—II Kings 6:15-23.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with Good."—Rom. 12:21.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Caring for Elisha.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Elisha's Goodness to His Enemies.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Turn Enemies Into Friends.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Elisha Meant to His Nation.

I. Elisha, Elijah's Successor (I Kings 19:15-21; II Kings 2:2-15.)

1. His Anointing (I Kings 19:15-21). In obedience to the Lord's command, Elijah went forth from his hiding place in Horeb to anoint Elisha as prophet. While Elisha was plowing with oxen Elijah passed by and cast his mantle upon him.

2. His Training (II Kings 2:2-8). Elisha came into the life of Elijah in the field, where he called him forth from the plow, and there was thenceforth real friendship between them, such that Elisha clung to his master to the very last, in spite of three urgent requests for him to remain behind.

3. Elisha's Double Portion (II Kings 2:12-15).

(1) Elisha's cry (v. 12). "The chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof." This implies that Elijah was the true national defense.

(2) Elisha takes his place (v. 13). The taking of Elijah's mantle indicates his assumption of his place as a prophet.

(3) Elijah's spirit upon Elisha (vv. 14, 15). This is proven by the use of his power to divide the Jordan. Also it is proven by the testimony of the sons of the prophets.

II. Elisha's Ministry (II Kings 3:10).

1. The Trenches Filled With Water (Chap. 3:16-20). Jehoram, in alliance with the king of Judah, went against the Moabites. His army was in great straits for lack of water. When they appealed to Elisha, he bade them show their faith by digging trenches in desert soil. The Lord sent water to fill the trenches.

2. Increase of the Widow's Oil (Chap. 4:1-7). This woman's husband had died, leaving a debt, and the creditor was about to make bondmen of her two sons. Elisha caused the scant supply of the widow's oil to be so increased that she sold enough to pay the debt.

3. The Shunamite's Son Restored (Chap. 4:8-37). Because of hospitality shown Elisha, he sought to help his hostess by promising that the Lord would give her a child. The joy brought by the fulfillment of the prophet's announcement was short-lived, for while yet but a lad he was taken away by death. In her sorrow she went to Elisha and he restored the child's life.

4. Heals Deadly Pottage (Chap. 4:38-41). In time of famine they made a vegetable soup from whatever growing plants they could find. By mistake a poisonous plant had been gathered. By putting meal into the pot, the soup was made healthful.

5. Fed One Hundred Men (Chap 4:42-44). To the astonishment of his attendant, he fed one hundred men with twenty barley cakes and a sack of uncooked grain.

6. He Healed Naaman, the Leper (Chap. 5:1-19). At the instance of a captive Jewish maid, Naaman, the great Syrian general, was brought into touch with Elisha. Without even coming to see Naaman Elisha, through his servant, bade him dip seven times in the Jordan. He obeyed and was instantly healed.

7. Recovers the Lost Axe (Chap. 6:1-7). While the sons of the prophets were cutting timber to enlarge their quarters, the head of a borrowed axe flew from the handle and was lost in the muddy waters. When shown the place Elisha cast a stick into the water and the axe floated to the surface.

III. Elisha's Heavenly Defenders (II Kings 6:8-23).

This shows the secret of Elisha's power.

1. The Syrian King Sorely Troubled (vv. 8-12). The king directing warfare against Israel. He located camps so as to intercept Israel's army. Through Elisha God made known the enemy's movements (v. 9).

2. The Syrian King Tries to Trap Elisha, but, though surrounded by the Syrian army, a mightier host of heavenly defenders were round about him.

3. The Syrian Army Trapped. Elisha led the Syrian army into Samaria. He ordered that they should be fed and sent back to their land.

He Came to Save Sinners

When a prominent man dies, we are anxious to get his last words and acts. The last act of the Son of God was to save a sinner. That was a part of the glory of His death. He commenced His ministry by saving sinners, and ended it by saving this poor thief.—D. L. Moody.

Inexcusable

Most people will excuse anything quicker than an apology.—Christian Herald.

AFTER AN OPERATION

Mrs. Wilke Couldn't Get Back Her Strength Until She Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Rochester, Minnesota.—"I had a very serious operation and it seemed as if I could not get my health back after it. I suffered with pain almost constantly. My sister came to help take care of me, and she was taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nervousness and a run-down condition. She had me try some of it, and in a very few days' time I began to feel better. In two weeks I hardly knew myself and after taking a couple of bottles more I was up and helping around, and now I am strong and healthy again and am still taking it. It is a pleasure for me to write this to you, and I hope that many other women who are suffering like I was will find out about your medicine. I will give any information I possibly can."—Mrs. JAMES WILKE, 933 E. Center Street, Rochester, Minn.

Remember, the Vegetable Compound has a record of fifty years of service and thousands of women praise its merit, as does Mrs. Wilke.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn Mass.

Odd Superstition

An old superstition in Iceland is that every bride must invite all her friends to a dinner in her own home, and every article of food must be prepared by the bride herself. If she is successful in pleasing her guests she not only receives praise for her own skill, but helps along her younger sisters, who are then assumed to be equally good at cooking, and consequently have a much better chance of getting married.

Tricked

Getting the idea from seeing a vaudeville performer swallow swords, Jacob Zienke, of Chicago, bought ten butcher knives and essayed to swallow them one by one. One was enough. It stuck. "I'll bet there's a trick to it," Zienke wrote on a pad for one of the hospital nurses.

In love we often doubt what we most believe.

X-Rays Made by Glowworms

That properties peculiar to X-rays may be contained in the light emitted by glowworms is the opinion of some scientists, expressed in recent interviews. A Japanese has experimented with three hundred of the worms and their rays, filtered through cardboard and copper plates, were said to have shown elements closely resembling those given off by various radio-active minerals.—Popular Mechanics.

Advertising Pays

John Romer, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., advertised for a calf that had been lost, strayed or stolen. The following morning he received a letter saying that the writer did not steal his calf, but had stolen $10 from him ten years ago. A $10 note was inclosed. While Romer went about town telling the story to his friends, some one slipped into his barn and returned the calf.

Organ of Bamboo

A bamboo organ in the Catholic church of Los Pinas, near Manila, Philippine Islands, was built about 1818 by a Spanish priest, who used more than 900 lengths of bamboo in the construction. Every part is of bamboo and the organ is still used every week by the Belgian priest in charge.

Uncle Joe DeShazo Passes

Montevallo, Alabama April 10.—Montevallo was shocked this morning when it learned that Joseph R. DeShazo, age 75, known to everybody as "Uncle Joe" had passed away at 2 a. m. He was probably one of the most popular citizens of Montevallo, and had ever been most faithful in the discharge of his duties. For many years, he was in charge of the pump for Alabama College. President Palmer states that during his long term of service he was never off duty but always kept everything in perfect order. That feature of the school's work never caused any trouble or concern for the higher authorities.

He is survived by one son, Arthur DeShazo, of Lewisburg, Ala., by one brother, Albert D. DeShazo, by a nephew, George DeShazo, and two nieces, Mrs. W. A. Hooper and Mrs. Mary McLaughlin, all of Montevallo.

He had been ill for a month, but not until yesterday did anyone consider his condition serious. He will be buried in the Montevallo cemetery, the services being conducted by Rev. P. H. Carmichael, of the Presbyterian church.

SILURIA

Buck Creek Baseball Team opened its season in Garnaey Saturday with a 2-0 win. George Clopton for Buck Creek pitched well in the pinches and was well supported by his infield. Only one man reached third and two second on him. Three double plays from Cary to Harper to Ball and one from Scott to Harper aided in keeping men from scoring positions. Both pitchers were wild, Clopton hitting two and waiking two. Searles for Garnsey, thougn allowed only two clean hits, one single and other a double, both by Edwards, was the cause of his own downfall.

Thorsby Institute came up on Monday for a game of ball. They brought nine players and all the rain in Chilton county. The clay infield soon looked more like a brick yard than a diamond. We had the game anyway. A few hits several bases on balls, many, many more wild throws, all added together, finally resulted in a local victory 14-15.

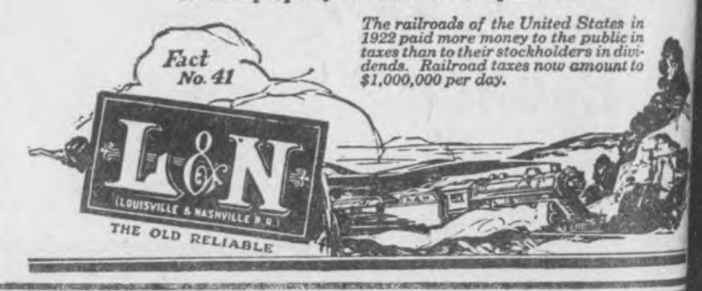
L&N Taxes Greater Than Dividends

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad's tax bill for the year 1923 amounted to $6,372,310, or nine per cent more than was paid in dividends to the stockholders of the Railroad who assume all risk and responsibility for the Road's operation.

The L. & N. is called upon each year to make an increasingly-heavy payment of taxes to the Federal, State, County and City treasuries throughout the thirteen states in which it operates. Taxes per mile in 1913 were $365; in 1923 they were $1,265, an increase of 246 per cent. The investment in L. & N. property in the meantime increased 56 per cent.

The Railroads pay taxes to maintain the government, improve the roads, provide schools and other public institutions, and for varied other purposes; in order to make the country a better place in which to live. It is apparent therefore that the payment of taxes by the railroads redounds tremendously to the public interest.

The L. & N. is always agreeable to the payment of its just proportion of taxes, yet it is manifest that it, and the other railroads of the country cannot bear their proper share of such tax burdens and at the same time effect desirable improvements and additions except they be permitted to earn a reasonable return upon the value of their property devoted to transportation service.



The railroads of the United States in 1922 paid more money to the public in taxes than to their stockholders in dividends. Railroad taxes now amount to $1,000,000 per day.

"What kind of a proposition did that man Hofmeister make you?" he inquired. "He asked me about you, and I told him you're a crackerjack."

"I'm much obliged," replied Jim.

"No use in back-cappin' a fellow that's tryin' to make somethin' of himself," said Bonner. "That ain't good politics, nor good sense. Anything to him?"

"He offered me a salary of seventy-five dollars a month to take charge of his school," said Jim.

"Well," said Con, "we'll be sorry to lose yeh, but you can't turn down anything like that."

"I don't know," said Jim. "I haven't decided."

Bonner scrutinized his face sharply, as if to find out what sort of game he was playing.

"Well," said he, at last, "I hope you can stay with us, o' course. I'm licked, and I never squeal. If the rist of the district can stand your kind of thricks, I can. And say, Jim"—here he grew still more mysterious—"if you do stay, some of us would like to have you be enough of a Democrat to go into the next convention f'r county superintendent."

"Why," replied Jim, "I never thought of such a thing!"

"Well, think of it," said Con. "The county's close, and wid a pop'lar young educator—an' a farmer, too, it might be done. Think of it."

Jim was almost dazed at the number of "propositions" of which he was now required to "think"—and Bonner's did not at first impress him as having anything back of it but blarney. He was to find out later, however, that the wily Con had made up his mind that the ambition of Jim to serve the rural schools in a larger sphere might be used for the purpose of bringing to earth what he regarded as the soaring political ambitions of the Woodruff family. To split the forces which had defeated Mr. Bonner in his own school district, with the very instrument used by the colonel at the last school election—that, to Mr. Bonner, would be a fine thing.

Jim had scarcely taken his seat in the car, facing Jennie Woodruff and Bettina Hansen in the Pullman, when Columbus Brown, pathmaster of the road district and only across the way from residence in the school district, came down the aisle and called Jim to the smoking-room.

"Did an old fellow named Hoffman from Pottawatomie county ask you to leave us and take his school?" he asked.

"Mr. Hofmyer," said Jim, "—yes, he did."

"Well," said Columbus, "I don't want to ask you to stand in your own light, but I hope you won't let him toll you off there among strangers. We're proud of you, Jim, and we don't want to lose you."

Proud of him! Sweet music to the underling's ears! Jim blushed and stammered.

"The fact is," said Columbus, "I know that Woodruff district job hain't big enough for you any more; but we can make it bigger. If you'll stay, I believe we can pull off a deal to consolidate some of them districts, and make you boss of the whole shooting match."

"I appreciate this, Clumb," said Jim, "but I don't believe you can do it."

"Well, think of it," said Columbus. "And don't do anything till you talk with me and a few of the other boys."

"Think of it" again!

A fine home-coming it was for Jim, with the colonel waiting at the station with a double sleigh, and the chance to ride into the snowy country in the same seat with Jennie—a chance which was blighted by the colonel's placing Bettina and Nils Hansen in the broad rear seat, and Jim in front with himself. The colonel would not allow him to get out and walk when he could really have reached home more quickly by doing so; no, he set the Hansens down at their door, took Jennie home, and then drove the lightened sleigh merrily to the humble cabin of the rather excited young schoolmaster.

"Did you make any deal with those people down in the western part of the state?" asked the colonel. "Jennie wrote me that you've got an offer."

"No," said Jim, and he told the colonel about the proposal of Mr. Hofmyer.

"Well," said the colonel, "in my capacity of wild-eyed reformer, I've made up my mind that the first four miles in the trip is to make the rural teacher's job a bigger job. It's got to be a man's size, woman's size job, or we can't get real men and real women to stay in the work."

"I think that's a statesmanlike formulation of it," said Jim.

"Well," said the colonel, "don't turn down the Pottawatomie county job until we have a chance to see what we can do. I'll get some kind of a meeting together, and what I want you to do is to use this offer as a club over this helpless school district. What we need is to be held up. Do the Jesse James act, Jim!"

"I can't, Colonel!"

"Yes, you can, too. Will you try it?"

"I want to treat everybody fairly," said Jim, "including Mr. Hofmyer. I don't know what to do, hardly."

"Well, I'll get the meeting together," said the colonel, "and in the meantime, think of what I've said."

Another thing to think of! Jim rushed into the house and surprised his mother, who had expected him to arrive after a slow walk from town through the snow. Jim caught her in his arms, from which she was released a moment later, quite flustered and blushing.

"Why, James," said she, "you seem excited. What's happened?"

"Nothing, mother" he replied, "except that I believe there's just a possibility of my being a success in the world!"

"My boy, my boy!" said she, laying her hand on his arm, "if you were to die tonight, you'd die the greatest success any boy ever was—if your mother is any judge."

Jim kissed her, and went up to his attic to change his clothes. Inside the waistcoat was a worn envelope, which he carefully opened, and took from it a letter much creased from many foldings. It was the old letter from Jennie, written when the comical mistake had been made of making him the teacher of the Woodruff school. He read only the sentence in which Jennie had told of her father's interest in Jim's success, ending with the underscored words, "I'm for you, too."

"I wonder," said Jim, as he went out to do the evening's tasks, "I wonder if she is for me!"

CHAPTER XVIII

Old Man Simms Speaks.

Young McGeehee Simms was loitering along the snowy way to the schoolhouse bearing a brightly scoured tin pail two-thirds full of water. He had been allowed to act as water superintendent of the Woodruff school as a reward of merit—said merit being an essay on which he received credit in both language and geography on "Harvesting Wheat in the Tennessee Mountains." This had been of vast interest to the school in view of the fact that the Simmses were the only pupils in the school who had ever seen in use that supposedly-obsolete harvesting implement, the cradle. Buddy's essay had been passed over to the class in United States history as the evidence of an eyewitness concerning farming conditions in our grandfathers' times.

The surnameless Pete, Colonel Woodruff's hired man, halted Buddy at the door.

"Mr. Simms, I believe?" he said.

"I reckon you must be lookin' for my brother, Raymond, suh," said Buddy.

"I am a-lookin'," said Pete impressively, "for Mr. McGeehee Simms."

"That's me," said Buddy, "but I hain't been doin' nothin' wrong, suh!"

"I have a message here," said Pete, "for Professor James E. Irwin. He's what-ho within, there, ain't he?"

"He's inside, I reckon," said Buddy.

"Then will you be so kind and condescendin' as to stoop so low as to jump so high as to give him this letter?" asked Pete.

Buddy took the letter and was considering of his reply to this remarkable speech, when Pete, gravely saluting, passed on, rather congratulating himself on having staged a very good burlesque of the dignified manners of those queer mountaineers, the Simmses.

The note was from the colonel:

"Please come to the meeting tonight, and when you come, come prepared to hold the district up. If we can't meet the Pottawatomie county standard of wages, we ought to lose you. Everybody in the district will be there. Come late, so you won't hear yourself talked about—I should recommend nine-thirty and war-paint."

It was a crisis, no doubt of that; and the responsibility of the situation rather sickened Jim of the task of teaching. Only one thing kept him from dodging the whole issue and remaining at home—the colonel's matter-of-fact assumption that Jim had become master of the situation. How could he flee, when this old soldier was fighting so valiantly for him in the trenches? So Jim went to the meeting.

How could he impose conditions on the whole school district? How could the colonel expect such a thing of him? And how could anyone look for anything but scorn for the upstart field-hand from these men who had for so many years made him the butt of their good-natured but none the less contemptuous ridicule? Who was he, anyway, to lay down rules for these substantial and successful men—he who had been for all the years of his life at their command, subservient to their demands for labor—their underling?

The season was nearing spring, and it was a mild thawy night. The windows of the schoolhouse were filled with heads, evidencing the presence of a crowd of almost unprecedented size, and the sashes had been thrown up for ventilation and coolness. As Jim climbed the back fence of the schoolyard, he heard a burst of applause, from which he judged that some speaker had just finished his remarks. There was silence when he came alongside the window at the right of the chairman's desk, a silence broken by the voice of Old Man Simms, saying "Mistah Chairman!"

"The chair," said the voice of Ezra Bronson, "recognizes Mr. Simms."

Jim halted in indecision. He was not expected while the debate was in progress. There is no rule of manners or morals, however, forbidding eavesdropping during the proceedings of a public meeting. Therefore he listened to the first and last public speech of Old Man Simms.

"Ah ain't no speaker," said Old Man Simms, "but Ah cain't set here and be quiet an' go home an' face my ole woman an' my boys an' gyuhls withouten sayin' a word fo' the best friend any family evah had, Mr. Jim Irwin." (Applause.) Maybe Ah'll be thought forrard to speak hyah, bein' as Ah ain't no learnin' an' some may think Ah don't pay no taxes; but seein' as how we've took the Blanchard farm, a hundred an' sixty acres, for five yeahs, an' move in a week from Sat'day, we pay taxes in our rent, Ah reckon, an' howsomever that may be, Ah've come to feel that you-all won't think hard of me if Ah speak what we-uns feel so strong about Mr. Jim Irwin?"

Old Man Simms finished this exordium with the rising inflection, which denoted a direct question as to his status in the meeting. "Go on!" "You've got as good a right as any one!" "You're all right, old man!" Such exclamations as these came to Jim's ears with scarcely less gratefulness than to those of Old Man Simms—who stammered and went on.

"Ah thank you-all kindly, Gentlemen an' ladies, when Mr. Jim Irwin found us, we was scandalous pore, an' we was wuss'n pore—we was low-down." (Cries of "No—No!")

"Yes, we was, becuz when a man gets in a new place, he's got to lift himse'f up to what folks does where he's come to, or he'll make a place fer himse'f lower'n anybody else. In the mountings we was good people, becuz we done the best we could an' the best any one done; but hyah, we was low-down people becuz we hated the people that had mo' learnin', mo' land, mo' money, an' mo' friends than what we had. My little gyuhls wasn't respectable in their clothes. My children was igernant, an' triflin', but I was the most triflin' of all. Ah'll leave it to Colonel Woodruff if I was good fer a plug of terbacker, or a bakin' of flour at any sto' in the county. Was I, Colonel? Wasn't I perfectly wuthless an' triflin'?"

There was a ripple of laughter, in the midst of which the colonel's voice was heard saying, "I guess you were, Mr. Simms, I guess you were, but——"

"Thankee," said Old Man Simms, as if the colonel had given a really valuable testimonial to his character. "I sho' was! Thankee kindly! An' now, what am I good fer? Cain't I get anything I want at the stores? Cain't I git a little money at the bank, if I got to have it?"

"You're just as good as any man in the district," said the colonel. "You don't ask for more than you can pay, and you can get all you ask."

"Thankee," said Mr. Simms gravely. "What Ah tell you-all is right, ladies and gentlemen. An' what has made the change in we-uns, ladies and gentlemen? It's the wuk of Mr. Jim Irwin with my boy Raymond, the best boy any man evah hed, and my gyuhl, Calista, an' Buddy, an' Jinnie, an' with me an' my ole woman.

"He showed us how to get a toe-holt into this new kentry. He teached the children what orto be did by a rentin' farmer in Ioway. He done lifted us up, an' made people of us. He done showed us that you-all is good people, an' not what we thought you was. Outen what he learned in school, my boy Raymond an' me made as good crops as we could last summer, an' done right much wuk outside. We got the name of bein' good farmers an' good wukkers, an' when Mr. Blanchard moved to town, he said he was glad to give us his fine farm for five years.

"Now, see what Mr. Jim Irwin has done for a pack o' outlaws and outcasts. Instid o' hidin' out from the Hobdays that was laywayin' us in the mountings, we'll be livin' in a house with two chimleys an' a swimmin' tub made outen crock-ryware. We'll be in debt a whole lot—an' we owe it to Mr. Jim Irwin that we got the credit to git in debt with, an' the courage to go on and git out agin!" (Applause.)

"Ah could affo'd to pay Mr. Jim Irwin's salary myse'f, if Ah could. An' there's enough men hyah tonight that say they've been money-he'ped by his teachin' the school to make up mo' than his wages. Let's not let Mr. Jim Irwin go, neighbors! Let's not let him go!"

Jim's heart warmed. "There isn't a man in that meeting," said he to himself, as he walked to the schoolhouse door, "possessed of the greatness of spirit of Old Man Simms. If he's a fair sample of the people of the mountains, they are of the stuff of which great nations are made—if they only are given a chance.

Modern Destruction.

"If there should be another war," remarked the military expert, 'It won't last long."

"No," rejoined Senator Sorghum. "Neither will anything nor anybody else."—Washington Star.

Can You Do It?

Fame is fleeting, just how fleeting is shown by the fact that for the life of us we can't remember what half the men did to get cigars named after them.

A FEELING OF SECURITY WHEN YOU USE SWAMP-ROOT

You naturally feel secure when you know that the medicine you are about to take is absolutely pure and contains no harmful or habit-producing drugs.

Such a medicine is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

The same standard of purity, strength and excellence is maintained in every bottle of Swamp-Root.

It is scientifically compounded from vegetable herbs.

It is not a stimulant and is taken in teaspoonful doses.

It is not recommended for everything.

It is nature's great helper in relieving and overcoming kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

A sworn statement of purity is with every bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

If you need a medicine, you should have the best. On sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to try this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Foiled Milk Thief

Lige Dodd, farmer, of Ouachita township, Ark., had a cow that was off in her milking. Investigation revealed fresh footprints in the vicinity of the cow barn each morning. Dodd switched a particularly disagreeable mule to the stall, transferring the cow to the mule's stable in the barn. The cow milked well the next morning and Dodd recovered a battered tin pail and a torn hat from the stall occupied by the mule.

Origin of Sodas

It is not definitely recorded just who first suggested ice cream sodas in their present form. Snow-cooled beverages were known to the Jews, ancient Greeks and Romans. It is recorded that in Rome a certain Quintus Maximus Gurgus, nicknamed the Glutton, wrote a recipe for a similar preparation in one of his books.

Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills contain only vegetable ingredients which act as a gentle purgative. 372 Pearl St., N. Y. Adv.

Mighty Waves Seen

Waves of extraordinary height, miscalled "tidal waves," are sometimes encountered at sea or along the coasts. They are due either to earthquakes under the sea or to a combination of several ordinary waves, which if a heavy sea be running, is sufficient to account for a wave of unusual height. Such a one was recently encountered by the British steamship Maine, near the southern edge of the Grand Banks of Newfoundland. The wind was rising after a hard blow and an ugly swell about 25 feet high was running. Then a huge wave was seen towering above the other seas, a mile away, and rushing toward the ship. It swept the vessel from end to end, and was estimated by the officers to have been from 50 to 60 feet in height.—Boston Globe.

OUR

CANDIDATES' COLUMN

Conducted By

B. O. BOWERS, Campaign Manager.

Campaign members residing in the rural districts or nearby towns should mail their re ports each day as they collect for subscriptions, using a bank draft of money order.

All reports should be addressed to B. O. Bowers, Campaign Manager, Box 22, Columbiana, Alabama.

Receipt books, report blanks, envelopes, sample copies of the Reporter, etc., can be secured any time by writing to the campaign manager for them, or by calling at office and getting them.

Candidates wishing to have their photographs printed in the Reporter will please send in a good kodak picture, or a photo, to the campaign manager, together with an appeal to your friends for their support, the article not to exceed over fifty words. No charge will be made for this service, as we aim to co-operate with candidates to the fullest extent.

HOW YOU CAN GET A MILLION VOTES

Here's an example of how easy it is to get over a MILLION votes in this campaign.

40,000 votes are allowed on each 5-year subscription to the Shelby County Reporter, provided the same is turned in before the close of the first period, April 19.

20 5-year subscriptions, amounting to $150 in business, would entitle you to 800,000 REGULAR VOTES. And according to the rules of issuing 50,000 EXTRA Votes for every club of $20 turned in, ($150 constitutes over six clubs) you would be entitled to 300,000 extra votes. This number added to the 800,000 Regular Votes makes a grand total of 1,100,000 votes for just 20 5-year subscriptions to the Shelby County Reporter.

Therefore the 20 5-year orders, or the equivalent in shorter term orders, would mena over a MILLION votes. Easy enough, isn't it? Haven't you 20 friends who would help you to the extent of a 5-year subscription to the Shelby County Reporter toward winning that luxurous four-door Sedan, valued at $800.00? Of course you have. See them now.

CANDIDATES, KEEP THIS INFORMATION IN MIND REGARDING ENDING OF FIRST PERIOD

That all subscriptions that you expect to get big votes for must be turned in before 10 o'clock Saturday night, or mailed on Saturday, to reach this office not later than Monday.

That with every $20.00 "club" turned in you receive 50,000 EXTRA votes. This is the way you get the MOST of your votes.

That we are giving $20.00 in gold to the candidate who turns in the most 5-year subscriptions up to the close of the First Period. "Points" will decide the winner of this $20.00 gold piece. In addition to votes being issued for subscriptions, to apply on winning the automobiles, we are offering extra and separate from the regular list of prizes the $20.00 in gold to be won by "points." Points are issued for subscriptions as follows:

One 1-year subscription	1 point
One 2-yr. subscription	10 points
One 3-yr. subscription	50 points
One 4-yr. subscription	200 points
One 5-yr. subscription	5,000 points

Whoever wins this $20.00 will to a great extent have the grand prize won as every 5-year subscription will give a candidate 40,000 votes; whereas a 1-year subscription will only amount to 1,500 votes, a diference of 38,500 votes. This is true during the first period only, for the reason that the votes will be reduced nearly one half after Saturday. Who will win this $20.00? The answer: An enterprising candidate who has the foresight and realization that it means winning one of the automobiles, too.

That you must not allow yourself to be "bluffed" by propaganda that is being spread by people who would like to demoralize your chance to win. Some candidates have been in the habit of getting together and comparing their votes. This will prove disastrous to them in the end. It is the candidate who says NOTHING and keeps digging that is getting the most votes, if you want to know While some are comparing votes, others are "making hay while the sunshine."

That every time you get a subscription from a person who has taken the paper before, during the campaign, regardless of the candidate who secured the subscription the first time, you get the credit in votes for two years, which would be 6,500 votes for the subscription, or would be 38,000 if you succeed in getting the subscription for four more years. Study this a minute or two, and you will see how you can better your chances to win first prize greatly.

That regardless of where you live, or how far from Columbiana you are, your report will receive the same careful and impartial attention as it would were you to bring it in personally. Everybody receives the same courtesy and fair treatment.

The Kennedy Radio Set has been changed to third prize, on account of its greater value than the Columbia Grafonola. We intended to give a set valued at $100 but failed to secure the kind we wanted for that amount, so we purchased a set valued at $135.00 from the Matthews Electric Co., Birmingham. The Columbia Grafonola will be fourth prize. See ad. in this paper for description of prizes.

Just a little over three weeks remain to win or lose that Ford Sedan. Some are just beginning to realize how short the duration of this campaign really is. Every hour puts each candidate nearer the glory of supreme victory, according to their individual efforts.

Votes once issued cannot be transferred to another candidate. There seems to have been some misunderstanding about this. Rule 5 of the contest clearly states that votes cannot be purchased from any source. They must be secured in the regular way—that of clipping the coupons in the Reporter each week, and turning in subscriptions to the Reporter.

COND PERIOD IS NOW IN FULL FORCE: ANOTHER BIG DROP IN VOTES MAY 3RD

otes Issued for Sale of Advertising and Job Printing Cards. Look for Schedule in Page Ad.

The next vote count will be Saturday night, April 26th, at 9 o'ck. All members MUST report ce each week—Tuesdays and urdays.

t seems a matter of impossibil- for any individual candidate remain at the top of the list for length of time, for just as as some hustling candidate b to the top, another enterpris- candidate comes along and unances him, and right now it's ting to be a serious question in ir minds, as to who will lead the few more counts that will made during the remainder of campaign, and MOST OF ALL, will lead at the final count on 10th.

he first period of the Shelby nty Reporter's $2,700.00 Salesnship Club Campaign closed last Saturday night. To say it a success would be placing it mild terms. Club members bened so equally, however, that ultimate winner is as much doubt as ever. It will take the nd period to determine this t, and the second period is in full force.

RACE IS GROWING HOT

ny doubt as to the closeness t has been proven that there t has bee proven that there a bunch of hustlers who do stand back on formalities, but h right into the fray and get t is coming to them.

he race, so far, has been a rekable one, hence the struggle supremacy will be fought out ing the Second period, which minates Saturday, May 3rd. Int in the campaign runs high strong. This is not idle boast- and it is not confined to Shelcounty alone, either, but it has hed out until there are hunds, yes, thousands, of eager and hing friends from all sections he country and adjoining sec- who are waiting the final ome with abated breath.

OTES FOR ADVERTISING

will be noted in the big adsement today, and as was anced at the beginning of the aign, votes will be awarded he sale of advertising and printing cards, the schedule hich will be found in the big advertisement today.

ese cards which will be sold he candidates, are in denomins of $10 each, and will be up to and including May 10. They are good for either job ting or advertising at the of- f the Shelby County Reporter. e cards are not good for payts on accounts at this office rred prior to March 27th, the ing day of the campaign.

IME TO MAKE DUST FLY

ow is the time for those who contending for the $800.00 Sedan to make the dust fly. s better to do your very level and win than to do a little ess than your best and lose an .00 automobile by a nose.

ess than three short weeks re- before the campaign comes to ose, so it is simply a case of W or NEVER, and the golden ortunity is still open to all e.

SCRIPTIONS STILL COUNT BIG

During the Second Period up to and including Saturday, May 3rd, subscriptions will count pretty big, in fact, they count for almost as many votes now as during the First Period just closed. For example, one 5-year subscription now counts for 30,000 votes, but 50,000 EXTRA VOTES are still issued for each $20.00 club. Ten 5-year subscriptions would make 300,000 regular votes, and the three $20.00 clubs that you receive would make 150,000 EXTRA votes This added to the regular votes would make a grand total of 450,000 votes now, as against 550,000 during the first period for the same amount of business—the small difference of 100,000 votes.

A WHIRL WIND FINISH

All indications point to a whirlwind finish. Sensations and surprises will follow, one after another. The "gameness" and resourcefulness of the different candidates will be put to a test during the remaining days of the campaign as never before. Here is where the remaining days of the campaign as never before. Here is where courage upholds them and makes them fight, or the lack of it takes the stiffness out of their knees, and leaves them trailing in the dust—"also rans." Sometimes, too, supreme courages urges them on, when they are tired and discouraged, and that is the GAMEST FIGHT OF ALL.

The annual Memorial Service will be held at Fourmile on the first Saturday in May. A number of good speakers will have part on the program. Everybody invited to come and bring a well-filled basket and enjoy the day together

$20 Gold Piece Won By Miss Nell Isbell

Miss Nelle Isbell, of Columbiana, was the winner of the First Period extra effort offer. She was presented with the $20.00 on Monday morning, as advertised.

This additional prize was placed on the list as an inducement to candidates to get a few five-year subscriptions, as they count big for all parties concerned.

The winner wes decided by the respective "points" they had acquired during the last two weeks of the First Period. Miss Isbell won over candidate in second place by a very small majority. However, this did not put her in the lead, but it did boost her to second place.

This $20 is only a gentle portion of what is to come on May 10th to the real live and hustling candidate. It only represents about 1-125th of the amount of the grand prize list.

Your friends are watching you now, candidates, and if you fail to "bring home the bacon" you will disappoint them bitterly, as well as yourself. Now, re-double your efforts from now on and pile up the votes so high that no one can overpower you.

The other contestants were: Miss Clyde Merreli of Cleburne County High School and Ezra Crumpton of Shelby High. FOUR BIG STILLS TAKEN LAST WEEK

State, county and federal officers are still at work in their efforts to curb the violation of the laws in Shelby county. On Saturday of last week Federal Officers Adkins and Gillespie, State Officers Baker, Thompson, and Gardner, and County Officers Godwin and Warnick staged a raid in Beat 5, capturing two 450 gallon stills in full operation. The two stills were connected together. The officers destroyed 2000 gallons of beer and 27½ gallons of liquor. Wess Williams was placed under arrest; Will Benton and Odom Benton escaped.

Near the scene of the first raid the officers destroyed a 300 gallon still and 1100 gallons of beer. Two men were arrested. Lee Jordan for violating prohibition law and A. M. Jordan for interfering with officers while in the discharge of duty.

On Sunday Officer Gardner and Deputy Fallon raided Will England's road house on the Birmingham highway, found 1 gallon of liquor and arrested Will Williams for violating prohibition laws.

On April 17, Officers Adkins, Falkner, Coshatt, Fallon and Gardner captured a 400 gallon box still in Double Oak Mountain and poured out 1000 gallons of beer. No arrests were made.

Moonshiners Must Serve Sentences

The supreme court last week affirmed the verdict of the Shelby circuit court in the case of Tom Brasher, who was convicted about one year ago of violating the prohibtion law and sentenced to a term of 4 to 5 years in the penitentiary. Brasher came in Monday to receive sentence. He is 79 years old.

Similar action of the supreme court was taken in the case of a negro Dorsey who at the same term was convicted for making liquor and sentenced to a term of 3 to 4 years in the penitentiary.

INSPIRING SERVICE FOR EASTER SUNDAY BY THE CHILDREN

The Easter exercises at the Baptist church Sunday morning by the Beginners, Primary and Junior departments of the Sunday school proved a most inspiring service. The church was beautifully decorated with spring flowers, and the children, having received careful training at the hands of their teachers, entered with the greatest enthusiasm into the giving of their parts. The program consisted of songs, such as little folks like to sing, and Bible readings and verses appropriate for Easter; much of which had been taught the children as a part of their regular work from Sunday to Sunday.

The teachers and officers who have charge of these departments are Mrs. W. J. Horsley, Mrs. Joel Chandler, Mrs. R. L. Durant, Mrs. L. B. Riddle, Miss Gertrude Bishop and Miss Catherine Parker.

At the close of the children's exercises a short talk was made by the pastor, Rev. R. L. Durant, commending the teachers for their faithful work and calling attention to the fact that the church is the only institution in all the land that attempts to give such training to the young people. He thanked the little folks for having "preached his Easter sermon" for him.

Circuit Court Is Continued to September

MILLION DOLLAR DRIVE FOR ALABAMA COLLEGE BEGINS IN SHELBY COUNTY

Plans are being rapidly perfected for putting Shelby county well over the top in the Alabama College Million Dollar Drive. The campaign in the state hinges to a large extent upon Shelby county. With the home county doubling its alloted quota of $20,000, is confidently expected, the campaign can be launched in the state with the brightest prospects for success. The slogan is Shelby county will be, "A Donation, Large or Small, from Every Citizen"

Even at this early stage in the campaign, the enthusiasm expressed has been remarkable. The students and faculty of the college have pledged over $15,000. The Exchange Clubs of Columbiana and Montevallo have passed resolutions endorsing the drive and pledging their hearty support. Every picture show in the county will cooperate by showing pictures bearing on the drive and allowing "three minute speakers" to speak between reels. Merchants in practically every town in the county have agreed to put on special sales and contribute a per cent of the receipts. Schools have offered time during their closing exercises and other public entertainments for speakers to briefly discuss the campaign. Citizens appointed on committees in the different communities have almost without exception expressed their willingness to serve. Expressions of approval and enthusiasm have been voiced from citizens in every part of the county.

The need for additional funds for Alabama College is great. The enrollment 1922-23 was 427 while this year, 1923-24, the enrollment is 657. The attendance this year overflowed housing conditions to such an extent that the citizens of Montevallo erected a temporary dormitory which takes care of 60 young ladies. The advance enrollment for next year at the present time exceeds the advance nerollment last summer just before opening. From present indications at least 300 worthy young woman will have to be denied admission next year. Can Alabama afford to deny a college education to 300 or more ambitions young women each year at its only state college for women? The people of Shelby county and the state say no!

The following stores will put on a special sale for the drive at an early date:

The Farmers Exchange, Columbiana.
Wilson Drug Company, Montevallo.
Joe Walker, Siluria,
W. E. Riddle, Wilsonville.

Four teams to solicit donations have been organized among the Shelby county students in the college with Miss Elsie Mahaffey, Miss Hattie Lyman, Miss Agnes Hardy, and Miss Elizabeth Horsley as captains of teams.

The following local committees have been appointed: Judge L. B. Riddle, county chairman.

COLUMBIANA: Mr. F. G. Koenig, Mrs. P. O. Luck, chairman; Mrs. D. S. Lightcap, Mrs. L. H. Ellis, Mr. H. A. Fowler.

NASH WON BY TUSCUMBIA SCHOOL GIRL

Read What Miss Huston, 17-year-old School Girl Has to Say Regarding Auto She Won in Contest

Tuscumbia, Ala., May 17, 1924.

The Colbert County Reporter, Tuscumbia, Ala.

Needless to say, I am the happiest girl alive today, since winning the beautiful Nash touring car you gave, and I want to express my grateful appreciation for the fair treatment you gave me. Especially do I wish to thank Mr. Bowers, the contest manager, for his sincere interest and help—not only to me but to all the candidates—during your campaign.

Although I worked very hard, I enjoyed every minute the campaign, and would not have missed it for anything in the world. I had no idea I could win first prize, as I was so deeply engrossed in my studies at school, but I determined to do the best I could; and the congratulations of my friends and the fact that I own one of the prettiest cars in town, makes it all seem like a dream, but when I get into the car I know it's real.

Again thanking the Reporter, and the campaign manager, for the fair treatment, and hoping that The Reporter will profit much by their increased circulation, I remain,

Gratefully yours,

(Signed) Miss Lucile Huston, Route 1.

CHAPTER XIX
—15—
A School District Held Up.

Colonel Woodruff was on his feet as Jim made his way through the crowd about the door.

"Mr. Irwin is here, ladies and gentlemen," said he, "and I move that we hear from him as to what we can do to meet the offer of our friends in Pottawatomie county; but before I yield the floor, I want to say that this meeting has been worth while just to have been the occasion of our all becoming better acquainted with our friend and neighbor, Mr. Simms. Whatever may have been the lack of understanding, on our part, of his qualities, they were all cleared up by that speech of his—the best I have ever heard in this neighborhood.

More applause, in the midst of which Old Man Simms slunk away down in his seat to escape observation. Then the chairman said that if there was no objection they would hear from their well-known citizen, whose growing fame was more remarkable for the fact that it had been gained as a country schoolmaster—he need not add that he referred to Mr. James E. Irwin. (More and louder applause.)

"Friends and neighbors," said Jim, "you ask me to say to you what I want you to do. I want you to do what you want to do—nothing more or less. Last year I was glad to be tolerated here; and the only change in the situation lies in the fact that I have another place offered me—unless there has been a change in your feelings toward me and my work. I hope there has been; for I know my work is good now, whereas I only believed it then."

"Sure it is!" shouted Con Bonner from a front seat, thus signalizing that astute wirepuller's definite choice of a place in the bandwagon. "Tell us what you want, Jim!"

"What do I want?" asked Jim. "More than anything else, I want such meetings as this—often—and a place to hold them. If I stay in the Woodruff District, I want this meeting to effect a permanent organization to work with me. I can't teach this district anything. Nobody can teach any one anything. All any teacher can do is to direct people's activities in teaching themselves. You are gathered here to decide what you'll do about the small matter of keeping me at work as your hired man.

"If I'm to be your hired man, I want a boss in the shape of a civic organization which will take in every man and woman in the district. Here's the place and now's the time to make that organization—an organization the object of which shall be to put the whole district at school, and to boss me in my work for the whole district."

"Dat sounds good," cried Haakon Peterson. "Ve'll do dat."

"Then I want you to work out a building scheme for the school," Jim went on. "We want a place where girls can learn to cook, keep house, take care of babies, sew, and learn to be wives and mothers. There's somebody right in this neighborhood able to teach anything the young people want to learn.

"And I want a physician here once in a while to examine the children as to their health, and a dentist to look after their teeth and teach them how to care for them. Also an oculist to examine their eyes. And when Bettina Hansen comes home from the hospital a trained nurse, I want her to have a job as visiting nurse right here in the Woodruff District.

"I want a counting-room for the keeping of the farm accounts and the record of our observation in farming. I want co-operation in letting us have these accounts.

"I want some manual training equipment for wood-working and metal working, and a blacksmith and wagon shop, in which the boys may learn to shoe horses, repair tools, design buildings, and practice the best agricultural engineering. I want to do work in poultry according to the most modern breeding discoveries, and I want your co-operation in that, and a poultry plant somewhere in the district.

"I want a laboratory in which we can work on seeds, pests, soils, feeds and the like. For the education of your children must come out of these things.

"I want these things because they are necessary if we are to get the culture out of life we should get—and nobody gets culture out of any sort of school—they get it out of life, or they don't get it at all.

"So I want you to build as freely for your school as for your cattle and horses and hogs.

"The school will make for you—this new kind of rural school—a social life which will be the social center, because it will be the educational center, and the business center of the countryside.

"I want all these things, and more. But I don't expect them all at once. I know that this district is too small to do all of them, and therefore, I want a bigger district—one that will give us the financial strength to carry out the program I have sketched. This may be a presumptuous thing for me to propose. If you think so, let me go. But if you don't, please keep this meeting together in a permanent organization of grownup members of the Woodruff school, and by pulling together, you can do these things—all of them—and many more—and you'll make the Woodruff District a good place to live in and die in—and I shall be proud to live and die in it at your service, as the neighborhood's hired man!"

As Jim sat down there was a hush in the crowded room, as if the people were dazed at his assurance. There was no applause, until Jennie Woodruff, now seen by Jim for the first time over next the blackboard, clapped her gloved hands together and started it; then it swept out through the windows in a storm. The dust rose from stamping feet until the kerosene lamps were dimmed by it. And as the noise subsided, Jim saw standing out in front the stooped form of B. B. Hamm, one of the most prosperous men in the district.

"Mr. Chairman—Ezra Bronson," he roared, "this feller's crazy, an' from the sound of things, you're all as crazy as he is. If this fool scheme of his goes through, my farm's for sale! I'll quit before I'm sold out for taxes!"

"Just a minute, B. B.!" interposed Colonel Woodruff. "This ain't as dangerous as you think. You don't want us to do all this in fifteen minutes, do you, Jim?"

"Oh, as to that," replied Jim, "I just wanted you to have in your minds what I have in my mind—and unless we can agree to work toward these things there's no use in my staying. But time—that's another matter. Believe with me, and I'll work with you."

"Get out of here!" said the colonel to Jim in an undertone, "and leave the rest to your friends."

Jim walked out of the room and took the way toward his home. A horse tied to the hitching-pole had his blanket under foot, and Jim replaced it on his back, patting him kindly and talking horse language to him. Then he went up and down the line of teams, readjusting blankets, tying loosened knots, and assuring himself that his neighbors' horses were securely tied and comfortable. He knew horses better than he knew people, he thought. If he could manage people as he could manage horses—but that would be wrong. Horse management was despotism; man-government must be like the government of a society of wild horses, the result of the common work of the members of the herd.

Two figures emerged from the schoolhouse door, and as he turned toward his home after his pastoral calls on the horses, they overtook him. They were the figures of Newton Bronson and the county superintendent of schools.

"Dad wants you back there again," said Newton.

"What for?" inquired Jim.

"You silly boy," said Jennie, "you talked about the good of the schools all of the time, and never said a word about your own salary! What do you want? They want to know?"

"Oh!" exclaimed Jim in the manner of one who suddenly remembers that he has forgotten his umbrella or his pocket-knife. "I forgot all about it. I haven't thought about that at all. Jennie!"

"Jim," said she, "you need a guardian!"

"I know it, Jennie," said he, "and I know who I want. I want—"

"Please come back," said Jennie, "and tell papa how much you're going to hold the district up for."

"You run back," said Jim to Newton, "and tell your father that whatever is right in the way of salary will be satisfactory to me. I leave that to the people."

Newton darted off, leaving the schoolmaster standing in the road with the county superintendent.

"I can't go back there!" said Jim.

"I'm proud of you, Jim," said Jennie. "This community has found its master. They can't do all you ask now, nor very soon; but finally they'll do just as you want them to do. And, Jim, I want to say that I've been the biggest little fool in the country!"

CHAPTER XX

Theory and Practice.

Superintendent Jennie sat at her desk in no very satisfactory frame of mind. In the first place the court was to convene on the following Monday, so that her one-room office was not to be hers for a few days. To Wilbur Smythe, who did her the honor of calling occasionally, she remarked that if they didn't soon build the new courthouse so as to give her such accommodations as her office really needed, "they might take their old office—so there!"

"Fair woman," said Wilbur, as he creased his Prince Albert in a parting bow, "should adorn the home!"

"Bosh!" sneered Jennie, rather pleased, all the same, "suppose she isn't fair, and hasn't any home!"

This question of adorning a home was no nearer settlement with Jennie than it had ever been, though increasingly a matter of speculation. There were two or three men—rather good catches, too—who, if they were encouraged—but what was there to any of them? This is what Jennie asked her paper-weight as she placed it on a pile of unfinished examination papers. And the paper-weight echoed, "not a thing out of the ordinary!" And then, said Jennie, "Well, you little simpleton, who and what are you so out of the ordinary that you should sneer at Wilbur Smythe and Beckman Fifield and such men?" And echo answered, "What?"—and then the mail-carrier came in.

Down near the bottom of the pile she found this letter, signed by a southern state superintendent of schools, but dated at Kirkville, Missouri:

"I am a member of a party of southern educators—state superintendents in the main—en tour of the country to see what we can find of an instructive nature in rural school work. Professor Withers of Ames suggests that we visit your schools, and especially the rural school taught by a young man named Irwin, and I wonder if you will be free on next Monday morning, if we come to your office, to direct us to the place? If you could accompany us on the trip, and perhaps show us some of your other excellent schools, we should be honored and pleased."

And then came the shock—a party of state officials were coming into the county to study Jim Irwin's school! They would never come to study Wilbur Smythe's law practice—never in the world—or her work as county superintendent—never!—and Jim was getting seventy-five dollars a month, and had a mother to support. But there could be no doubt that there was something to Jim—the man was out of the ordinary. And wasn't that just what she had been looking for in her mind?

Jennie wired to her southerner for the number of his party, and secured automobiles for the trip. She sent a note to Jim Irwin telling of the prospective visitation. She would show all concerned that she could do some things, anyhow, and she would send these people on with a good impression of her county.

She was glad of the automobiles the next Monday morning, when at nine-thirty the train discharged upon her a dozen very alert, very up-to-date, very inquisitive southerners, male and female, most of whom seemed to have left their "r's" in the gulf region. It was eleven when the party parked their machines before the schoolhouse door.

"There are visitors here before us," said Jennie.

"Seems rather like an educational shrine," said Doctor Brathwayt of Mississippi. "How does he accommodate so many visitors in that small edifice?"

"I am not aware," said Jennie, "that he has been in the habit of receiving so very many from outside the district. Well, shall we go in?"

Once inside, Jennie felt a queer return of her old aversion to Jim's methods—the aversion which had caused her to criticize him so sharply on the occasion of her first visit. The reason for the return of the feeling lay in the fact that the work going on was the same sort, but of a more intense character. It was so utterly unlike a school as Jennie understood the word, that she glanced back at the group of educators with a little blush. The school was in a sort of uproar. Not that uproar of boredom and mischief of which most of us have familiar memories, but a sort of eager uproar, in which every child was intensely interested in the same thing; and did little rustling things because of this interest; something like the hum at a football game or a dog-fight.

On one side of the desk stood Jim Irwin, and facing him was a smooth stranger of the old-fashioned lightning-rod-agent type—the shallower and laxer sort of salesman of the kind whose sole business is to get signatures on the dotted line, and let some one else do the rest. In short, he was a "closer."

Standing back of him in evident distress was Mr. Cornelius Bonner, and grouped about were Columbus Brown, B. B. Hamm, Ezra Bronson, A. B. Talcott and two or three others from outside the Woodruff district. With envelopes in their hands and the light of battle in their eyes stood Newton Bronson, Raymond Simms, Bettina Hansen, Mary Smith and Angie Talcott, the boys filled with delight, the girls rather frightened at being engaged in something like a debate with the salesman.

War Medal, $10,000 for Heirs of Dead Soldier

Detroit.—Ten thousand dollars in war risk insurance and a Distinguished Service cross await the heirs of Edward G. Mason, born in Detroit December 16, 1899, and killed in action in France November 10, 1918, according to word received by Theodore W. Kolbe, department adjutant of the American Legion.

Mason's heirs have been sought by the United States veterans' bureau and the adjutant general's office for five years without success.

Mason enlisted January 3, 1915, and in applying for the insurance gave the name of a brother, John J. Mason, general delivery, Toledo, O., as an emergency address. Efforts to locate the brother, who is beneficiary of the insurance, or other relatives, have failed. The United States adjutant general is holding the D. S. C. for the heir or heirs. The medal was awarded Mason for bravery in action.

The county clerk is searching birth records for the year 1899 for the names of Mason's parents. It is the only clew left.

AMOS AND HOSEA PLEADING FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS
(Temperance Lesson.)

LESSON TEXT—Amos 6:1-6; Hosea 6:1-6.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Hate the evil, and love the good."—Amos 5:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How Daniel Became Strong.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Amos Denounces Drunken Revelers.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Sins Denounced by Amos and Hosea.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Sins That Destroyed Israel.

The kingdom of Israel reached a high state of prosperity in the time of Jeroboam II, and with it came a condition of luxury, corruption and wickedness. Our lesson is a temperance lesson and applies to other things as well as indulgence in intoxicating liquor. Our age and nation are intoxicated with pleasure, pursuit of gain and selfish ambition.

I. The Sins Which Ruined Israel (Amos 6:1-6).

1. Reckless Security (vv. 1,3). They were blind to the evils that surrounded them. They were living in a fool's paradise, closing their eyes to the approaching storm of judgment as predicted by Amos. They trusted in the mountains of Samaria for their protection. They regarded their city as impregnable. They no doubt regarded the utterances of Amos as the dreams of a fanatic. The chief ones of the nation were so puffed up with pride that they failed to read the signs of the times in the light of history (v. 2). To disregard the lessons of history by dismissing the thought of impending judgment is to bring near the seat of violence" (v. 3).

2. Luxury (vv. 4-6). Periods of prosperity are always characterized by corruption and luxury. The luxury of Samaria expressed itself in

(1) Extravagant Furniture (v. 4). They had beds of ivory, perhaps wood inlaid with ivory.

(2) Laziness (v. 4). They stretched themselves upon their couches—living lives of indolence.

(3) Feasted on delicacies (v. 4). The implication here is that they had their dainties out of season. This is what many pride themselves in. They buy what they desire regardless of what it costs. In many instances men and women are living in gluttony while others are destitute.

(4) Adorned their feasts with music (v. 5). They sang idle songs, even invented musical instruments for this purpose. They prostituted the noble art of music to their sensual feasts. How like the times in which we live.

(5) They drank wine (v. 6). They were not content with ordinary drinking vessels. They drank from bowls, indicating excessive drinking. They were so mastered by the intoxicating cup that their feasts, which were adorned with the refinements of music, ended in drunkenness.

3. Failure to Grieve for Joseph (v. 6). Joseph here stands for Ephraim and Manasseh, his two sons. Ephraim became the principal tribe of the northern kingdom, so Joseph is used as a synonym for the nation. Many are indulging in infamous luxury, entirely indifferent to the groanings of others. There is need of a modern Amos to thunder God's judgment upon all those who are living in luxury and who are at ease in Zion—the inevitable issue of such living, the prophet assures them, would be that they should go into captivity (v. 7) and their proud city be delivered up to their enemies (v. 8).

II. The Remedy Proposed (Hosea 6:1-6).

1. Turn Back to God (v. 1). The only way for sinning individuals and nations to escape the judgment of God is with heartbreaking sorrow to repent and return to God. Hosea assures them that though God had torn and smitten them He will heal and bind up if they repent.

2. Believe in His Power to Restore (v. 2). This power even extends to a national resurrection for Israel.

3. Obedience (v. 3). It is through the obedient walk and communication with the Lord that they were to know His forgiving mercy.

4. The Issue (vv. 3-6). Such penitence would make restoration absolutely certain. Grace is even more certain than the laws of nature. Just as showers result in fruitfulness in nature, conformity with the righteous commands of the Lord will result in blessings from Him, for His Supreme desire is not for man to bring offerings of sacrifice but to walk in the knowledge of God.

The Bondage of Fear

HER BACK ACHED LIKE TOOTHACHE

Virginia Lady Says She Was Run Down, Suffering Severe Backache, But Took Cardui and Improved Wonderfully.

Meter, Va.—At "Cherry Grove," an historic Westmoreland County farm, near here, lives Mrs. E. L. Mozingo, who tells of an interesting experience with Cardui. Mrs. Mozingo was in a very run-down condition, she says, with no appetite and a severe backache. Several of her friends advised her to take Cardui and she wisely followed their advice.

"It was wonderful how much I improved," said Mrs. Mozingo.

"This past summer," she continued, "I was again in a run-down condition. My baby is fourteen months old and as I had nursed him this took all my strength. . . .

"I thought about Cardui and sent for a bottle—began to take it again. My . . . had never come back on me since my baby came and my back ached like the toothache at times. Shortly after I began to take Cardui again, my . . . came back on me again and I have been better ever since . . . Now I never felt better in my life."

Mrs. Mozingo was advised by her friends to take Cardui. Now she herself "wants other women to know what a wonderful medicine it is." Ask those who have taken Cardui. Then be sure to try it yourself.

LET'S KEEP MR. DURANT IN SHELBY COUNTY—

The Reporter believes and wishes to go on record as believing that the greatest opportunity that has ever come to our people to secure the type of service that Shelby county peculiarly needs is now before us. The opportunity is found in the proposed plan to secure the service of Rev. R. L. Durant as Field Worker for the Shelby Association.

There is a great work of religious and moral upbuilding that could be done in Shelby county. Weak, struggling churches could be strengthened and enlarged; Sunday schools could be given better organization and made more effective agencies for teaching the Bible; Young People's societies could be helped forward in their task of training the young men and young women for intelligent, effective service in the church; our people could be more completely aroused to the need for better schools in Shelby county; and every citizen could be stirred to a new sense of obligation for the observance and the enforcement of the law. These things ought to be done and the plain truth is that until they are done our county will not reach the place to which she of right belongs.

The Reporter believes that in all Alabama there is not another man so well fitted and qualified to take the lead in this work of building and strengthening the religious, moral and educational interests of Shelby county as is Mr. Durant. He knows our needs and he knows the remedy for our needs.

The good citizens of Shelby county, those who want better churches and Sunday schools, better schools and better homes, regardless of denominational affiliations should join together, the Reporter believes, in hearty support of the arrangement to keep Mr. Durant in Shelby county for this great and important work.

Plant More Hay

(By A. A. Lauderdale, County Agent.)

In a recent article, we called attention to the great hay shortage just now. To guard against this another year, now is the time to make plans for a safe supply. If an abundance of hay can be produced, it will cut down on the amount of grain and other concentrates next winter, which are our high priced feeds.

Let us consider what crops can be grown for hay and which are best. Cowpeas, various varieties of soybeans, bunch velvet beans, sorghum, sudan and Johnson grass are all good hay crops.

If you have Johnson grass on your place, it will be well to produce a good tonnage of it. Cowpeas and sorghum make a good hay mixture when sown together. Sudan will also make a good tonnage per acre, and compares very favorably with Johnson grass as a hay. Sudan should be sown at the rate of 25 to 30 pounds per acre.

Either of the varieties of soybeans. Mammoth Yellow Biloxi or O-Too-Tan will make good hay, and they are not so easily injured by the bean beetle as cowpeas. You will secure better yields by planting soybeans in narrow rows, so they can be cultivated once or twice. Two hundred pounds of acid phosphate per acre should be used.

Allowing one and one half tons of hay per year for each cow and for each mule, let us figure ample hay for the live stock to be fed, and plan to produce it at home.

Should Shoot Crows

To the Editor Reporter:

In the interests of the protection of game and useful birds in our vicinity, I would like to ask the sportsmen and farmers of our neighborhood to take some action in trying to lessen the number of crows. These predatory robbers should be shot whenever the opportunity arises at this season of the year. The nesting season for game and useful birds is now coming on and it is at this time that the crow beats through the fields and woods seeking out their nests and destroying their eggs and young. Game commissioners of thirty-eight states in the Union have found that the crow is the worst enemy of game and useful birds which flies. In some places crows have picked out the eyes of lambs and young calves and also destroyed vast quantities of poultry, eggs and young chicks.

The crow is increasing in numbers in many parts of the country. He hunts all the time, like other killers, but he especially destroys when the birds are nesting. Some species of crows have been known to wipe out whole colonies of game birds in certain localities.

It would be one of the best things possible for the game of this neighborhood, if sportsmen and farmers would devote some of their time at this season of the year to shooting crows and thus lessening their numbers.

Yours very truly,
Jake H. Johnson.

SHELBY HIGH EVENS SCORE WITH CULLMAN

(By Alvin Bird)

December 8th, 1923 was a big day for Columbiana, for practically everyone who lived in the little town was in Birmingham with but one object in view—that of bringing the scalp of Cullman County High School back to Columbiana, along with the championship honors of the state. Yet, we lost by one lone little touchdown, but not because the boys who wore the crimson uniforms didn't fight, and with that day began a friendly revenge that lasted until the closing of the 7th inning here Saturday when Shelby Hi took the large end of a three game series of baseball; and as the last tired player stalked in from the field amid the noise of the fans you could see their mouths smile into three short words: "Revenge is Sweet." And truly it was a great event in the eyes and hearts of Columbiana fandom and a series of base ball that will long be remembered.

The three game series opened Friday, Shelby Hi taking the first game 17-13. The tilt was a regular slug fest and void of features with the exception of a thrill caused by Faulkner's home run in the fourth inning. McEwen, who was doing mound duty for the locals pitched a steady game and the majority of the runs were caused by his teammates' errors.

The second game was won by Cullman 6-1. This fracus was very interesting and a great deal more closely contested than the score would indicate as only nine safe hits were gotten by both sides. Again it was the costly errors of the Shelby Hi boys that made such a wide margin in the score.

With the honors equally divided the same two twirlers of the second game started the third. Longshore for Shelby and King for Cullman. This game proved to be the best of the three, both teams rocking along taking the lead in a rather turn-about fashion. Looney was the hitting star, while James Longshore, who pitched both games for the locals seemed to have the genuine stuff on the ball as he allowed only nine hits in both games Camp, a brother to Howard Camp of the Birmingham Barons, was the outstanding star for Cullman both at bat and in the the field.

Buck Creek Takes Two From Marvel

Siluria, Alabama, April 22.—The Buck Creek ball team journeyed to Marvel Saturday and copped two close games of ball. The first game started with a rush for Marvel, who made two hits and being aided with some wild throws pushed over three runs in a hurry. Buck Creek came back in the second with the help of a base on balls, an error and some hits made four runs.M arvel tied the count in the fourth and took the lead in the sixth. Buck Creek won in the first of the seventh when Denson was hit, L. Thompson's three bagger and Scott's single. L. Thompson with a double and tripple led attack for Siluria while J. Liddle with three singles led for Marvel.

Marvel	3	0	0 1 0 1 0	7	5	4

In the second game, Clopton for Siluria and Phillips for Marvel each scattered the hits, while good fielding by both teams at the right time made the game close and interesting. Buck won in the first. L. Thompson single, Harpers' hit Cary's out and a double by H. Thompson scored two. In the fiftn Busby trippled to right and scored on an infield out for Marvel's only score. They threatened in the seventh. The first two up singled and Phillips attempted to win his own game with what seemed to be a sure extra base hit over first. Thompson grabbed the hit with one hand and threw to second completing a tripple play.

PROGRESS
In 1923 and Part of Its Program for 1924

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad shows in the accompanying comparative figures a few of its outstanding accomplishments in 1923—the banner year of its performance:

	1923	1922	Increase
Tons of freight handled	57,460,190	48,890,798	17.5%
Passengers carried 1 mile	767,475,053	669,328,572	14.7%
Tons of coal handled	30,308,989	27,374,688	10.7%

Value of materials used	33,379,764	28,696,080	16.3%
Railway taxes	6,372,310	4,686,148	35.9%

This unprecedented record demonstrates the great value of the L. & N. in aiding the business development of the territory which it serves.

In addition, the L. & N's improvement work for 1923 and its program so far developed for 1924 evidence its purpose to keep abreast with the growing needs of the times. In 1923 the L. & N. spent $31,635,463 for new work. Its 1924 program embraces construction of various roadway improvements and the acquisition of 42 new locomotives, 5,115 new freight cars and 60 new passenger cars—making a total of $33,147,846.

It is believed that this splendid record will be appreciated by the public and should induce such fair-minded consideration and co-operation as will aid the L. & N. in its further progressive development and its constant effort to give even better service to the people of the South.

Brain and Growth

Dr. Hrdlicka says that the brain grows after the body's development ceases. The brain develops, with use, to the age of fifty or sixty, in some cases to an extent that the size of the head is actually increased. Aside from this physical development, the body seldom grows after the early twenties, although Dr. Hrdlicka says that under proper exercise, diet and living conditions the body may grow until about the thirtieth year.

Delicious, Flaky PIE CRUSTS

BAKE your favorite pie from a crust made of self-rising flour. The wholesome, flaky texture will reveal to you a new delight in pie making. Many excellent cooks find self-rising flour without equal for all kinds of delicious pastries.

Mrs. G———, who has been a self-rising flour enthusiast for 21 years writes: "I like self-rising flour for pie crust because it makes a crust so light that anyone loves it . . . . I also make a great many tarts. Self-rising flour is especially fine for short-cakes. I make them of every kind of fruit, both fresh and canned, as well as with creamed chicken, fish or oysters."

Self-rising flour comes with just the right amount of pure phosphate baking powder already mixed in to give perfect baking results. Nowhere can you buy a more healthful food—nowhere can you obtain more value for your money than in good self-rising flour.

FOLLOW THESE FIVE RULES For Making Perfect Biscuits with Self-Rising Flour.' (1) See that your oven is hot; (2) Always use sweet milk or cold water; (3) Never add baking powder, soda or salt; (4) Use good shortening—lard, vegetable fat or butter; (5) Make soft dough—bake quickly. FIGHTING BOLL WEEVIL

Big Decrease in Cotton Production Attributed to Ravages of Pest.

Production of cotton in the United States dropped from more than 15,000,000 bales in 1914 to about 10,000,000 in 1923 when the largest acreage in history was planned. This decrease can be attributed mostly to the ravages of the Mexican boll weevil which entered this country near Brownsville, Texas, in 1892, and has gradually worked its way across the cotton belt until the infested area reaches to the Atlantic coast and as far north as Virginia. In 1914 about three-fourths of the cotton belt was infested while in 1923 nearly the entire area was ravaged by the insect.

Conservative business men estimate that under present world conditions a 15,000,000 bale cotton crop would bring a price of at least 20 cents per pound. Figuring on this basis the loss of 5,000,000 bales in 1923 meant a loss of $500,000,000 to the farmers of the South. There are approximately 1,000,000 cotton farmers and this amount divided among them shows that the average loss to each farmer was about $500.

It therefore behooves the farmers to rid themselves of this pest and turn their losses into profit. If they do not, it not only means that they will lose this amount, more or less, each year, but that the high cost of producing the crop in this country and the subsequent losses will encourage and are encouraging other countries to increase production and with the cheap labor available to them they soon can make it impossible for the American farmer to raise cotton and at the same time maintain a decent standard of living.

The seriousness of the situation is somewhat reduced, however, due to the fact that there are tested and proven methods of control. Scientists and experts, progressive farmers, bankers and other business men are convinced that if these methods are put into general practice the boll weevil can be controlled and the yield and profit increased.

These methods have been worked out and are explained in recommendations made by the Association of Southern Agricultural Workers, consisting of scientists and experts of the United States Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural colleges, who, for the first time since the boll weevil invaded the cotton belt and after thirty years of experiments and research, have assembled a definite body of knowledge to give to the farmers. These methods and recommendations, briefly stated, are as follows:

"Prepare ground early so as to have a firm, smooth and well settled seed bed at planting; delay planting until all danger from frosts and cold is past and the soil is warm enough to cause quick sprouting and vigorous early growth; plant one bushel or more of seed to the acre; plant only selected seed of an early maturing variety having a staple of not less than ⅞ inch.

"Cotton rows should be from three to four feet apart, according to the fertility of the soil, and spacing in the rows should be from eight to twelve inches with one to three stalks to the hill.

"An application of either a home-mixed molasses-calcium-arsenate mixture or calcium arsenate in dust form should be made when there are as many as twenty boll weevils on an acre of young cotton before the first indication of squaring.

"For the treatment of fruiting cotton generally, and especially on soils capable of producing one-third of a bale or more to the acre under normal conditions, the calcium arsenate dusting method is most reliable and profitable and is strongly recommended in preference to late season applications of any syrup mixtures.

"Dusting should begin when 10 per cent of the squares show weevil puncture and at least three applications of five pounds to the acre should be given at intervals of not more or less than four or five days. Thereafter dust should be applied only as needed to keep infestation below 20 per cent until after a full crop of bolls has set and become well grown.

"Community-wide action in weevil control may add greatly to the effectiveness of each of these measures. Therefore, the co-operation of all growers, whether owners or tenants, should be enlisted in putting into effect this fundamental program for weevil control."

The methods and recommendations as outlined do not advocate an increase in acreage and experts are of the opinion that a small acreage should be planted and intensive cultivation applied. This thought is best expressed in the slogan, "More cotton to the acre, not more acres to cotton."

Information on boll weevil control has been placed in the hands of county agents and it may be had from them or by requesting it from the state college of agriculture.

Quack Grass and Alfalfa

If quack grass is very bad it is likely to make it difficult to get the alfalfa started properly. It might be best to try to exterminate the grass before seeding to alfalfa. The usual method of seeding alfalfa and barley in the spring is to sow about two bushels of barley and 15 pounds of alfalfa seed to the acre. Do not forget that the land should be limed if sour and that the seed must be inoculated if neither alfalfa nor sweet clover has been grown there.

"IF ANYONE WANTS TO KNOW ABOUT TANLAC LET THEM SEE ME"

Says Joseph Baker of Memphis in Praising World's Greatest Tonic—Tells of Recovery.

"If anybody wants to find out about Tanlac, just let them see me," is the hearty suggestion of Joseph H. Baker, 550 North Third St., Memphis, Tenn.

Mr. Baker went overseas with the famous Thirtieth Division during the World War and participated in the St. Mihiel, Valley of Wovres and Argonne drives, having been cited for bravery in action in the Argonne. He is now a popular member of the Memphis Fire Department.

"When I came back from over there," said he, "I was in a mighty bad fix. I had been gassed and after getting home I got down with pneumonia. This left me 'all in,' without appetite, down in weight, liver out of fix, and suffering from constipation, biliousness and headaches without end.

"Tanlac put me to eating as never before, shot my weight up fifteen pounds and made a strong, well man of me—and I feel fine even to this day. I can't say enough for Tanlac."

STAYING HOME FROM WORK MEANS MONEY LOST

Many Women Know This by Experience

Let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Help You As It Helped These Women

Mrs. McDole's Experience

Ludington, Michigan.—"I suffered every month and was very irregular, had headaches all the time, was thin and pale, with no appetite. I had taken all kinds of medicines, and every doctor told me I would have to face an operation before I would be well again. I was doing factory work, and I had to stay at home so much that I was getting discouraged. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did so with good results. I am now feeling fine. I have advised all my girl friends, who have such troubles as I had, to take your wonderful medicine."—Mrs. Theressa McDole, 426 S. Rath Ave., Ludington, Mich.

Los Angeles, California.—"I was in such a condition that I was scarcely able to walk, even to do my housework. I had no energy, was depressed and often wished to die. I am a chef, but was totally unable to do any cooking. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken it with success. After the fourth bottle I felt much better, and after the tenth I never felt better in my life, as it resulted in a complete recovery. I certainly recommend it to all I hear complaining and you can use this letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. Mary Sullivan, 923 E. 46th Street, Los Angeles, California.

Greatly Relieved

Jersey City, N. J.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for cramps and fainting spells. I do office work, and have been in this condition four or five years, having to stay at home from work a day or two at a time, quite frequently. I have taken about ten bottles of it, and have been greatly relieved. I recommend it myself and you may print these facts with my full address."—Louise Schoenfelder, 112 Woodlawn Ave., Jersey City, N. J.

No matter what your work is, a great deal depends upon your health. It is discouraging to be obliged to stay at home frequently on account of sickness.

Your trouble may be caused by some female weakness, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought relief to many women just as these letters state. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Black Hole of Calcutta

The "Black Hole of Calcutta" was an apartment in which 156 English prisoners, captured by the Nawab siraj-ud-Daula, were confined over night of June 20, 1756. This apartment was 18 feet by 14 feet and 10 inches. It had only two small windows, obstructed by a veranda. The crush was dreadful, and after a night of terrible suffering from pressure, heat, thirst and want of air, there were left alive in the morning only 23 survivors.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

MUSCLE SHOALS

Ford Proposal Versus Congressional Record

Chapter II

A STATEMENT OF THE ALABAMA POWER COMPANY, SUPPORTED BY REMARKS FROM THE CONGRESSIONAL RECORD

THE FACTS IN THE CASE—

$1,527,512.75 For Property Costing Over $80,000,000.

Henry Ford acquires for $1,527,512.75 government property which cost over $80,000,000. That property includes $500,000 of platinum belonging to the nitrate plants and platinum is the equivalent of cash. The result is the Ford Corporation acquires these plants for slightly over $1,000,000. That will be a little over 1 per cent of its cost. They consist of 4,200 acres of land with two great nitrate plants, dwellings sewerage, locomotives, cars, repair shops and all modern improvements; two steam power plants, one of 6,500 horsepower (about the size of the steam plants on the banks of the Alabama River at Montgomery erected some years ago by Richard Tillis and now owned by the power company) and another steam plant of 90,000 horsepower, which is 12 times the size of the "Tillis Puant," and nearly as large as all the power units at Lock 12. For the latter plant alone the power companies have offered to pay $4,5000,000. All this is to be deeded to the Ford Corporation.

Taxpayers To Spend $3,472,487.25 For New Steam Plant.

The Ford proposal would take from the United States Treasury, cash to build in addition a 40,000 steam power plant for the Ford Corporation 100 miles south of Muscle Shoals and a connecting transmission line for the private use of the Ford Corporation, all to cost $3,472,487.25 to be repaid the government in installments.

THOSE WHO ARE INFORMED SAY

Rep. Kearns, of Ohio:

"Perhaps it would be well to state that Mr. Ford is offering for the governmen's real estate holdings at Muscle Shoals only $5,000,000. These holdings cost the government, to be exact, and without any accumulative interests, $85,343,296. For this real estate and with all the gigantic buildings constructed upon it, together with all the railroad engines, steel freight cars, steam shovels, picks and shovels, rock crushers, cement mixers, railroad tracks, and numberous other machinery and tools, he is offering the ridiculously low unconscionable price of $5,000,000.

"For the Congress of the United States to authorize the sale of more than $85,000,000 worth of the government property to probably the richest man in the world for $5,000,000 would seem to me to come dangerously near being criminal."

Rep. Hill, of Maryland:

"There has been a good deal said about the alleged selfishness of the power companies making the offer represented by the Hull bill, now before the House. To me nothing can be more preposterous than the proposal of Section 19 of the McKenzie bill to spend $3,472,487.25 of good, present, actual government cash to build for the Ford interests a steam power plant, nearly 100 miles away from Muscle Shoals, that has no possible relation to the Muscle Shoals water power or nitrate plants, except that during the war the Gorgas plant furnished extra power from the Alabama Power Company to Nitrate Plant No. 2."

SECOND PAYMENTS COUNT BIG

Dear Candidate:

Here are a few plain statements of facts. Please read them carefully. The preliminaries are now over. The campaign is on in earnest. The chances are there will be no new entries. It is next to impossible for any one to enter now and overtake you. Scan the list. The names of the WINNERS are there. Your name is there and you may be the BIG WINNER if you will. You may ride away in May 10th in a brand new $800 Ford Sedan. You have done well up to the present time, but from now on is the most important time. May 3rd is a mighty short way off. And the time between now and May 10th may be reconed in hours. Every subscription now counts nearly double the credits it does the last week. The time for action, energy, effort, is NOW. Don't let a day pass by you NOW without accomplishing the very most possible. You friends will help you if you make the effort strong enough yourself. There are plenty of subscriptions to be had. The territory is scarcely touched. The surface is barely scratched. Opportunity is everywhere. YOU have the time, the energy and the abiliy to win if you will only turn loose the powers that you possess.

You have already demonstrated that you can overcome obstacles you have shown that you can get subscriptions in this campaign—you can get more, and you will even surprise yourself at your own accomplishments. Power gravitates to the fellow who can do things, and no one has a shade the advantage over YOU. YOU CAN WIN IN THIS CAMPAIGN IF YOU WILL.

Let's set a new pace this week. Let's resolve that every day and every hour shall land you nearer the goal. Remember that the only way to get votes is to get subscriptions. and ad. cards. They both mean votes and votes mean victory.

Your efforts plus the encouragement of friends and the cooperation of this office is all that you need to win. Don't hesitate to call upon the Campaign Manager for every bit of ligitimate assistance that you need. That is my job—to help YOU in every way that I can to WIN.

Very sincerely
Campaign Manager.

Read over the rules and regulations of this contest, as published in the first announcement. in the page ad in this issue and be sure you understand them. Also note how the contest will be brought to a close the last week. The list of judges, who will count the votes on the final night, was annuonced at the beginning of the campaign.

At the beginning of this campaign the Reporter asked fair play from all participants, and in return promised fairness and impartially to all. Candidates, bear in mind that "any collusion on the part of candidates to the detriment of other candidates or the Reporter, during the campaign, will not be tolorated. Any candidate, or candidates, entering into or taking part in such a combination will forfeit all rights to a prize or commission."

Candidates should come in person to the Reporter office Monday to get the advertising cards that are to be issued. However, if you cannot do so write in and state how many cards you will need to start with. Candidates will be held responsible for every card issued until they are sold or the cash turned into campaign headquarters, or until they are returned. These cards are not good for accounts that were incurred before the opening day of the campaign, March 27th, 1294. Money collected on these cards will apply on the 50,000 FREE votes along with subscriptions. Announcement of the exact date these cards would be issued was not made at any time until today. The cover of your receipt book made an announcement to the effect that the schedule for ad cards would be published later. Every business man and woman can use at least one of these cards within the next twelve months. It's your job to sell them now, and get the big votes therefor.

Miss Nelle Isbell of Columbiana, was found to be winner of the $20 gold piece last Saturday night, by a very narrow margin over several others. This $20 in gold is, however, just a mild sample of what is to come on May 10th to those who have really shown pep and endurance. In fact, $20 is only about 1-125th of the value of the total prize list to be awarded on May 10th. No one yet has any of the prizes cinched. A person near the top now, would be in grave danger of failing to the tail end of the list if they slack up, or show signs of discouragement.

SHELBY HIGH HAS CLEAN UP DAY

(By R. E. Parker.)

Monday afternoon was clean up day at the Shelby County High School. The campus and building were put in shipshape. Floors and windows were washed, furniture polished, trash burned, books placed in order and catalogued, and everything put in a wholesome and sanitary condition. Prizes were given to the groups showing special merit in their particular tasks.

It is hoped that the general clean up at the high school will inspire students to carry on the good work at home. Summer will soon be here, and if everybody in the community will clean up their premises the health of this section will be greatly enhanced.

The high sechool boys and girls have set the example; it is sincerely hoped that the good work started in the high school will be embodied by all citizens who love a home that has as its ideal cleanliness and sanitation.

Shelby Hens Making Good in Missouri

R. C. Mooney of Wilsonville is getting fine reports from the pen of R. I. White pullets that he sent to the Missouri Experiment station last November to be entered in the egg laying contest conducted by the station that runs for a full year, beginning November 1st.

Sixty pens of five pullets each were entered, some of them by the most experienced as well as the most successful poultry growers in the country. For the first month Mr. Mooney's pen made the best showing for which he received a silver cup. For the month of January his pen was beaten by just one egg. At the end of March he had a report for the entire period of the contest to date which showed his pen in fifth place, the five pullets having laid 488 eggs in five months. Recently Mr. Mooney had a letter from a poultry fancier in another state offering him $40 for his pen.

Mr. Mooney has had a number of years experience with poultry and is very enthusiastic about the industry as a result of this experience. He has tried several different breeds and strains and has found that he gets best results, all things considered, with Rhode Island Whites and so he is planning to go into the work on a larger scale than ever and push thisbreed. He is very enthusiastic over the suggestion to hold a Shelby County Poultry Show some time this fall.

Spring Creek Boys Club Organized

A second club for boys has been organized by County Agent A. A. Lauderdale at Spring Creek and at the organization meeting held Friday night of last week seven members were enrolled and started to work.

The boys showed a good interest in their proposed projects, and started in with the determination to make a good showing both for themselves and for their community. Two of the members will raise poultry as a part of their projects, while all of them will try thier hands at growing corn. The members enrolled are: Max Allen, Cozelle Allen, Robert Hinton, Cecil Allen, Dock Stonecypher and Rufus Allen.

Mr. Lauderdale's first club was organized at Progress school house under the leadership of Rev. C. M. Nolen and it has already a membership of eighteen earnest boys and girls.

Miss Mary Thomas Goodwin spent the week-end with her cousin, Miss Myrtle Goodwin at Sterrett.

VICTORY IS JUST AROUND THE CORNER

tion Grows Faster as End of the Campaign Draws Near Second. And Last Big Votes Come to End. Saturday Night

FINISH OF CAMPAIGN IS VERY NEAR

o Candidate Has Thus Far Been Aggressive Enough To Head the List For Any Length of Time—Consequently a Close Race

Rushing through the last few rs in their final efforts for su emacy, candidates in the Repor r's now famous Salesmanship ub are racing swiftly and de rminedly toward the goal as the easure chest at the end of the nbow comes in sight.

Sixteen more circuits of the ck and—too late.

If the next eight days pass with t SPEEDY ACTION on the part the candidates who wish to win e $800 Ford Sedan, the respon bility will rest upon themselves. Saturday night marks the close the BIG VOTES. It is positively e last chance to secure more an the minimum votes on sub riptions. A few long term orders om unexpected sources may ange defeat into victory. At any te, you can only lose votes by thdrawing until next week—e final one of the race. And, af r the time for action has passed the regrets in the world will be no avail.

More general and concerted ac n has taken place during the st few days than at any other e since the campaign started, d with the race narrowed down a limited few, each favorite s re determined than ever to be clared winner of the magnifi nt Ford Sedan.

The circulation of the Shelby unty Reporter will stand the st for those who wish to patron e its columns, and the class of work turned out is the best the city and that a modern print op can turn out. You are going have some printing done, so y not buy a card and help your vorite in the race for the big e Ford Sedan.

A striking feature of the past w days is the personal pride that becoming so noticeable. Several ndidates have voiced their de rmination to win at all hazards. e declared that to accept de at now would be a disgrace. An her says she owes it to her iends who have helped her so yally up to this point to put rth every effort to the extent at when when the final day of ckoning comes, everything will ve been done; nothing left un ne to better her chances to win. So on the basis of personal honor e competition is being waged stfully, shedding luster on this spiring sight in the civic pride at is manifesting itself insofar the people of the different lo alities are concerned. This mighty ctor is the bulwark behind the rious contenders. Each "set" is ldly aiding its favorite, and no dge that values its reputation r doing things is going to let me one else walk off with the ost valuable prize when a little ncerted effort will "bring it me."

For this reason and for the rea n that the difference in value etween the grand capital prize nd the second prize is about $500 llars, quite a tidy sum itself—e can expect to see a desperate ruggle on all sides before the big rizes are finally awarded on May 0th.

Here is how to get hundreds of ousands of votes—a five-year bscription to the Reporter unts for 30,000 votes. Ten five ears orders come to $75.00. This mount represents three $20 clubs r which 150,000 extra votes will e issued. The five-year orders at 0,000 each is 300,000. Add this umber to the 150,000 extra votes nd you have a grand total of 150,000 votes for only ten five-year orders.

Haven't you a few friends who will help you win the Ford Sedan, valued at $800.00 to the extent of a five-year subscription to the Reporter? Of course you have. Sell them an advertising card if not a subscription.

The standing of candidates will be corrected and published for the last time next Monday. Votes to appear in this count must be polled by 10:00 o'clock Saturday night. No ballots will be accepted Monday for publication in this standing, only those mailed and postmarked Saturday. You surely want to show your friends that in the home stretch you are going strong er than ever. Therefore, poll your credits by Saturday night for the last count of the campaign before the winners are determined. Voting is going to be heavy Saturday —No doubt about that, so lay your plans accordingly.

Full details explaining how the contest will close will be announced on Monday. Rules governing the finsh were published at the beginning of the Campaign and will be repeated Monday, so that everyone interested will know how fairness, impartiality and secrecy is assured.

Remember that Saturday, May 3, is the crucial test. Those who benefit the most from the LAST opportunity to get BIG votes will stand the best chance of winning the $800 Ford Sedan only 8 days hence. The race is truly on the home stretch. If you want to win, Saturday is the TIME FOR ACTION!

See the big advertisement on another page today, explaining the difference between Second and Third Period schedules.

Saturday night is the last count until the end on May 10, and the winners are announced. Make it your banner report of the entire campaign. BETTER BE SAFE THAN SORRY.

FARM BUREAU TO STUDY STATE TAX

EXPERT TO BE EMPLOYED FOR ONE YEAR TO MAKE THOROUGH INVESTIGATION OF TAX SITUATION.

Montgomery.—Beginning May 16 the Alabama Farm Bureau federation will make a thorough study of the tax situation in Alabama. Edward A. O'Neal, president announced that J. S. Mooring of Anniston, who was chairman of the state tax commission for many years, has been employed for a period of one year. The investigation will be continued longer if it appears necessary at that time to do so.

In making this announcement, Mr. O'Neal referred to the fact that the tax problem is one of the biggest in the state, and that farm bureau officials and members are anxious to have detailed information on all the factors involved.

"The investigation by Mr. Mooring will be thorough and comprehensive," said Mr. O'Neal. "Farmers want good schools, good roads, and other public necessities and we cannot have them withow taxes. In order to know where the tax burden rests, how we stand, and what improvement should be made, we have employed an expert to make a fair and impartial investigation. COOLIDGE SURE OF NOMINATION

PRE-CONVENTION INTEREST TURNS TO DEMOCRATS, WHO NOW CONSIDER ROBINSON.

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Washington.—As the Republican politicians figure it, President Coolidge now has enough delegates pledged to his cause to insure his nomination at Cleveland. Therefore much of the zest and the interest drops out of the Republican pre-convention campaign.

Senator Hiram W. Johnson made a game uphill fight for Cleveland delegates in his behalf. He lost. No politician here seems to doubt that Senator Johnson will keep his regularity and support the Republican ticket in the coming campaign. Unquestionably, however, there is a good deal of bitterness today within the camp of the Californian. Time softens bitterness as it assuages grief. The politicians seem to think the support of the Johnson contingent for the Republican candidate can be depended upon.

All the speculation as to possible results and as to who will be who in the prize-winning class naturally has transferred itself to the Democratic pre-convention campaign. It probably is not necessary to repeat what has been written from here before, but lest somebody shall have forgotten it, it may be said there are thirty more or less prominent and all entirely receptive candidates for the Democratic nomination.

The other day Col. George Harvey in an interview suggested the name of Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas as a most excellent choice for first place by the Democrats in convention assembled. This senator from the "State of the Traveler" is today the leader of the Democracy in the senate.

Robinson Being Considered.

It is easy enough to determine that some Democrats of place in Washington are asking themselves if Colonel Harvey's advice was not pretty good in this case. That the Democrats should give heed to advice from George Harvey is remarkable in itself, for the colonel in recent years has espoused pretty nearly everything for which the majority of the Democracy has little use, and moreover, the Wilson-Harvey episode is not yet free from poignant recollections.

Senator Robinson's rise to prominence has been of the slow and steady kind. He was a member of the lower house of congress for four terms, and he had served nearly a full term in the upper house before anything like recognition as a party leader came to him. The excuse for writing something about Robinson at this time is that in Democratic circles he is today being given consideration as a candidate who might become the heir of the strength of Oscar W. Underwood in the convention and of a part of the strength of William G. McAdoo.

In 1920 Senator Robinson was elected a delegate from his state to the Democratic national convention at San Francisco. He went there apparently thinking that he would have nothing more to do than would fall to the lot of any other one of a thousand delegates. With the trouble running between the wets and the drys, the conservatives and the radicals, and between other factions in the party, the convention management realized that it needed the services of a hard-fisted permanent chairman, one who knew how to fight if personal fighting were necessary, but who also knew how to keep other men from fighting, which was the main consideration.

Gained Fame in San Francisco.

In a way Senator Robinson's record as permanent chairman of that convention brought him into the list of possibilities for the Democratic nomination for the presidency. It also was responsible for his choice of leader of the Democratic minority in the senate when Oscar W. Underwood concluded to shed the mantle of leadership.

There are marked differences between Underwood of Alabama and Robinson of Arkansas. They are both popular, but for different reasons. Underwood is easygoing, urbane and competent. Robinson is not so easy-going, is generally urbane, and that he is competent is proved by his job and the way he is conducting it.

If the Democrats want to nominate a man of whose partisanship there can be no doubt they can take Robinson and make no mistake. William A. Brigham writing in the Boston Transcript on the subject of Robinson, says:

"Every time he shakes hands with a Republican he feels contaminated."

The main interest here in the suggestions of names for their party's nomination by Democrats of note is due to the fact that the picking out of men who have not been at all prominent as candidates, goes to prove that the leaders here are pretty firmly convinced that no man seemingly now in a leading position in the field is likely to win the prize.

Officials Mum on Dawes' Report.

Officials of the administration in Washington are unwilling to express opinions for publication on the report of the Dawes committee of experts which outlines a plan for settling the matter of German reparations and of stabilizing the currencies of Europe.

It is true that the officials say the document probably is the most important contribution to constructive literature of after-the-war affairs that has appeared since the terms of the armistice were made public, but editions in Europe and the entire reparations matter are not representatives of the United States government. It seems curious that it should be so, but it is a fact quickly realized in yond this thus far they will say little.

Why is it that administration officials are chary about expressing opinions on this high matter? The reason is easy. The American experts who undertook the study of financial concountry the opinion, possibly because of forgetfulness, seems to prevail that Mr. Dawes and his collegues have Washington that in many parts of the been direct representatives of Uncle Sam. Such is not the case.

The administration decided to try to help settle European financial affairs, and with it make stable conditions in the rest of the world, but for a long time it did not know how to make the attempt. If Mr. Dawes and his comrades had been nominated for the work as representatives of the government it would have been necessary to ask for confirmation of appointments by the senate.

Senate Would Have Refused.

Because about one-third of the senators always have been opposed to any kind of American interference, as they call it, in European affairs, the nominations probably never would have been sanctioned. There would have been long speeches in the senate to the effect that the appointment of these commissioners was only a subterfuge to get the United States into the League of Nations. Nothing that the administration could have said would have removed this thought from the heads of the opposing senators. Friends of the League of Nations, and opponents of it as well, realize the fact that if an official of the United States government should send a man to Paris to buy for him a collection of postage stamps from some famous dealer, the instant charge would be that under the surface of the errand would be found proofs of deadly intention to lug the United States into the league.

So it was that Mr. Dawes and his fellow-members went abroad in response to an invitation and merely with the nod of approval of the administration of the United States. There was no official appointment and virtually no official sanction of their errand, but nevertheless it is well enough known that in spirit these negotiators in behalf of reparations arrangements were acting in behalf of this country, the belief being if success crowns their effort the American people will endorse the proceeding whether they are officials or non-officials.

German Relief Bill Opposed.

When the bill which the house passed not long ago appropriating $10,000,000 of the people's money to buy food to feed women and children in Germany is brought into the senate, there is going to be one of the sharpest and most acrimonious debates of the present session.

There are several senators who not only are opposed to the appropriation, but have been willing to say so in public. It must be understood that the opposition is not based at all on any desire to see women and children suffer, nor any lack of desire to relieve their distress with American money, but is based wholly on the belief that there is plenty of food on hand in Germany and that there is plenty of money in the pockets of rich Germans which could be used to care for the needy women and children of the land.

It is said by the opponents of the granting of the appropriation that the house took favorable action on it not so much because the members thought the action was entirely justifiable on the ground of the necessity in the case, but because the money appropriated is to be spent in this country, largely for the purchase of raw food supplies, and thus there will be a direct benefit to the native agriculturist.

German Farmer Holds Food.

Some of those who are opposed to the appropriation say the country folk of Germany have more than food enough to feed themselves and the entire population of the cities where the chief pang of hunger is felt. The trouble, it is claimed, is that the peasants will not part with their food supplies unless they can get payment for it in currency which is worth much more than the German mark. If the opponents of the appropriation are right in their statements, the present German government does not seem to be strong enough to carry through a policy which would compel the country folk of their land to feed their suffering compatriots in the cities.

A good deal of bitterness over the appropriation matter has been created in the ranks of the ex-service men in the United States. The District of Columbia chapter of the Military Order of the World War at a largely attended meeting voted unanimously to protest against the appropriation on the ground that it was unnecessary and that Americans should not be called upon to do that which the Germans amply are able to do.

It seems that several posts of the American Legion that have acted on the matter also are opposed to the appropriation. It is hard for ex-service men, of whom the writer is one, to be put in the position of seeming opposition to the feeding of persons who need food. The ex-service men have expressed a willingness to feed anybody whom the country which so recently was an enemy can show it is unable to feed.

FIGHTING BOLL WEEVIL

Experts Declare Preparations for War Should Begin Before Planting.

Preparedness for an emergency as a warlike policy of a nation may not meet with the approval of every citizen but certainly no one could object to it if war was a certainty. Thus every farmer naturally can see the wisdom of preparedness for war with an insect that is just as certain as the fact that there will be a cotton crop planted and that since the invasion of the cotton belt by that insect, the boll weevil, the farmers have sustained losses amounting to as much as $5,000,000 in some years.

Preparation for this war should begin before the crop is planted, experts declare, and efforts should not be lessened throughout the season and into the winter. It is a hard battle, the experienced say, but the results in actual dollars and cents more than pay for the time and labor and a bonus is collected after each year's battle.

Experts say that the battle with the boll weevil is nothing more or less than a race between the setting of bolls on the cotton plants and multiplication of the weevils. Everything possible should be done to assist the plants in winning this race.

Like athletes who go in training before running a race, "training" must be administered to all the factors entering into the cotton field race. The first, and not the least important, step is preparation of the soil as early as possible in order to have a firm, smooth and well-settled seed bed at planting time. It is preferable that this be done in the fall or winter as unfavorable weather conditions shortly before planting often prevent plowing at that time and early preparation does away with that risk.

Planting should be delayed until all danger from frosts and cold is past and the soil is warm enough to insure quick sprouting and vigorous growth. It is not recommended that planting be done at abnormally early dates as it is possible that when this is done the plants may become stunted during the early days of their growth. One bushel or more of seed should be planted to the acre. A perfect stand is most important. As nearly as practicable all cotton in the same community should be planted at the same time and in the same variety.

"One of the most important steps which have been taken to reduce weevil damage," government experts declare, "has been the development and introduction of varieties of cotton which mature their crops earlier in the season than those varieties which were planted before the weevil invasion. The variety to be planted to obtain a profitable crop under weevil conditions depends on local conditions but by all means the seed should be selected and the variety should have a staple of not less than seven-eighths inch. It is definitely proved that increased yields worth from $10 to $40 an acre may be obtained by planting selected seed."

Information as to the variety best suited to a certain locality can be obtained from either the county agent or the state college of agriculture.

The width of cotton rows should be from three to four feet, depending on the fertility of the soil, and spacing in the rows should be from eight to twelve inches with one to three stalks to the hill. The closer spacing and thicker stands are especially recommended for the poorer soils and for sections which commonly suffer from heavy weevil infestation and frequent summer rains. Tests show that thick spacing hastens maturity and increases the yield and profit.

The Association of Southern Agricultural Workers, composed of scientists and experts of the United States Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural colleges, recommends that the best soil on the farm be selected for cotton production and stresses the importance of using only the well-drained, fertile lands and the early soils.

"The intelligent use of commercial fertilizers is an important step in profitable production of cotton," government experts declare. "On most soils a fertilizer containing high percentages of quickly available nitrogen and of acid phosphate seems to give the best results. On very sandy land, or soils on which cotton is subject to rust or wilt, some form of potash should also be included in the fertilizer used."

Further information on boll weevil control can be obtained from the county agent or by requesting it from the state college of agriculture.

Early Hatches Are Best

Late-hatched chicks are rarely as profitable as early-hatched ones. When hatched late, they are not able to make as good growth during the hot summer months and do not mature in time to start laying in the early fall. There is little danger of farmers hatching chicks too early.

Economical Dairy Ration

In general, the most economical dairy ration is the one which can be made up largely of home-grown feeds. Corn, cane, or kafir, if put up properly, makes excellent silage or may be used as dry roughness. Although a ton of corn silage is somewhat more valuable for milk production than a ton of cane or kafir silage, the much greater tonnage obtained from the sorghums, especially in a dry year, makes them favored over corn by many people.

EVEN MAGAZINE EDITORS DON'T ALL LIVE IN NEW YORK!

Martha Van Rensselaer was recently named as one of the twelve greatest American women. Born of parents who desired above all things to educate their children well, Miss Rensselaer became a teacher without conscious choice. As state school commissioner she added interest in the life problems of women. A job had become a career.

In 1900 she was appointed by Cornell university for development and extension work with rural women, department of home economics in New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell with Miss Van Rensselaer in charge followed. The department has become a "professional school," a small college in itself.

Mr. Hoover appointed Miss Van Rensselaer chief of the home conservation division of the United States food administration. The American Home Economics association made her its president. A woman's magazine sought her out to be "home" editor."

With all personality boiled down to the telling, that is the story of a woman who had only a school teacher's position in an "up-state" town as a starting point.

What made Miss Van Rensselaer a woman to be listed in "Who's Who"? In what way has she differed from thousands of teachers who, in her own embittered phrase, "Never get anywhere?"

Isn't it fairly easy to read between the lines?

Martha Van Rensselaer, the woman used to the full the gift her mother had to convey. They loved each other. Their daughter made education her life work.

She developed early the ability to manage people. Women county school commissioners were not so common in Atlantic coast states a quarter of a century ago but that office-holding was significant.

She was intellectually alert. Even many people were seeing the differences between life in city and country as problems that demanded help in the public schools. Still fewer had a practical program. Martha Van Rensselaer evolved both.

She was feminine. She directed—as one may easily imagine—all her executive woman instincts, not into antagonism to men, as so many intellectual women have done, but into a constructive service for other women and girls.

"I would develop more opportunity for women outside the city," she writes. "There is much work to be done and many women overtaxed by their life because home equipment, standard of life and remuneration are not adequate to hold the average girl at the point of production."

THE SEEDS OF SUCCESS

If you aren't thrilled and inspired by this letter from Clarice Hoquiam (no, I don't know how to pronounce it, either), Wash., I'm disappointed in you.

"Four years ago my husband and youngest boy were suddenly taken from me by influenza, leaving me to recover from the shock, and get back my own strength after that dreadful disease; and bring up another little boy of six in the way his father would wish. With no training other than a fair education, of course the first thing was that I should prepare myself for office work. Just at this time an elderly lady, the representative of a life insurance company in Aberdeen, was looking for some one to take the agency here. Through a mutual friend she heard of me.

"Now about the only thing I knew about life insurance was that which collected Mr. Elliott's. As far as the companies were concerned, they were all alike. It was just my good fortune to fall into the hands of the best company in the world. No one but the Lord himself and my mother will ever know the struggle I had to keep myself stick to it. There is nothing in the world harder than to make a matter-of-fact business woman's office, when you can put him feeling sorry for you.

"And I had no training whatever. I was given a rate book and some literature and told to go after business. I didn't know one kind of policy from another. I studied when I could make myself go out and face people. If you were to mention me as one of the successful writers of Insurance I should only be ridiculous. I am, however, I am counted a success in my own community. I know my success is in the fact that I conquered myself, my own fears, and made myself do things."

The United States is the most neurotic country in the world, with Britain a close second, according to a Cambridge university professor who stated that anyone who smokes forty cigarettes a day puts 5 per cent of his blood out of play.

I call a little meeting here for a minute, Jim?" asked Ezra Bronson. "Why, where's he gone?"

"They's some other visitors come in," said a little girl, putting her apron in embarrassment at the teacher's absence.

Jim had, after what seemed to Jennie an interminable while, seen the county superintendent and her distinguished party, and was now engaged in welcoming them and endeavoring to find them seats—quite an impossible thing at that particular moment, by the way.

"Don't mind us, Mr. Irwin," said Doctor Brathwayt. "This is the best thing we've seen on our journeyings. Please go on with the proceedin's. That gentleman seems to have in mind the perfectin' of some so't of organization. I'm intensely interested."

"I'd like to call a little meetin' here," said Ezra to the teacher. "Seein' we've busted up your program so far, may we take a little while longer?"

"Certainly," said Jim. "The school will please come to order."

The pupils took their seats, straightened their books and papers, and were at attention. Doctor Brathwayt nodded approvingly as if at the answer to some question in his mind.

"Children," said Mr. Irwin, "you may or may not be interested in what these gentlemen are about to do—but I hope you are. Those who wish may be members of Mr. Bronson's meeting. Those who do not prefer to do so may take up their regular work."

"Gentlemen," said Mr. Bronson to the remains of Mr. Carmichael's creamery party, "we've been cutting bait in this neighborhood about long enough. I'm in favor of fishing, now. How many here favor building a cooperative creamery if we can get the farmers in with cows enough to make it profitable, and the equipment at the right price?"

Each man held up a hand.

"Here's one of our best farmers not voting," said Mr. Bronson, indicating Raymond Simms. "How about you, Raymond?"

"Ah reckon paw'll come in," said Raymond blushingly.

"He will if you say so," said Mr. Bronson.

Raymond's hand went up amid a ripple of applause from the pupils, who seemed glad to have a voter in their ranks.

"Unanimous!" said Mr. Bronson. "It is a vote! Now I'd like to hear a motion to perfect a permanent organization to build a creamery. Mr. Irwin will you please act as secretary."

Jim sat down at the desk and began making notes. The meeting appointed committees, fixed upon a time for a future meeting, threw a collection of half-dollars on the desk to start a petty cash fund, made the usual joke about putting the secretary under bond, adjourned and dispersed.

"It's a go this time!" said Newton to Jim.

"I think so," said Jim, "with those men interested. Well, our study of creameries has given a great deal of language work, a good deal of arithmetic, some geography, and finally saved the people from a swindle. Rather good work, Raymond!"

"My mother has a delayed luncheon ready for the party," said Jennie to Jim. "Please come with us—please!"

But Jim demurred. Getting off at this time of day was really out of the question if he was to be ready to show the real work of the school in the afternoon session.

"This has been rather extraordinary," said Jim, "but I am very glad you were here. It shows the utility of the right sort of work in letter-writing, language, geography and arithmetic—in learning things about farming."

"It certainly does," said Doctor Brathwayt. "I wouldn't have missed it under any consideration; but I'm certainly sorry for that creamery shark and his accomplice—to be routed by the Fifth Reader grade in farming!"

The luncheon was rather a wonderful affair—and its success was unqualified after everybody discovered that the majority of those in attendance felt much more at home when calling it dinner.

"What d'ye think of our schools?" asked the colonel.

"Well," said Professor Gray, "it's not fair to judge, Colonel, on what must have been rather an extraordinary moment in the school's history. I take it that you don't put on a representation of 'The Knave Unmasked' every morning."

"It was more like a caucus than I've ever seen it, daddy," said Jennie, "and less like a school."

"Don't you think," said Doctor Brathwayt, "that it was less like a school because it was more like life? It was life. If I am not mistaken, history of this community was making in that schoolroom as we entered."

"You're perfectly right, Doctor," said the colonel. "Jim's got too big for the district, and so we're going to enlarge the district, and the schoolhouse, and the teaching force, and the means of educational grace generally. That's as sure as can be—after what took place this morning."

"He's rather a wonderful person, to be found in such a position," said Professor Gray, "or would be in any region I have visited."

"He's a native product," said the colonel, "but a wonder all the same. He's a Brown Mouse, you know."

"A—a—?" Doctor Brathwayt was plainly astonished. And so the colonel was allowed to tell again the story of the Darbishire brown mice, and why he called Jim Irwin one. Doctor Brathwayt said it was an interesting Mendelian explanation of the appearance of such a character as Jim. "And if you are right, Colonel, you'll lose him one of these days. You can't expect to retain a Caesar, a Napoleon, or a Lincoln in a rural school, can you?"

"I don't know about that," said the colonel. "The great opportunity for such a Brown Mouse may be in this very school, right now. He'd have as big an army right here as Socrates ever had. The Brown Mouse is the only judge of his own proper place."

"I think," said Mrs. Brathwayt, as they motored back to the school, "that your country schoolmaster is rather terrible. The way he crushed that Mr. Carmichael was positively merciless. Did he know how cruel he was?"

"I think not," said Jennie. "It was the truth that crushed Mr. Carmichael."

"But that vote of thanks," said Mrs. Brathwayt. "Surely that was the bitterest irony."

"I wonder if it was," said Jennie. "No, I am sure it wasn't. He wanted to leave the children thinking as well as possible of their victim, and especially of Mr. Bonner; and there was really something in Mr. Carmichael's talk which could be praised. I have known Jim Irwin since we were both children, and I feel sure that if he had had any idea that his treatment of this man had been unnecessarily cruel, it would have given him a lot of pain."

"My dear," said Mrs. Brathwayt, "I think you are to be congratulated for having known for a long time a genius."

"Thank you," said Jennie. And Mrs. Brathwayt gave her a glance which brought to her cheek another blush; but of a different sort from the one provoked by the uproar in the Woodruff school.

There could be no doubt now that Jim was thoroughly wonderful—nor that she, the county superintendent, was quite as thoroughly a little fool. She to be put in authority over him! It was too absurd for laughter. Fortunately, she hadn't hindered him much—but who was to be thanked for that? Was it owing to any wisdom of hers? Well, she had decided in his favor, in those first proceedings to revoke his certificate. Perhaps that was as good a thing to remember as was to be found in the record.

CHAPTER XXII

And So They Lived—

And so it turned out quite as if it were in the old ballad, that "all in the merry month of May," and also "all in the merry green wood," there were great doings about the bold little promontory where once stood the cabin on the old wood-lot where the Simms family had dwelt.

The brook ran about the promontory, and laid at its feet on three sides a carpet of blue-grass, amid clumps of trees and wild bushes. Not far afield on either hand came the black corn-land, but up and down the bluffy sides of the brook for some distance on both sides of the Kingdragged highway, ran the old woodlot, now regaining much of the unkempt appearance which characterized it when Jim Irwin had drawn upon himself the gentle rebuke of Old Man Simms for not giving a whoop from the big road before coming into the yard.

The cabin was gone, and in its place stood a pretty little bungalow, about which blossomed lilacs and peonies and roses and other old-fashioned flowers furnished by Mrs. Irwin. For this was the teacher's house or schoolmanse for the new consolidated Woodruff district, and the old Simms wood-lot was henceforth to be the glebe-land of the schoolmanse.

Central Asia

Type of Cart Used in Central Asiatic Lands.

By degrees the veil—in this case, many feet of sand—is being drawn away from the mysterious region of Central Asia whence some authorities assert came the ancestors of the peoples of all continents. As the sand is dug or blown from ruined cities and temples, history is being pushed farther and farther back and there is being disclosed evidences of the high degree of civilization and culture that existed in this mountain and desert-girt region thousands of years ago.

Perhaps the most fascinating and the most mysterious of these central Asian regions is the Lop or Tarim Basin, north of Tibet, which constitutes the heart of eastern or Chinese Turkestan. The entire central portion of the basin is desert but around its rim between it and the mountains that almost encircle it, is a string of oases that have figured prominently in history. In these oases today are towns whose names at least are familiar: Yarkand, Kashgar, Khotan, and many smaller ones to the north, less known but locally important.

It is only within the last half century that the West has become passably well acquainted with the Lop basin; but medieval Europe had Munchausen-like tales of the region in the celebrated letters of Prester John, a more or less mythical character, who was represented to be a powerful Christian emperor living in central Asia. In one of the letters it is stated that: "Among other things which are very wonderful in our country is a sea of sand without water. For the sand moves and swells in waves in the manner of all seas, and is never still. This sea cannot be crossed either by boat or by any other method, and of what sort the land may be beyond it no one can know. And although water is absent entirely, nevertheless there are found on the shore on our side many kinds of fish more delicious and sweet-tasting than are ever seen anywhere else." Other wonders are related of the same region. For instance: "Into the Sandy sea itself flows, three days of the week, a river of stones without water, impassable while its flow continues. Beyond it lies another river, whose sands are mere precious stones; or sometimes this River of Gems flows through the Sandy sea, and is indeed the Sabbatic river, flowing six days and resting the seventh, which keeps the ten tribes of the Children of Israel from crossing into the land of Prester John. And in one part of the desert where the sea lies is a people with round feet, like horses' hoofs; and in another part is the land of Femenye itself," a land where none but women dwell, and they are "very stark and cruel"; and no man dare bide more than an hour.

Old Tales Not Far From Truth.

Strange as these stories sound, they are only slight perversions of the truth. During a recent visit to the Lop basin facts were observed which may perhaps explain all of them. For instance, when first one sees Chinese women of high class their diminutive feet are strangely suggestive of the hoofs of animals. As to the fable of the land of Femenye, there is nothing now to give rise to it directly. Marco Polo relates, however, that in his day in the region of Hami, not many hundred miles from Lop-Nor, none but women were found in the villages when caravans arrived. The men departed in order that the travelers might be more comfortable, and might be the more ready to pay for entertainment. Even today the people of Hami possess customs which seem to be a reminiscence of the ancient habit.

The Lop basin, in the very center of Asia, is a great depression, 14,000 miles long from east to west and 400 wide. Around it lies a ring of lofty plateaus from 10,000 to 20,000 feet high. At their base is a ring of piedmont gravel, almost destitute of life, and sloping gently inward like a huge beach from 5 to 40 miles wide. Then comes another ring, the zone of vegetation, where alone there are plants and an opportunity for human inhabitants other than the few nomads of the plateaus. Finally within the zone of vegetation lies a vast desert area about 1,000 miles long and 250 wide. Its western three-quarters consist of a veritable sea of sand, the Takla-Kakan desert, yellow or gray on the edges, pink in the inner portions. Row after row of almost impassable sand dunes has been piled up by the wind to heights of full 500 feet in places. The smallest dunes often move forward hundreds of feet in a year in the direction of the prevailing winds; the largest scarcely move at all. The sand is most beautiful, with its graceful sweep of wavy dunes and ripples, but the natives hate and fear it. It has proved the grave of many a native gone mad with thirst in the vain search for the gold supposed to lie hidden in sand-buried ruins.

A few rivers flow into the desert of Takla-Makan. Most of them soon wither to nothing. All are very variable, and some, such as the Vash Sheri, flow in raging, impassable torrents during sunny weather in summer, but dry up when cloudy days among the mountains prevent the melting of snow. The dry beds of these "Sabbatic" streams form veritable "rivers of stones." In certain cases one might almost say with the old chronicler that there are streams "whose sands are mere precious stones." When the Khotan and Keriya rivers are low, crowds of natives go out from the oases to dig in the gravel of the river bed for jade, one of the most highly prized of Chinese precious stones. Gold also is found in the upper parts of the beds of the Keriya and other rivers.

Sea of Salt Is a Marsh.

East of the Sea of Sand there lies a Sea of Salt, the bed of the ancient Lake of Lop-Nor. Today the lake is merely a marsh, fed by the Tarim river, and filled with huge reeds 12 to 15 feet high. Near the mouth of the river, where alone the water is fresh enough to support life, the Lopliks have planted their villages of reeds. Formerly, according to their own account, they lived wholly on fish and birds caught in the open lanes and pools of the swamp, where the fishermen still paddle their canoes of hollowed poplar. They cannot go far to the east, for there the swamp grows more and more saline, until finally it merges into a great plain of salt, the bed of the expanded lake of former times.

The old bed of Lop-Nor is one of the most absolute deserts in the world. Even the hardy natives never venture into it. For five days a caravan of Western explorers recently stumbled wearily over a sea of rock salt broken into huge polygons 10 or 12 feet in diameter, which had buckled up around the edges to a height of from one to three feet. It was like the choppiest sort of sea frozen solid. When what appeared to be soft places were selected in which to pitch tents, the iron tent pegs bent double. For 60 miles north and south and for nearly 200 east and west there is absolutely not a sign of any living thing.

It is relatively but a little while since Lop-Nor was much larger than now and expanded to such a size that most, if not all, of the old bed was covered by water, as is proved by the location of ancient roads and beaches. At the time of Christ, the lake appears to have been of large dimensions. Then it diminished in size, and about five centuries later was probably as small or smaller than it now is. Later it expanded, and with varying fluctuations remained comparatively large until about 1600 A. D. Now it has once more diminished, and the people who formerly were supported by it have largely died off. A century or two ago they used to carry fish two or three hundred miles eastward to the Chinese cities where Nestorian Christians lived in the days of Marco Polo and earlier. Now the desert has become so rigorous and the fish have so decreased in number that the traffic has been given up. The writer of the letters of Prester John was almost right when he said that fish were procured from the Sea of Sand. They certainly came from the border between it and the Sea of Salt.

In the last few years important finds have been made among the ruins of temples and cities in the edge of the deserts of Chinese Turkestan, over which sand has drifted. Caves, too, have been found in cliffs rimming the deserts, in which are elaborately carved and decorated shrines. The evidence so far uncovered indicates that the people who lived in the country before the Christian era had Indo-European languages and so are closely connected with Europeans. The religion of these early inhabitants was Buddhism, but later they were conquered by Moslems and Mohammedanism is now dominant. The finds even seem to indicate that it may have been from this region with its ancient thriving civilization that the ancestors of the Chinese came.

"How I Suffered with my Stomach and Catarrh of the Head"

Took Four bottles of PE-RU-NA and now cannot praise it enough

Miss Emelie A. Haberkorn, 2251 Gravois Ave., St. Louis, Mo., writes: "For over two years I was troubled with internal catarrh. I read a Pe-nu-na booklet and began taking the treatment. Tongue cannot describe how I suffered with my stomach and the catarrh in my head. I began to feel better as soon as I had used four bottles and now I cannot praise it enough. I now enjoy as good health as ever and would not think of doing without Pe-ru-na."

Dr. Hartman's famous remedy has become the standby in thousands of American homes for the relief of coughs, colds, catarrh and every catarrhal disease.

Insist upon genuine Pe-ru-na and enjoy satisfaction.

Tablets or liquid and sold everywhere.

Cleanly Spoken

The boy was home at last. He had tried his luck out West in the mines for five years, with little success. And now he was broke.

"John," cried his old mother, seizing both his hands in greeting, "you have hardly changed at all."

"I know, mother," he answered, in tremulous tones, "but there ain't no laundries out there."—Swamp Angel.

An Alabama Case

Mrs. J. A. Morris, Broad St., Guntersville, Ala., says: "When I stooped a catch seized me in my back and when I straightened I had sharp pains. I didn't rest well at night. Headaches were severe and I had dizzy spells, too. My kidneys acted too freely and I became nervous. I used two boxes of Doan's Pills and I was entirely cured."

NEVER WITHOUT BLACK-DRAUGHT

West Virginia Lady Uses It for Headache and Sour Stomach —"Nothing Like It," She Says.

Hurricane, W. Va.—Mrs. Ida Chaney, who lives on her fruitful farm not far from Big Hurricane creek, near here, made the following statement not long ago:

"My sons and I have used Black-Draught for a number of years and we are never without it. I use it for headache and sour stomach. When I eat something that sours, just a pinch of Black-Draught sets me straight.

"Not long ago I went to visit my sister in Ohio. I took a severe headache on the train. When I got to my sister's I sent for some Black-Draught and took a big dose. Next morning I felt fine and enjoyed my visit. My sister had never heard of Black-Draught, so she began taking it and says it is all I said it was.

"After the 'flu' my sons complained of their joints aching. They began taking Black-Draught and think there is nothing like it. They take it in broken doses every spring and are seldom sick.

"The other night my little grandson had a cold. I gave him a small dose of Black-Draught for two or three nights and he got all right. I can't say enough for it. I feel it has saved me dollars and suffering besides."

Sold everywhere. Try it.

Waits 42 Years to Get Even With Farmer

Center, N. Y.—After "laying" son Hartwell 42 years to "get n a gravel bed dicker, Sim Losalleged victim, has at last his revenge.

six months ago Sim purchased nse a black and white cow, the ration being $78. Sim tendered e. To protect his own interests sisted on a chattel mortgage cow, and the document, containing a minute description of the critter, was duly executed.

A little later Sim appeared at Anse's place leading the cow he had purchased.

"She don't jes suit me, Anse," he said. "I've kinder taken a fancy to that little red heifer of yours and propose an even trade."

Now this particular animal was lightly valued by Anse. It was undersized and of inferior breed. He welcomed the proposal to swap as he would the finding of buried treasure.

The note fell due and Anse demanded payment. Sim just "strung him along," as he now declares. Finally Anse threatened to foreclose on the chattel mortgage.

"Anse, you ain't got no chattel mortgage on my cow. You've got it plastered on a black and white cow that is in your own pasture at this moment. So I guess we'll let the note jes run along. Are you a-lookin' fer any more gravel beds?"

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

Our Day's Work

THE Southern Railway System is producing more than 100,000 ton-miles of freight transportation in the five minutes you spend reading this advertisement.

A ton-mile, the yardstick of freight service, is a ton moved one mile. For example, hauling 100,000 tons a mile equals a hundred thousand ton-miles.

It is a big day's work that an 8,300 mile railway system, with 60,000 employees, does every twenty-four hours. Our average daily performance in 1923 shows these results:

Trains operated	1,250
Distance run by trains	120,000 miles
Passengers carried	50,000
Freight loaded on our lines and received from other railroads	8,000 carloads
Freight movement	32,000,000 ton-miles
Coal burned by locomotives	14,000 tons
Wages paid	$220,000
Materials and supplies purchased	$135,000
Taxes paid	$ 26,000

If you will multiply any of these items by 365 the result will be a year's performance on the Southern Railway System.

The prosperity of millions of people in the twelve states served by the Southern depends on the faithful and efficient performance of our day's work.

THE SOUTHERN SR SERVES THE SOUTH

BETTER EGGS; BETTER MARKET

(By A. A. Lauderdale, County Agent.)

Production of eggs in Alabama in 1923, was 28,390,000 dozen, of which 17 per uent, or approximately 4,8000,000 dozen were never consumed, according to John E. Ivey, Poultry Specialist for the Extension Service. A very large per cent of this loss can be prevented. The major portion of it was due to fertile eggs, which can be avoided ny penning, slaughtering and selling male birds. Either should be done as soon as the hatching season is over.

Aside from the actual loss of eggs, fertile eggs cause a much lower price to be received for those that are sold. The difference in the prices of fertile and infertile eggs on a discriminating market is placed at 10 cents a dozen in favor of infertile eggs.

The cost of keeping a male bird one year is figured at $2.50, which is an enormous total for the 2469 farms of Shelby county, if there is an average of only one male bird to the farm.

We do not advise killing or selling male birds that will be needed for breeding purposes, but such should be penned except during the hatching season. All scrub and mongrel roosters should be killed or sold immediately and replaced with good purebreds before another hatching season begins.

Under existing egg marketing practices little or no premium is paid for high quality eggs. They are bought from producers on a "hog-round" basis, and in that way the producer of good eggs is penalized in order to take care of inferior eggs.

Another weakness of the present egg marketing method is that it is cumbersome and burdensome in that eggs do not go by the shortest and most economical route from the producer to the consumer. It is believed that a cooperative egg marketing association which is now proposed by the Alabama Farm Bureau will bring about needed improvements and thereby benefit both producers and consumers. For this reason, the county agent and other extension service workers will assist farmers in organizing and operating this association.

Wants the News of the "Old Home Town."

The people of Vincent are again reminded, this time by a letter from G. M. Smothers, Nocatee, Fla of how eagerly their friends in other states who take the Reporter look each week for news from the "old home town."

Mr. Smothers writes: "The Reporter comes every week and I enjoy it a great deal, but it does seem strange that there is never any Vincent news in it. I am certain there are people at Vincent who are quite capable of writing locals, and I should enjoy seeing them in the paper every week."

German Birth Custom.

In Germany it is considered necessary that a child should "go up" before it goes down in the world, so it is carried upstairs as soon as born. In case there are no stairs the nurse mounts a table or chair with the infant.

Paper Is Made From Refuse of Sugar Cane

The manufacture of paper from bagasse, the dry refuse of sugar cane after the juice has been expressed, has often been advocated, but never accomplished on a commercial scale. The increased cost of wood pulp has stimulated experiments for solving this problem. It has long been known that excellent paper can be made from sugar cane fiber, but the difficulty has been to preserve the fiber intact while extracting the juice for sugar making. The present machinery cuts and tears the fiber so that the bagasse is fit only for fuel.

Some time ago there was organized in Cuba a company which has constructed a large plant to make a practical test of a patented process for expressing the juice and conserving the fiber and pulp for paper. The fiber is separated from the pulp by machinery, and then by evaporation the water is eliminated, leaving the dry fiber and pulp containing the solids and sucrose, from which sugar is made. The fiber and pulp are then baled separately for shipment to the United States, where the sugar is extracted by diffusion.

By this treatment the fiber is uninjured and can be used in making high-grade paper at a considerable saving, as compared with the cost of wood pulp. The residue from the pulp is also suitable for low-grade paper. It is claimed that the preliminary tests have proved successful and that, in addition to preserving the bagasse for paper manufacture, a larger percentage of sucrose is obtained than is possible by the old methods of extraction in sugar houses.

Advice Taken

A young married woman of Princeton had received letters from a young woman of Louisville, her chum, advising her on two important matters, the removal of her young son's tonsils and certain advantages accruing from bobbed hair.

The Louisville friend had about come to the conclusion that her advice had been wasted when she received this laconic message:

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Should Use Swamp-Root

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Matronly Poise Expressed in Hats; Charming Knitted Sports Dress

ONLY lack of judgment can account for the possession of an unflattering hat this season. Shapes, colors, trimmings are so varied and so carefully calculated to enhance the good looks of women that there is a hat for every head to be found somewhere within the boundaries of the mode. And even more important than keeping within the mode and up with it in millinery, is the matter of becomingness.

It takes the best quality of talent to make headwear that expresses the poise and brilliancy and charm that belong to those whom the years have enriched and therefore specialists devote their time to the designing of hats for matrons. This field of endeavor is so wide that some designers give all their attention to hats for elderly women, while others occupy themselves with the needs of younger matrons. In the group of four hats shown here there are two for women of middle life and two for older wearers. The lovely hat at the top is of hair braid in orchid color trimmed with gorgeous silk tulips and long velvet petals very richly tinted in orchid and other colors. Just below a fine black milan in a spirited shape is faced with white crepe. The brim is curiously shaped and one-half of the hat is covered with white lilies-of-the-valley.

Two black hats are shown for older women, one of them of silk, suggests a tricorn shape, abundantly trimmed with huge rosettes of hair braid and a bar pin of rhinestones. In the other hat a milan shape, with drooping brim, is swathed with malines having a narrow braid stitched to it to support it. Two loops of the malines make the smart trimming at the right side.

But hats for older women are by no means confined to black. The fashionable new greens, blues and browns are much exploited in them.

As to the pretty clothes question, what more fascinating solution than is being offered to the world of fashion these days through the medium of knitted outerwear? An all-inclusive program from sturdy sports wear to filmy lace-like evening dress is the record of achievement for our modern knitted art.

The very latest contribution to modes beautiful is the pastel colored knitted party frock, an airy-fairy creation delicate as a cobweb in its exquisite openwork stitch. It is predicted that the coming summer will witness a widespread vogue for these lovely, colorful, knitted, one-piece dresses.

Interpreting the practical through the picturesque is notably the accomplishment of Twentieth century knitted genius. Consider, for instance, the charming knitted costume portrayed herewith. This smart sports dress is knitted in pearl gray and its adorable brilliant plaid cape is detachable. Think what it means from the utility standpoint to have in one's wardrobe a demure knitted frock which in the twinkling of an eye becomes a stunning sports costume with the adjustment of a colorful cape. Of course we will all be wanting a knitted ensemble just such as this wherein the practical is so admirably achieved through the picturesque.

If not a cape with every dress, then a scarf, for fashion's affection is divided between the two. The possibilities in the scarf-to-match dress are limitless and in its creation imagination has embarked on flights of gayest fancy. Roman stripes, plaids, vivid embroidered motifs, bold interknit contrasting design, and above all monogram embellishment, give to these scarfs a spectacular aspect which adds greatly to the picture of feminine garb.

The versatility of knitted outerwear is further attested in that fashions of the hour include knitted two-piece suits severely tailored and ultra-conservative as to street shades. Boyish jackets in these knitted suits emphasize notched collars, and single link or double-breasted closings. Black and white is a favored theme throughout the realm of knitted modes.

Lesson for May 4

ASSYRIAN EXILE OF ISRAEL

LESSON TEXT—II Kings 17:1-18.

GOLDEN TEXT—"I will delight myself in Thy statutes: I will not forget Thy word."—Ps. 119:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How a Little Girl Helped a Great Soldier.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Israel Driven Into Exile.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Nation Punished for Its Sins.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lessons From Israel's Downfall.

I. Israel Taken Into Captivity (vv. 1-6).

This was in fulfillment of that which Amos had predicted in the days of Jeroboam II at a time when the nation was at the height of its prosperity. The northern kingdom was ruled by nineteen kings, all of whom were wicked. Their wickedness was not because of lack of information or opportunity but in spite of it. God promised the first king His blessing if he would be loyal to Him. Jeroboam departed from God and the apostasy thus begun continued downward to the end. In the reign of Hoshea, the last king, the king of Assyria came and besieged Samaria and carried the children of Israel captive to Assyria, from which they never returned.

II. The Sins Which Caused Their Doom (vv. 7-18).

1. Conformed to the Ways of the Heathen (vv.7-9). God had commanded them not to follow in the ways of the heathen, but these Israelites, instead of maintaining lives of separation, secretly did that which was displeasing to God. Secret sins, as surely as open sins, bring ruin, for all things are naked and open to Him with whom we have to do. The One who visits judgment upon the sinner knows all things.

2. Serve Idols (vv. 10-17). They not only compromised by "walking in the statutes of the heathen," but worshiped their gods. It was a short step from following in the statutes of the heathen to worshiping their gods. Before they worshiped idols they cast off the true God. Indeed idolatry came into the world because the race did not wish to retain God in its affections (Romans 1:21-23). Idolatry did not come in through ignorance but through willful perverseness. People today worshiping false gods have first cast off the authority of the living God. Man is a religious being. When he ceases to worship the true God he worships other gods.

3. They Were Rebellious (vv. 13-15). God by his prophets has said unto them, "Turn ye from your evil ways, and keep my commandments," but they stubbornly refused His testimony, even rejected His statutes. God in love tried to save them. He sent some of the noblest and best prophets who ever spoke to men to persuade them to turn from their sins, such as Elijah and Elisha, but they stiffened their necks and plunged deeper into wickedness. This they did in defiance of God.

4. Caused Their Sons and Daughters to Pass Through Fire (v 17). This was the dreadful Molech worship, the most cruel rite of heathen worship. It was done by kindling a fire in a hollow metal image until its arms were red hot and placing live children therein to be burned to death. This was the depth to which the Israelites had sunk.

5. Resorted to Magical Practices (v. 17). When faith in the true God wanes men always turn to the magical arts. In this way the Israelites sold themselves to evil in the sight of the Lord and provoked Him to anger.

III. The Judgment Falls (v. 18).

At this stage of the drama the curtain dropped. God could not be inactive longer.

1. God Was Very Angry. His anger is not raving fury but the revulsion of His holy nature against sin. God cannot tolerate sin in His presence. His wrath must strike. Though He waits long, the debt must be paid and that always with compound interest. There is only one way to escape God's wrath; that is to turn from sin unto God through Jesus Christ.

2. Remove Them Out of His Sight. The land of Palestine is regarded as the land of God's sight—that is, the place of His manifested presence. These people are still scattered among the nations and as a political organization they will never return to their land. The judgment was severe, but not more so than the sins merited. God had waited long. The despising of His grace eventually works ruin. Therefore, what judgment must fall upon the people who in the light of this day reject His grace and His mercy.

Practical Christianity

"Go," never spells "Stay." We need more religion in the s-o-l-e, as well as in the soul—a walking as well as a talking religion. The trouble is not so much with non-church-going masses, as the non-going church. We need not only a lookout committee but a "Go-out" committee.—H. G. Gibbud.

It's Easy to Pay For a Chevrolet

Everybody wants an automobile.
Everybody can pay for a Chevrolet.
Everybody can afford to own a Chevrolet.
You can buy a Chevrolet just as you buy any other important necessity. Not one family in a thousand pays cash in full for a home. They make a substantial down payment, then pay off the mortgage with what they used to pay for rent, plus other savings.
A Chevrolet can be bought just as you buy a stationary home. It earns its own way and you ride while you pay.
It is the best paying investment any family can make because it provides transportation, saves time, and makes all outdoors your playground, bringing health and happiness to the whole family.
There is a Chevrolet dealer near you. Ask him to show you the different models and explain how easy it is to get, use and pay for the one you want.

Seeks Old Sweetheart

An almost daily visitor at Doctors' Commons, Knightrider street, is an old man who is determined to find out if a sweetheart of his youth ever married, says a London (Eng.) dispatch. For weeks he searched the records without revealing his object, but one day he said that many years ago he was engaged to marry and had obtained the license, but the wedding never took place. Having made a fortune, he now desires to trace his former fiancee and atone for her disappointment of years ago.

OUR

CANDIDATES' COLUMN

Conducted By

B. O. BOWERS, Campaign Manager.

Campaign members residing in the rural districts or nearby towns should mail their re ports each day as they collect for subscriptions, using a bank draft of money order.

All reports should be addre ssed to B. O. Bowers, Campaign Manager, Box 22, Columbiana, Alabama.

Receipt books, report blanks, envelopes, sample copies of the Reporter, etc., can be secured any time by writing to the campaign manager for them, or by calling at office and getting them.

SECOND PAYMENTS

During the Second Period second payment on subscriptions given during the first period will count, for the extension, on the basis of the first period vote schedule.

Go to those who have already subscribed in the first period and get them to extend their subscriptions another year and benefit by the "extension privilege."

SECOND PAYMENTS COUNT BIG

Some of the candidates in this campaign are forcing themselves to believe that the whole county has been scoured for subscriptions to the Reporter, but those candidates are radically wrong in their opinion. Not half the territory has yet been touched. Just because your immediate vicinity seems to have been worked, is a poor sign that the whole county has been done likewise. Those communities that now offer the richest field of endeavor from now until May 10th are Columbiana Route 1, Acton, Aldrich, Chelsea, Harpersville, Leeds, Montevallo, Montevallo Route 1, Roebuck, Sterrett, Underwood, Vincent and Routes, Route 1, Wilsonville, Helena, etc. After this campaign has ended on May 10th there will be hundreds of people who weren't even asked to subscribe for the Reporter during the campaign, who would be glad to subscribe to help you win an automobile if you will just stir about and see them; they won't come to you. It's up to you, candidates, to put a lot of pep and energy into the remaining eight days if you anticipate winning anything at all.

Have all subscriptions and ad cards sold and reported before Saturday night, as the votes decrease drastically after this week. The last count by the campaign manager will be Saturday night; then just one more count which will be held by the judges. If you want to top the list in this last public standing do some whirlwind work in the next two days. The ballot box will be placed in the lobby of the Columbiana Savings Bank on Monday, and candidates will be expected to turn all their reports and reserve votes into this blind, sealed box, which will not be opened until May 10th. Candidates who desire to mail in their reports next week will make a note on the outside of the envelope "For Ballot Box" and same will be deposited without opening, in the ballot box by the manager. This method insures fairness and impartiality to all. No candidate can claim that, with the course of this campaign, they were given any more assistance or information than others.

Bear in mind that second payments on subscriptions still count on the basis of First Period votes up to Saturday night. For instance another 1-year subscription from a former subscriber will give you 6,500 votes. Go to those who have subscribed from you before. They who are your friends once in this campaign will not refuse you at the time when you most need their support.

No personal checks for more than $10 will be accepted in the ballot box next week. Checks for more than $10 must be certified, or they will be thrown out by the judges, and the votes issued for same cancelled. Don't forget this.

Any candidate in this campaign who entertains an idea that their present supply of reserve votes is sufficient to insure them winning one of the automobiles is doomed to disappointment on May 10th. You can't get too many votes. All the regrets in the world will be of no avail after the campaign ends if you, by wasting a few minutes, could have secured the necessary subscription or sold another ad. card, that would have made you the winner of the first prize. From this minute on time is precious—time is limited—time will bring victory or defeat for you. Which will it be? It's up to you!

VICTORY FOR SOME ONE JUST AROUND CORNER

Shelby County Reporter's Campaign Closes At 8 P M Saturday

Six weeks of effort and suspense will culminate at the Columbiana Savings Bank, of Columbiana, Saturday night at 8 o'clock sharp, when the Reporter's Salesmanship Club and Prize Campaign comes to an end.

In the extra issue Monday appeared the names of candidates who will be richly rewarded before Saturday's dawn. Among the members listed one will have more votes than competitors, one will win the Grand Capital Prize—the new $800 four-door Ford Sedan.

The candidate who is second is to be handsomely rewarded, for to him or her will be given a new 1924 model Ford Touring car, valued at $370.50.

This newspaper has urged candidates to do their best right along and now it wishes to lay particular stress on the necessity of looking the situation squarely in the face, and to realize that it will be essential to put forth supreme effor between now and the finish; especially on the part of those who would win the capital prize. it is a close race.

Over-confidence has lost many battles. Relaxation at this stage of the game is suicidal to success. Determination to win, coupled with relentless activity in vote-getting will make any candidate a winner. Whatever is to be done MUST BE DONE NOW. To temporize is to let some competitor sweep ahead and claim the prize that should be yours.

With the ballot box locked and sealed in the lobby of the Columbiana Savings Bank, the campaign manager is as much in the dark as to who the winner will be as the most casual readers, which makes the finish extremely interesting as well as exciting.

CAN'T HAVE TOO MANY VOTES

Don't flatter yourself that you already have enough votes to win either the first, second or third prizes, for you haven't. Don't think for a moment that three million votes or so will be enough to win for they won't. There is more than one candidate in that class right now, and before the final scenes are enacted you can expect to see those figures greatly enlarged. Don't take a single chance of losing the prize you most desire. What if you should fall short a hundred thousand votes, or so, representing a mere handful of subscriptions? And that is what will happen unless you put forth every effort now.

RACE STILL ANYONE'S

Candidates are so closely bunched that anyone of the real contenders can win. It is far too close to be safe for the leaders. Just fifteen 5-year subscriptions will give any competitor over half a million votes And think what 25 5-year subscriptions will do.

SPECIAL NOTICE

The ballot box, locked and sealed, is now at the Columbiana Savings Bank, where subscriptions and advertising cards, with remittances to cover, in sealed envelopes, are being deposited by the candidates themselves.

Not one, not even the campaign manager, whose official duties ended last Saturday, can possibly know the voting strength of the candidates. The sealed ballot box insures secrecy and there is no possible way for anyone to gain inside information. No candidate can truthfully claim partiality or favoritism.

All subscriptions must be accompanied by money order, bank draft or cash for the full amount of ad cards and subscriptions. Only personal checks up to $10 acceptable, providing no two checks are signed by the same party or firm. This is done in fairness to all candidates and will be strictly adhered to.

The campaign will close at 8 o'clock on the dot. All reports and reserve votes MUST be in the ballot box at that time. Not one minute's grace will be allowed. Therefore, be sure to poll everything you have—subscriptions and reserve votes, if any, before 8 o'clock Saturday, May 10.

THE JUDGES

The folloming well-nown ladies and gentlemen have been requested to make the final count.

Mr. L. E. Christian, merchant; Chairman of Board; Mrs. L. B. Riddle, Mrs. Oliver Miles, Rev. John Milner, pastor of Presbyterian church; Mr. F. G. Koenig, attorney at law; Mr. W. F. Davis, president Columbiana Savings Bank.

Now for a whilrwind finish—now for sensations and surprises. With the zero hour but two days away it is imperative that candidates go over the top with flying colors.

It will be impossible to accommodate the public in the bank at the final count. Announcements of the winners will be made at the Reporter office immediately following the judges' decision—probably about 9 o'clock.

THE STANDING TODAY

As has prevailed throughout the campaign, the four leaders remain deadlocked for first honors, and

She was fully reconciled to the call, for the whole of her long life had been spent in making preparation to be ready. One who knew her well said just a few days before the news of her death came, "Aunt Jane was a Christian woman if there ever was one." She was a life-long member of the Baptist church.

The funeral, held at Rocky Ridge chlrch Tuesday, was conducted by Rev. R. L. Durant, assisted by other ministers, and was attended by a large number of friends.

Besides his wife, a bride of one year, he is survived by his parents, brothers and sisters.

The funeral service was conducted at the home of his father-in-law in North Birmingham and interment made in Elmwood cemetery.

Reasons Why Shelby County Citizens Should Vote for

JOHN A DARDEN

FOR

CIRCUIT JUDGE

FIRST—He is qualified by experience, education, temperament and character for the office.

SECOND—He is in no wise connected or associated in the practice of the law with any member of the Shelby Bar, nor does he represent any interest in Shelby county that in the least would disqualify him from meting out justice to all parties alike.

THIRD—He will run the circuit court of Shelby county on a business-like and systematic basis, disposing of all matters as rapidly as possible consistent with justice.

Fourth—He will clear the docket of Shelby county Circuit Court by holding special terms of court at leisure seasons so farmers may attend as witnesses and jurors without such a sacrifice to their business.

FIFTH—He will take out the lost motion in running the court; too much time is frequently lost on immeterial matters, not sufficient time is put in real work in the court each day.

SIXTH—He will instruct the Clerk to set only sufficient number of cases for each day's work so that parties and witnesses in other cases will not have to attend court when there is no possibilty of reaching their cases.

SEVENTH—He will use his influence to see that every qualified man to serve on the jury has his name placed in the jury box; jury service being a privilege as well as a duty of citizenship.

EIGHTH—He stands for the due orderly enforcement of all our laws on all persons alike without discrimination.

NINTH—Coosa county has not had any officer of the Circuit, much less a judge, since the creation of the circuit, while Clay has had two and Shelby two judges and now Shelby has all the circuit officials. Should not Coosa have the next judge?

TENTH—He has run his own campaign, on his own resources, and has not sent out men and women over the circuit to appeal for support to certain classes or organizations, and if nominated and elected will be under no obligation to any one except to the entire population of the circuit.

ELEVENTH—He is the only candidate for Circuit Judge who has made any concrete statements as to how he expected to conduct the courts, and he will carry out the same to the very best of his ability, if honored with the office.

If you believe in the above principles, or the majority of them, then work and vote for the nomination of John A. Darden for Circuit Judge and see them carried out.

COMMISSION HAS NO AUTHORITY

ATTORNEY GENERAL DECIDES STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSION WITHOUT AUTHORITY IN ERECTING BILL BOARDS.

Montgomery.—When the state takes over the land of an individual for the right-of-way of a public road, such a taking does not give the state the right to allow the erection of advertising billboards on the lands, it has been held by Judge A. A. Evans, assistant attorney general of the state. This opinion has been rendered by Judge Evans at the request of John A. Rogers, chairman of the state highway commission.

In his letter that requested this opinion from the attorney general's office Chairman Rogers stated that the board of administration had entered into contract with the Alabama Highways Advertising company, Inc., to put markers on the highways and also to allow them to erect billboards along the right-of-way. Chairman Rogers further stated that rules and regulations had been adopted for the erection of road markers and advertising signs, giving the company named the exclusive right to advertise along the highways.

This question, a short while ago, was brought to a head by the action of Gray Henderson, landowner of Elmore county, who removed advertising signs from his property through which runs the right-of-way of the Montgomery-Wetumpka road from Judkins Ferry bridge over the Tallapoosa river to Wetumpka. The state highway commission ordered Mr. Henderson to restore the signs.

According to the decision of the attorney generals' office the state highway commission has no authority to contract with a third party, granting him the right to erect mercantile advertisement boards on lands conveyed by a property owner as a right-of-way for a public road, without the consent of the land owner.

DENBY'S HONESTY NOT QUESTIONED

CONCLUSIVE FACTS ABOUT HIS APPOINTMENT AND THE OIL LAND TRANSFER IDEA.

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Washington.—Washington seems to think today that former Secretary Denby has done rather a big thing in accepting the responsibility, as he has, for the suggestion that the jurisdiction over the naval oil fields should be transferred from the Department of the Navy to the Department of the Interior.

Everybody here, irrespective of party, who knows him believes that Denby's word is a straight word, and everybody here also knows that if the transfer of jurisdiction was not in contemplation until after Edwin Denby had been named as secretary of the navy, some of the suspicion that Secretary Fall early in the game was contemplating the giving of the leases to certain interests for possible personal profit is removed from the field.

If anybody thinks that Denby on his own account thought on this matter of transferring the jurisdiction for some time prior to his entrance into office and was a party to a scheme to give the leases into hands which would transfer them to other hands, another thought should come quickly. In his Adrian (Mich.) speech the former secretary of the navy said that his appointment to the post was "somewhat unexpected, and was not announced until about February 25. Therefore there was no collusion as to any acts to be performed by me—although even that insinuation has been made."

It Was Wholly Unexpected.

The writer of this is able to say something definite about this matter. Mr. Denby could have gone further in his statement than he did and told the exact truth. He said that his appointment was "somewhat unexpected." This way of putting it was a mere matter of the phrasing of the incident. He could have said "wholly unexpected," for he had absolutely no knowledge that he was even being considered for the post until he was asked to go to Florida to consult with President-elect Harding, and this invitation southward was not extended until ten days or possibly less before Mr. Harding took office as president.

There was definite knowledge in Washington ten days prior to the inauguration of Harding March 4, 1921, of the names of all of the men who were to hold cabinet positions except the name of him who was to be chosen to the navy post. A dozen men had been mentioned as possible appointees to that secretaryship, but there was no definite information concerning the man likely to be chosen. Denby had not been so much as mentioned even in the press, excepting in one or two Michigan papers, which for local pride considerations had said editorially that he would be a good man for the place. Not one word had come from the president-elect nor from anyone close to him which gave a hint as to the possible selection of Denby. His name was not given consideration in the news sent out by any of the Washington correspondents. He was aloof from the field of thought and even of speculation.

Just two weeks before the inauguration of President Harding I called on a man who already had been named for a position in the Harding cabinet and who still is a member of the cabinet. I said to this man, who it was known was to sit in the cabinet:

"Everybody knows the names of all the new President's cabinet officers except the man who is to head the Navy department. The names of a dozen men have been suggested and seemingly one of them is to get the job, but which one nobody knows."

First Intimation of Denby.

In response this was said to me by the man on whom I was calling:

"Yes, it is true that the names of a dozen men have been mentioned as possible appointees to the navy job, but there is one name that has not been mentioned. It is that of Edwin Denby of Detroit."

I didn't wait to prolong the conversation, but made a quick trip to my office and in a newspaper dispatch I said that Edwin Denby of Detroit, one-time member of the house committee on naval affairs and one-time member of the Marine corps of the United States, would in all human probability be the next secretary of the navy. This was the first intimation that the country had that none of the men publicly named as possible appointees was to get the job and that it almost assuredly was to go to Denby of Detroit. To be exact in dates, that pronouncement of Denby and the navy portfolio was made by me February 21, 1921. As memory has it, it was on the night of that day, or certainly not later than the next day, that Denby received his invitation to go to Florida to consult with President-elect Harding.

When Edwin Denby came to Washington to take his place as secretary of the navy he said to me: "You knew that I was to be offered the secretaryship of the navy before I knew it myself."

This seems to fix things pretty definitely as far as it concerns any suggested charges that Denby of Detroit had any thought in advance of entering his office of turning over the jurisdiction of the oil lands to the Department of the Interior.

Alien Law Provisions.

It was the unexpected which happened in the United States senate when endorsement came to the house provision in the immigration bill to make the appointment of those to be admitted 2 per cent with the basis on the census of 1890, instead of 1910 as several of the senators seemed determined should be the case.

If this bill shall become a law through the signature of the President it will mean that only about 150,000 aliens each year, for three years at least, can be admitted to the United States. This is less than one-half of the number admitted during the present year, a number which represents a marked decrease from the numbers of former years.

The debate in both house and senate on the immigration bill was not only sharp but in some cases bitter. There were representatives and senators who declared openly that the intention of the legislation was to discriminate against immigrants from the south and east of Europe in behalf of the immigrants from the north of Europe. Racial and religious prejudices were charged and prediction freely was made that the bill would cause resentment in several countries over the sea, one or two of which are powerful countries whose resentment ought not to be incurred.

Good Reasons for Restriction.

The causes for the endorsement of drastic restrictive provisions in the immigration bill are not far to seek. Census returns show that hundreds of thousands of the aliens who have been admitted have refused to become naturalized Americans and that the tendency has been for the incomers to congregate together and to form racial groups in this country, declining in many cases even so much as to make an attempt to understand American affairs or to take any part in American life as Americans pursue it.

Before the immigration bill was passed it was apparent that in Italy the press and the public were resentful because of what they interpreted to be an anti-Italian feeling in the provisions of the measure. For some years Italian immigration into the United States was flood-like. It is said today that there are more persons of Italian birth or Italian parentage in New York city than there are in Rome, Italy. Next year, if the present bill shall receive the President's signature, only about 21,000 Italians can come to the United States. In the present year it was understood that 42,000 were given admission. A few years ago there was no limit and the Italians came as they willed.

The immigration measure, as it has been endorsed, will prevent many Jews from entering the United States. The Jews of America actively were opposed to the drastic restriction provisions, holding that many of their race who had looked to America as a home for the religiously oppressed might be compelled to face persecution in other lands. There was a good deal of sympathy, and there still is a good deal, for this plea of the Jews, voiced as it is by the leading men of their race in this country including scores of scholarly rabbis of the Jewish congregations.

Our Right to Act Unquestioned.

It has been noted, however, that in all the comment in the foreign press adverse to the restriction features of the immigration measure, no suggestion has been made that the United States has not a perfect right to settle for itself the question at issue. Even the Japanese, who are now very much disturbed because of the probability that there will be an actual exclusion provision against their race, have not suggested that this country has not a right to decide the question of who shall be admitted and who shall not be, but of course the Japanese case is different from that of any other country except China.

There is nothing in the immigration bill which says that no man of this nationality or of that nationality shall be allowed to enter the United States to become a citizen thereof, except in the case of the Japanese who, under the Constitution, are not eligible to citizenship. It always has been believed that if this country should insert a provision in an immigration bill that no subject or citizen of this or that European country should be admitted into our ports, war almost instantly would result. No white nation of course would be likely to accept an intimation that its whites were not as good as the whites of any other country.

This year immigration legislation, therefore, so far as Europe is concerned, makes no direct discrimination as between white races. It simply provides a basis upon which the percentage of admissions are to be computed. It happens that this percentage will allow more men of some nations to come in than men of other nations, and this is all there is to it.

This Bear Life-Saver

In years gone by the Companion has published some striking bear stories, but none more remarkable perhaps than the true story of Napoleon, the life-saving bear that recently died in Texas. Napoleon was a black bear that a rancher raised from a cub, and that grew up as a pet of the rancher's children. When he was three years old Napoleon plunged into a swift stream to rescue one of the children from drowning, and three times afterwards he helped to save drowning persons, one of whom was a full grown man.—Youth's Companion.

Lesson for May 11

JEHOIADA'S VICTORY OVER BAAL

LESSON TEXT—II Kings 11:1-18.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of His might."—Eph. 6:10.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Kind Woman Saves a Baby King.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Story of a Boy King.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—God's Hand in Human Affairs.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Jehoiada Meant to Judah.

Joash, viewed in the light of his ancestors, was a poor prospect for a king. His grandmother was the wicked Athaliah and his great-grandparents were Ahab and Jezebel. There was enough bad blood in his veins to assure his doom. Despite this fact, he brought about some noble reforms and turned the people back to God.

I. Athaliah Usurps the Throne. (vv. 1-3).

1. Her Attempt to Destroy the Seed Royal (v. 1). In order to remove any rightful claimant to the throne she tried to kill all the royal male children. The act was not of sudden impulse, but of deliberate purpose.

2. Joash Preserved by Jehosheba (vv. 2, 3). Though Athaliah was keen eyed, she was checkmated by another woman. This woman, the wife of the priest, stole away this child and hid him away in a bedchamber for six years. God had promised that through the Davidic line the Messiah should come. In order that this line be unbroken Joash must be preserved. No purpose of God can fail.

II. Joash Crowned King (vv. 4-12).

1. Jehoiada's Preparations (vv. 4-11). The high priest and his wife were strong characters. As the high priest, Jehoiada felt that it was his duty to thwart the heathen project of Athaliah. His wife's co-operation made possible the saving of Joash.

(1) Seeks the aid of the military leaders (v. 4). He knew somehow that these men were not loyal to Athaliah.

(2) He took an oath of them in the house of the Lord (v. 4). He bound them to their agreement by every available means.

(3) He incited their spirit of patriotism (v. 4). He gave them a sight of the king's son. This, no doubt, was a great surprise. Now, having seen the heir to the throne, they would risk everything, even their lives, in order to set him on the throne.

(4) He co-ordinates all matters (vv. 5-11). The soldiers were divided into companies and arms were distributed to them. Each group was assigned to specific duties.

2. The Coronation (v. 12).

(1) The king's son brought forth. This was a great day in Jerusalem.

(2) Put the crown upon him. This was the formal induction into office.

(3) Gave him the testimony. This was a copy of the law indicating that the king was to rule according to the law of God. The act of putting the law on his head showed that the king himself would be under control of the law.

(4) Made him king. This shows that he had been made king by the choice of the people.

(5) Anointed him. They poured oil upon his head. This was the usual method of consecrating prophets, priests and kings.

(6) Clapped their hands. This was a token of joy. The deed being done, they were ready to publicly proclaim it. They shouted "Long live the king."

III. Athaliah Slain (vv. 13-17).

1. The Noise of the Coronation of Joash Brought Athaliah to the Temple (v. 13). Up to this time she thought her place on the throne was secure and that her heathen religion had free course.

2. Her Doom (v. 14). Upon her arrival at the temple she saw the king wearing the crown and surrounded by guards so that she could do nothing. In her despair she exclaimed "Treason, treason." This was not treason, but the triumph of right over wrong—the defeat of conspiracy and plotting.

3. Athaliah Executed (vv. 15, 16). The orders were that she should not be killed in the temple. They led her out by the way of the horses' entrance to the king's palace and slew her. What a tragic end for the sinner. Sin can only prosper for a time.

IV. Worship of the People (vv. 17, 18).

Joash was seven years old when he was made king. The high priest made a covenant between the Lord, the king and the people that they would be the Lord's people. In carrying out this covenant they broke down the temple of Baal and slew the priests of Baal.

When Success Fails

There is no failure more heartbreaking and disastrous than success which leaves God out of the bargain. If you are simply setting out in life to amass mere material success, fame created or position gained, then success will be the most dismal and disastrous failure.—G. Campbell Morgan.

By LAURA MILLER

A WOMAN WHO COUNTS

Nellie Brewer Price is an accurate person, whose youthful handwriting is balanced by dignified letter-paper. The letter bears the heading: "State of California, Department of Finance, Sacramento."

Of all the artistic and professional and business women met or written to, she's the first one who refuses to be beguiled into any opinions on her own career or that of "Miss Average Girl." So, though it goes against the grain for me to so much as make the right change for a dollar, I'll try to be accurate, too! And as a matter of fact there's enough romance in a mere letterhead, with Nellie Brewer Price's name second in the list of four persons—all otherwise of masculine persuasion—who make up the board of control of that marvelous country known as California. But again I stand corrected because Mrs. Price insists there haven't been any outstanding events in her career.

There was a university education. (To some of us a real event.) Followed a job in her father's fire insurance office—because he was in ill health. (What wouldn't many a girl give to be able to help father?) During that time she took up shorthand and learned bookkeeping (whether with difficulty, at night school, or as part of the day's work, her unromantic self doesn't say). Across the hall was a lawyer. He taught Nellie Brewer Price law in exchange for stenographic work. (Again that vain wonder about night study!)

For the sake of accuracy she acknowledges that she was the first woman admitted to the bar in New Mexico. (What sort of cases came to the first woman lawyer in that state so much a part of us, yet so close to old Mexico? She doesn't tell!) Los Angeles drew her with positions in the woman's city police court, then in a law-enforcement organization, and next in the Taxpayers' Association of California. The last kept her at work four years, compiling a digest of all laws affecting state boards and offices in California. The knowledge thus gained gave her special fitness for the work she now does as chief of the division of budgets and accounts. The general budget for all state expenditures, which she recently prepared and submitted to the legislature, that financial scheme on which the state will be run for the two years to come, totals $116,000,000.

Remember the small boys who used scornfully to announce, "Aw, girls can't count"? For obvious reasons the girl Laura Miller used to be had no retort. But think what a small army of Nellie Prices could say!

THE PLACE OF THE GOOD TRADE

Have you ever heard a girl cry: "Oh, I can't be myself in this horrid little town! I'd stay here if there were any way for a girl to develop her own individuality"?

"It's the individuality that one can develop in such a place as this," says Carolyn Requarth, "that makes up the most interesting thing about being and working here—individuality that the average girl cannot possibly create in a big city." She owns an interesting shop, which some 50,000 people visit annually. The business association of her county recently picked her as representative of good salesmanship. And when it comes to cold figures, she can point to a business that has quadrupled since she took it over. It's pure coincidence, of course, that the Indians named Ottawa, where she set up shop, "The Place of the Good Trade." Two things—one subjective and one objective, as the psychologists say—started her off right. She undertook a "musical census" and found out that she had that secret of approaching people which makes a salesman a success. Then her manager took an interest in developing her ability. He practically forced her to go to selling musical accessories because he knew it was a thing she was fitted for. She thought there was "no future in it." But she persevered.

Two years of training followed, partly in smaller shops where responsibility rested on her own shoulders. By this time, she says she had determined to win in this field. She discovered that a business in her own name meant more money and more enjoyment. Her chance came to take over a victrola shop in Ottawa, which now keeps five assistants busy.

"I do not advise any girl to go to a large city unless she is a specialist," Miss Requarth says. "If she tries business in the city she should have sufficient training to make her efficient in every way."

Experience

We spend about one-third of our lives in sleep and another third in play or recreation. A considerable portion of the remaining one-third is spent in eating. If we then indulge in the luxury of having a few contagious diseases there is little wonder that poverty overtakes so many of us.

Jim turned over and over in his mind these new applications of old, historic, significant words, dear to every reader of history—"glebe-land," "schoolmanse"—and it seemed to him that they signified the return of many old things lost in Merrie England, lost in New England, lost all over the English-speaking world, when the old publicly-paid clergyman ceased to be so far the servant of all the people that they refused to be taxed for his support. Was not the new kind of rural teacher to be a publicly-paid leader of thought, of culture, of progress, and was he not to have his manse, his glebe-land, and his "living?" And all because, like the old clergyman, he was doing a work in which everybody was interested and for which they were willing to be taxed. Perhaps it was not so high a status as the old; but who was to say that? Certainly not Jim Irwin, the possessor of the new kind of "living," with its "glebe-land" and its "schoolmanse." He would have rated the new as at least quite as high as the old.

From the brow of the promontory, a light concrete bridge took the pretty little gorge in the leap of a single arch, and landed the eye at the bottom of the front yard of the schoolhouse. Thus the new institution of life was in full view of the schoolmanse veranda, and yet shut off from it by the dry moat of the brook and its tiny meadow of blue-grass.

Across the road was the creamery, with its businesslike unloading platform, and its addition in process of construction for the reception of the machinery for the co-operative laundry. Not far from the creamery, and also across the road, stood the blacksmith and wheelwright shop. Still farther down the street were the barn, poultry house, pens, hutches and yards of the little farm—small, as were all the buildings save the schoolhouse itself, which was builded, as it should have been, for the future.

And even the schoolhouse, when one thinks of the uses to which it was to be put—kitchen, nursery, kindergarten, banquet hall, theater, moving picture hall, classrooms, manual training rooms, laboratory and counting room and what not, was wonderfully small—Colonel Woodruff said far too small—though it was necessarily so large as to be rather astonishing to the unexpectant passer-by.

The unexpectant passer-by this May day, however, would have been especially struck by the number of motor cars, buggies and surreys parked in the yard back of the creamery, along the roadside, and by the driveway running to the schoolhouse. People in numbers had arrived by five o'clock in the afternoon, and were still coming. They strolled about the place, examining the buildings and grounds, and talking with the blacksmith and the butter-maker.

Gradually they drew into the schoolhouse like a swarm of bees into a hive selected by the queen. None of them, however, went across the concrete bridge to the schoolmanse, save Mrs. Simms, who crossed, consulted with Mrs. Irwin about the shrubbery and flowers, and went back to Buddie and Jinnie, who were good children but natchally couldn't be trusted with so many other young ones withouten some watchin'.

"They're coming! They're coming!"

This was the cry borne to the people in and about the schoolhouse by that Hans Hansen who would be called Hans Nilsen. Hans had been to the top of the little hill and had a look toward town.

Like a crew manning a rigging, or a crowd having its picture taken, the assemblage crystallized into forms determined by the chances of getting a glimpse of the bungalow across the ravine—on posts, fences, trees and hillocks.

A motor car came over the hillock, ran down the road to the driveway to the schoolmanse and drew up at the door. Out of it stepped Mrs. Woodruff and the colonel, their daughter, the county superintendent of schools, and Mr. Jim Irwin. Jennie was dressed in a very well-tailored traveling costume, and Jim in a moderately well-tailored business suit. The fact that when they reached the threshold Jim picked Jennie up in his arms and carried her in will enable any good detective to put one and one together and make a pair—which comes pretty near telling the whole story.

By this time it was nearly seven, and Calista Simms came across the charmed bridge as a dispatch-bearer, saying that if Mr. Jim and Miss Jennie didn't mind, dinner would be served right soon. It was cooked about right, and the folks was gettin' right hungry—an' such a crowd! There were fifteen in the babies' room, and for a while they thought the youngest Hamm young one had swallowed a marble. She would tell 'em they would be right over; good-by.

There was another cheer as the three elderly and the two younger people emerged from the schoolmanse and took their way over the bridge to the school side of the velvet-bottomed moat, but it was shut off like the vibration of a bell dipped in water by the sudden rush of the shouters into the big assembly room, now filled with tables for the banquet. And here the domestic economy classes, with their mothers, sisters, female cousins and aunts, met them, as waiters, hat snatchers, hostesses, floor managers and cooks, scoring the greatest triumph of history in the Woodruff district. For everything went off like clockwork, especially the victuals—and such victuals!

There was quantity in meats, breads, vegetables—and there was also savor. There was plenty, and there was style. Ask Mrs. Haakon Peterson, who yearned for culture, and had been afraid her children wouldn't get it if Yim Irwin taught them nothing but farming. She will tell you that the dinner—which so many thought of all the time as supper—was yust as well served as if it had been in the Chamberlain Hotel in Des Moines, where she had stayed when she went with Haakon to the state convention.

Why shouldn't it have been even better served? It was planned, cooked, served and eaten by people of intelligence and brains, in their own house, as a community affair, and in a community where, if any one should ask you, you are authorized to state that there's as much wealth to the acre as in any strictly farming spot between the two oceans, and where you are perfectly safe—financially—in dropping from a balloon in the dark of the moon, and paying a hundred and fifty dollars an acre for any farm you happen to land on. Why shouldn't things have been well done, when every one worked, not for money, but for the love of the doing, and the love of learning to do in the best way?

Some of these things came out in the speeches following the repast—and some other things, too. It was probably not quite fair for B. B. Hamm to incorporate in his wishes for the welfare and prosperity and so forth of Jim and Jennie that stale one about the troubles of life, but he wanted to see Jennie blush—which as a matter of fact he did; but she failed to grow quite so fiery red as did Jim. But B. B. was a good fellow, and a Trojan in his work for the cause, and the schoolmaster and superintendent of schools forgave him. A remark may be a little broad, and still clean, and B. B. made a clean speech, mainly devoted to the increased value of that farm he at one memorable time was going to sell before Jim's fool notions could be carried out.

Colonel Woodruff made most of the above points which I have filched from him. He had begun as a reformer late in life, he said, but he would leave it to them if he hadn't worked at the trade steadily after enlistment. He had become a follower of Jim Irwin, because Jim's reform was like dragging the road in front of your own farm—it was reform right at home, and not at the county seat, or Des Moines, or Washington. He had followed Jim Irwin as he had followed Lincoln, and Grant, and Blaine, and McKinley—because Jim Irwin stood for more upward growth for the average American citizen than the colonel could see any prospect of getting from any other choice. And he was proud to live in a country like this, saved and promoted by the great men he had followed, and in a neighborhood served and promoted, if not quite saved, by Jim Irwin. And he was not so sure about it not being saved. Every man and nation had to be saved anew every so often, and the colonel believed that Jim Irwin's new kind of rural school is just as necessary to the salvation of this country. "I am about to close my speech," said the colonel, "and the small service I have been able to give to this nation. I went through the war, neighbors—and am proud of it; but I've done more good in the peaceful service of the last three years than I did in four of fighting and campaigning. That's the way I feel about what we've done in Consolidated District Number One." (Vociferous and long-continued applause.)

"Oh, Colonel!" The voice of Angie Talcott rose from away back near the kitchen. "Can Jennie keep on bein' county superintendent, now she's married?"

A great guffaw of laughter reduced poor Angie to tears; and Jennie had to go over and comfort her. It was all right for her to ask that and they ought not to laugh at Angie, so there! Now, you're all right, and let's talk about the new schoolhouse, and so forth. Jennie brought the smiles back to Angie's face, just in time to hear Jim tell the people amid louder cheers that he had been asked to go into the rural school extension work in two states, and had been offered a fine salary in either place, but that he wasn't even considering these offers. And about that time, the children began to get sleepy and cross and naughty, and the women set in motion agencies which moved the crowd homeward.

* * * * * * *

Before a bright wood fire—which they really didn't need, but how else was Jim's mother to show off the little fireplace?—sat Jim and Jennie. They had been together for a week now—this being their homecoming—and had only begun to get really happy.

Jim sat looking into the fire, oblivious of it. When Jennie spoke, her voice seemed to emanate from Jim's shirt front.

"Did you hear," said she, "what Angie Talcott asked?"

"M'h'm," said Jim.

"Well," said Jennie, "now that I'm married can I go on being county superintendent?"

There was a long silence.

"Would you like to?" asked Jim.

"Kind of," said Jennie; "if I knew enough about things to do anything worth while; but I'm afraid that by rising to my full height I shall always just fail to be able to see over anything."

"You've done more for the schools of the county," said Jim, "in the last year than any other county superintendent has ever done."

"And we shall need the money so like—so like the dickens," was Jennie's rejoinder.

"Oh, not so badly," laughed Jim, "except for the first year. I'll have this little farm paying as much as some quarter sections when we get squared about. Why, we can make a living on this school farm, Jennie—or I'm not fit to be the head of the school."

There was another silence, during which Jennie took down her hair, and wound it around Jim's neck.

"It will settle itself one of these days anyhow," said he at last. "There's enough to do for both of us right here."

"But they won't pay me," she protested.

"They don't pay the ministers' wives," said Jim, "and yet, the ministers with the right sort of wives are always the best paid. I guess you'll be in the bill, Jennie."

Jim walked to the open window and looked out over the still landscape. Down in the little meadow grew the dreaming trees, their round crowns rising as from a sea not quite to the level of the bungalow, their thrifty leaves glistening in the moonlight. Across the pretty bridge lay the silent little campus with its Twentieth century temple facing its chief priest. It was all good, without and within.

He went across the hall to bid his mother good night. She clung to him convulsively, and they had their own five minutes which arranged matters for these two silent natures on the new basis forever. Jennie was in white before the mantel when he returned, smiling at the inscription thereon:

"Let Us Cease Thinking So Much of Agricultural Education, and Devote Ourselves to Educational Agriculture. So Will the Nation Be Made Strong."

"Why didn't you put it in Latin?" she inquired. "It would have had so much more distinction."

"I wanted it to have meaning instead," said Jim. "And besides, nobody who was at hand was quite sure how to turn the Latin phrase. Are you?"

Jennie leaned forward with her elbows on her knees, and studied it.

"I believe I could," said she, "without any pony. But after all, I like it better as it is. I like everything, Jim—everything!"

[THE END.]

Facts About St. Paul's.

It is no mean walk round St. Paul's cathedral; twice round the railings is a mile. The entrance length is not quite 170 yards; it is 63 yards wide at its extreme point, and the towers are 74 yards high. Fifty workmen are constantly employed in the cathedral, and the monuments keep six men always busy. The floor is swept three times a week and washed once a month, and the whole building is cleaned once a year. It used to take an hour to light the gas, and there are eight fire stoves always burning, consuming a ton of coal a day. There are 3,000 chairs in the cathedral, and 200 surplices in the wardrobe, 60 of which are used every Sunday. The half-mile of iron rails in the churchyard, with the seven ornamental gates, weigh 200 tons and cost £11,000. Twenty-six thousand people can stand under the roof.

CONFUSION MAKES IRONING DAY HARD

Methodical Woman Puts Kitchen in Order.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Without realizing it one may be tired by disordered and confused surroundings, whether at work or not. For the same reason one may get through a relatively long hard task without undue fatigue if it is performed under pleasant, orderly conditions. This is particularly true of ironing, which is one of the longest tasks in the week's routine. One woman may attempt to iron in an atmosphere of confusion, with unwashed dishes nearby, coats or other out-of-doors clothing thrown over a chair, food standing about and children's playthings under her feet; time is lost making room among collections of untidy articles on the table or tubs. Another woman waits to put her kitchen in order before starting to iron. She sits on a high stool for most of the work. She is also particular to have her ironing board steady and placed at the right height, instead of across two chairs as one so often sees; she has a hamper for the pile of dampened clothes and a clothes horse on which to air the freshly ironed garments. It is safe to predict, says the United States Department of Agriculture, that the second woman will be less tired than the first one when she has finished the same amount of ironing.

Other little ways of making ironing easier are having the board well padded and smoothly covered, never standing with one's back to the light; using clean smooth irons, occasionally rubbed with wax or paraffin; wearing comfortable shoes with moderate heels in good condition. Rubber heels are liked by many people.

An ideal ironing board is one which is hinged permanently to the wall at the best height for the worker so that it can be folded back into a small flat closet out of the way when not in use. This type of ironing board has an extendable leg to rest on when pulled down. It should be set as near as possible to the stove where the irons are heating or to the plug or outlet where the electric iron is attached. For best results and greatest comfort in work light from a window should fall across the ironing board. Put the clothes horse and hamper within easy reach.

Spiced Prune Preserve

After soaking dried prunes from 4 to 6 hours, or overnight, using 2 pints of water to each pound of prunes, the water should be drained off. In it should be put, for each 2 pounds of prunes, 1 pound of sugar, ½ cup of vinegar, ½ teaspoonful of cinnamon, ¼ teaspoonful each of allspice and cloves. Put the spices in a bag or cloth. Boil all together without the prunes for 15 or 20 minutes, until sirupy, then add prunes, and cook slowly about thirty minutes. This recipe is recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture as a variation for ordinary stewed prunes.

TWO-WAY CLOSET IS HOME CONVENIENCE

Many Steps Saved Daily in Handling Crockery.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Instead of carrying clean china around from the kitchen, where it is washed, to the dining-room cupboard, where it is put away, this housekeeper, living in Frederick county, Maryland, at the suggestion of the home demonstration agent, arranged to have a closet placed between the kitchen and dining room, opening into each room.

While it is unlikely that the supplies and utensils shown on the lower shelves would be needed in any room but the kitchen, this arrangement eliminates many daily steps in handling the crockery used at each meal. When such a closet as this can be located close to the sink, instead of across the room from it, still fewer steps are needed in the daily routine.

Kitchen improvements in farm homes are being made in a number of states through the efforts of extension workers co-operatively employed by the United States Department of Agriculture and the various state agricultural colleges. In Virginia, Maryland, Missouri, Wyoming and South Carolina a great deal of attention has been given recently to making the kitchen more convenient.

POTATOES WITH EGGS ARE QUITE DELICIOUS

Preparing Stuffed Potatoes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Potatoes boiled, baked or fried, occasionally varied by mashed or creamed potatoes alternate on a good many family tables the year round. The United States Department of Agriculture suggests several ways of making plain mashed potatoes quite delicious by adding eggs to them. In the spring of the year when eggs are plentiful this is not an extravagance, as it adds real food value to the dish.

Mashed Potatoes "Different."

Mashed potatoes are usually made by beating them until light with hot milk and butter, and salt and pepper, using four tablespoonfuls of hot milk and one teaspoonful of the fat for every medium-sized potato. To make the mashed potatoes a little different they can be turned into a potato souffle by adding the beaten white of eggs (two eggs to six medium-sized potatoes,) piling lightly in a baking dish or individual ramekins and baking in the oven until brown. Grated cheese added to this souffle is good.

Potato puffs call for a slightly different combination and do not require a baking dish.

Stuffed Potatoes.

Bake potatoes in a hot oven for about forty-five minutes or until soft. Cut a slice from the side of each and scrape out the inside. Mash this and season with salt and pepper. Add enough heated milk to bring to the consistency of ordinary mashed potatoes. When partly cooled add egg. This may be left-over whites or yolks or whole eggs, well beaten. Add not more than one egg to six medium-sized potatoes. Refill the skins, brush with melted fat, and put back in the oven for a few minutes until hot and brown.

Potato Puffs.

1 cupful hot mashed potatoes, well seasoned	½ teaspoonful salt and dash of paprika.
1 egg.	½ teaspoonful parsley, chopped fine

Beat yolk into the mashed potatoes and add seasonings. Beat the white of egg very stiff and fold into the potatoes. Drop by spoonfuls on a greased pan and bake until a golden brown.

Stuffed baked potatoes introduce the same old friend in a new guise. This way of preparing potatoes has two especial advantages when company is expected: the potatoes are easy to serve in individual portions, and they may be prepared early in the day, leaving the cook free at meal time, as all she needs to do is to reheat them.

George, age seven, and his aunt were walking homeward when an April rain cloud appeared. George's aunt hustled him rapidly toward shelter, but after a few rumbles of thunder the clouds passed over. George, being vexed from the preceding rush, quickly replied: "I think they are going to thunder."

Wilton, Ala., April 27, 1924

Mr. Luther Fowler,
Columbiana, Ala.

Dear Mr. Fowler:

I read with pleasure what you said in your paper about Shelby county keeping Brother Durant as a county missionary. We need him for this work, as he can and will do more than any other man could for the people like him wherever he goes.

The money for his year's salary should be put up before he is asked to take the work.

I expect to start tomorrow for California to be gone several months, but I surely do want you to know I'll be glad to do all I am able to help keep Brother Durant in Shelby county.

With best wishes, I am,

J. Phelan Logan.

A. L. KIMBROUGH

Candidate for Commissioner of Game and Fisheries

The Voters of Shelby County doubtless remember that I offered for this place four years ago. When the final count was made I only lacked sixty votes of winning the nomination over the late John H. Wallace. With such splendid endorsement by the people of my state at that time, I feel that it is only due to ask them to help me win this time.

Shelby county gave me a rousing majority four years ago, which should make any man grateful.

Born and reared on a farm in Tallapoosa county, and having devoted my whole life to the farming industry as an individual farmer, as County Demonstration Agent, as Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, and as Superintendent of State Farms, I feel that I know the conservation needs of Alabama and that I am fitted by years of experience to administer the duties of this place on a practical and economic basis. Will be grateful for your support.

PATTERSON ASKS FOR SECOND TERM

OFFICIAL DUTIES PREVENT PRESIDENT OF PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION SEEING VOTERS PERSONALLY.

To The Democratic Voters of Alabama:

I am a candidate for election to a second term as President of the Alabama Public Service Commission in the State Primary Election on May 13th.

I have not been able to make a thorough campaign of the State on account of the many important matters before the Public Service Commission which have demanded my attention.

I am seeking a second term upon my official record, as well as upon my character, ability and experience. I have endeavored to discharge my every official duty in a fair and impartial manner, and have sought to fully protect the public interest in every matter coming before the Public Service Commission.

My record upon public questions that have come before the people of Alabama has always been clear, positive and unmistakable.

I want the vote of every man and woman who participates in the coming state primary, and take this method of soliciting the same, since my official duties prevent my seeing the voters personally.

I shall in the future, as I have in the past, endeavor to honestly, fairly and fearlessly discharge my every official duty. I hereby express my grateful appreciation to every friend and voter who has aided my candidacy.

EXCHANGEITES HONOR MONTEVALLO SCOUTS

Montevallo, Alabama, April 24.—At the last meeting of the Montevallo Exchange Club, the Boy Scouts of the town were the special guests for that meeting. Several talks were made by various club members concerning the work of the Scouts. Among those speaking for the boys were C. G. Smith, president; Rev. P. H. Carmichael, R. A. Reid and others. Walter McConaughy replied to the welcome extended to the Scouts, assuring the Exchange Club that the boys would ever try to live up to the highest ideals of the Scouts and hope they would always merit the confidence of the Exchange Club.

After the meeting, the Exchange members and the boys repaired to the lot in North Highlands and all put in several hours of work on the Scout hut. Before nightfall, the building was nearly completed. Another work day will be arranged soon, when the much needed hut will be turned over in a complete form to the Scouts.

J. L. Appleton made the speech for he day on the subject. An Educated Man." He held the rapt attention of all present during the ten minutes allotted to him. Dr. J. I. Reid was appointed the orator for the next meeting, his subject to be "Montevallo's Needs in View of the College Million Dollar Drive."

Misses Elsie Mahaffey and Mamie Kroell, two college girls, were present and made appeals to the Club in behalf of the forth-coming College Million Dollar Drive were warmly receved by the Exchange members, and many congratulations were extended to them upon the talks they made.

WIDE EXPERIENCE QUALIFIES FOSTER

Tuscaloosa Judge Has Disposed of 15,000 Cases in 20 Years Service On Bench—Now Candidate for Court of Appeals to Succeed Himself.

Seldom do the voters of Alabama have the opportunity to vote for a candidate so well qualified for the position he seeks as Judge Henry B. Foster of Tuscaloosa, who is a candidate to succeed himself as judge of the Court of Appeals.

Judge Foster has been a judge for 20 years, serving on the bench in the Tuscaloosa County court, the circuit court and now on the court of appeals. During his long and honorable service, Judge Foster has disposed of more than 15,000 cases and has won a reputation throughout the state as one of the ablest and fairest judges who ever occupied judicial office in Alabama.

The strong endorsement which he received from the bar and the people of his home county as well as from adjoining counties where he is best known, both as a judge and a man, show that Judge Foster is in every way worthy and well qualified for the high office he now holds and for which he seeks the opportunity of succeeding himself. These endorsements show that he is not only an eminent judge but that he is an honorable, upright, Christian gentleman.

Judge Foster is one of the best known men in the state and for many years has been one of the leaders in all civic and religious movements. He has devoted his life to public service and his friends who are in every county in the state feel that he has rendered such service that he is deserving of being chosen to succeed himself to the Court of Appeals, which position he is now holding with honor to himself and credit to the state.

WILSONVILLE, ALA

To the Voters of Shelby, Coosa and Clay Counties:

An important issue is before the people of the Eighteenth Judicial Circuit of Alabama. Several candidates are being considered by the voters of Shelby, Coosa and Clay counties.

The women of Montevallo and surrounding territory wish to express to the voters of those three counties their faith and confidence in Judge E. S. Lyman, the present incumbent. He is a man of splendid Christian character, whose record in both private and public life is without blemish of any kind. No man is held in higher respect by all who know him than is Judge Lyman. He is a thoroughly competent, conscientious Christian gentleman, and without question holds the love and esteem of his community.

The women of Montevallo became so interested in his success because of his unquestioned worth, that they organized a committee to interview every woman in Montevallo. Without exception every woman voter signed a petition endorsing Judge Lyman's candidacy and urging all voters to elect him. We can safely say you cannot make a mistake in voting for Judge Lyman.

Origin of Schools in Scotland

Elementary schools were established in Scotland by the provisions of the elementary education act of 1872. Prior to that, however, education had been regulated by the Scottish parliament. As early as 1696 an act was passed for settling schools, providing for the maintenance of a school in every parish in connection with kirk.

FIGHTING BOLL WEEVIL

Thousands of Bugs Destroyed Last Year by Following Instructions.

Death to thousands by poison last year was the result of the working of a comparatively small group of men who were relentless in their efforts to bring disaster to the objects of their fury, according to reports which also indicate that the number of "desperadoes" in this band will be substantially increased.

The general plan of attack of this group indicates that the work was done in a methodical manner and was only carried out after careful study over a long period of time. They not only brought death to their victims but information from reliable sources has it that they collected thousands of dollars that otherwise would have gone to the poisoned.

"It is indeed fortunate," declared one of the leaders of the poisoners who is endeavoring to enlarge his band, "that our efforts were directed at the boll weevil instead of human beings for we accomplished success wherever instructions from our experts were followed and we wrought havoc in the ranks of the insects in our territory. Our operations are to be on a larger scale than ever this year and every cotton farmer who enlists with us can rest assured that he will reap the same benefits provided conditions are normal.

"It will not be necessary for the farmers to notify us of their intention to join the crusade against the weevil, but for the sake of their own bank account they should apply calcium arsenate in dust form to weevil-infested cotton according to the instructions of the Association of Southern Agricultural Workers, which is an organization composed of scientists and experts of the United States Department of Agriculture and the state colleges of agriculture. Farmers also should adopt the slogan, 'More cotton to the acre, not more acres to cotton,' and apply intensive cultivation."

Boll weevil control experts of the Department of Agriculture say that it will pay to poison—

"If the weevils are really injuring your crop seriously and if your land is sufficiently fertile to yield at least one-third of a bale per acre with weevil injury eliminated.

"If your farming organization is such that you feel assured that the poison applications will be made at the right time and in the right manner.

"If you are willing to spend the full amount necessary to provide an adequate supply of dusting machinery and poison."

The use of calcium arsenate in the form of a dry powder is recommended and this should be applied only in dust form in late season applications.

"Calcium arsenate should be purchased to conform to the following specifications: Not less than 40 per cent total arsenic pentoxid; not more than 0.75 per cent water soluble arsenic pentoxid, and density not less than 80 or more than 100 cubic inches to the pound."

The only case in which the experts recommend a deviation from the rule of using only the dusting method is in pre-square treatment of cotton. Then, they say, satisfactory results may be obtained either by dusting or by the application of home-mixed molasses-calcium-arsenate mixture. This mixture usually contains one pound of calcium arsenate, one gallon of molasses and one gallon of water. With extremely heavy infestation and frequent rains, a stronger and more expensive mixture of two pounds of calcium arsenate, one gallon of table sirup and one-half gallon of water may obtain quicker killing and better control.

In sirup mixtures the sirup should always be sweet or unfermented and the mixture should be applied within twenty-four hours after mixing. The usual application required is about one gallon per acre and it is applied by using a homemade mop to sprinkle a few drops into the tip of the plant.

When the dusting method is used in the pre-square stage the calcium arsenate should be applied either by machine or the dust may be shaken from a bag with equal effectiveness while weevils are feeding in the tips of the plants. The bag treatment is not effective on large, fruiting cotton.

Further information on boll weevil control can be obtained from the county agent or the state college of agriculture.

Where Corn Crop Goes

More than 85 per cent of the United States corn crop is fed to live stock and somewhat less than 10 per cent is used for human food, according to recent data compiled by the United States Department of Agriculture. The hog is the largest consumer, 40 per cent being fed to swine on farms. Horses and cattle are next, using 20 and 15 per cent, respectively. The exports of corn, as grain, have never been large.

Good Start for Lambs

Lambing time is harvest time. Provide a dry place for the ewes that are to lamb and be on hand to see that each lamb is dried and that it suckles as soon as possible after birth. If a lamb gets a good start immediately after birth it requires but little more attention. Castrate and dock the lamb the first sunny warm day after he is two weeks old, feed him liberally, and get him off to market weighing around 70 pounds before June 15. Such lambs make big money.

Swamp-Root a Fine Medicine

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by parcel post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

A REMARKABLE RECOVERY

Birmingham Lady Suffered a Long Time Before Finally Taking Cardui and Enjoying "First Health in Years."

Birmingham, Ala.—Before her recent remarkable recovery, Mrs. Florence Moore, 2309 Thirty-third Ave., North, this city, was frequently so ill and weak that she had to sit down while doing her housework.

"For many years I suffered with female trouble of every description," says Mrs. Moore. "I was told an operation was necessary to save my life. At times I was not able to stand on my feet. I have cooked many a meal sitting, while my husband and children handed me the things with which to do it. . . .

"I had given up all hope of ever being well again. . . . It is a sight what women will suffer before they will listen to the advice of others.

"Several of my friends had taken Cardui and been benefited by it. They told me about it, but I thought my case was hopeless. Finally I told my husband to get me some Cardui and I began to take it. After I had taken the first bottle I saw that I was improving. I took eleven bottles at that time before I was cured, but as it was the first health I had had for years I was thankful to do it.

"I can't praise Cardui enough."

Back To Normal Health

New Orleans, Louisiana.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound while I was carrying my child and I must praise it highly because I never suffered one day during that time and could do all my housework and had a very easy confinement. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound because I have a weakness due to working around the house too soon after my baby was born. But thanks again to the Vegetable Compound I am getting back to normal health once more. I advise any woman to take it."—Mrs. A. MEYN, JR., 2019 Touro St., New Orleans, Louisiana.

Not A Bit of Trouble

Wilmington, Delaware.—"I was nervous and weak and not at all regular. I worked in a factory at the time and could not work very much. I was sick over a year, then a friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I started to pick up as soon as I began taking it. Then I took it again before my first baby was born and I never had a bit of trouble. I recommend it highly."—Mrs. JANE CROSSAN, 612 Pine St., Wilmington, Delaware.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped many other women just as it has helped Mrs. Dakan, Mrs. Meyn and Mrs. Crossan.

Consider the statements of these women. They give you the benefit of their actual experience with the Vegetable Compound.

A nation-wide canvass of women purchasers of the Vegetable Compound reports that 98 out of every 100 have been benefited by its use.

This is a remarkable record and proves the dependability of the medicine for the relief of the troubles women often have.

For weak and run-down conditions so common after child-birth it is well adapted. It strengthens and tones up the system and restores normal health.

The Vegetable Compound contains no harmful drugs or narcotics and can be taken in safety by the nursing mother. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Island of Nauru

A Lagoon in Nauru.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

When Germany started into the colonizing business centuries later than other powers and got control of the world's "left overs," she looked on the island of Nauru, far out in the Pacific, as one of the least of her possessions. But even before the World war it came to be recognized that Nauru, its size considered, is one of the world's richest islands. Now it is under a British mandate and the wealth it produces is falling into other coffers. Phosphate rock is the reason for Nauru's importance; it holds millions of tons of this valuable fertilizer.

Nauru, or Pleasant island, is almost at the jumping-off place of the world. It is only thirteen degrees west of the international date line, and half a degree south of the Equator. Thus it is one of what sailors call the "Line islands."

Before it fell to Germany it knew no white rulers, but was governed by its own laws and chiefs; but white influence had impinged upon it for many years. Whaling ships from New England ports called there and traded firearms for drinking coconuts and island pigs. It was rather a poor island in those far-off days, before its great wealth was discovered. It had no sandalwood or tortoise shell; no pearls or beche-de-mer; not even copra, for copra was not made in the Pacific before 1872 and coconut oil was not an article of commerce.

The Nauruans have never been cannibals, but they had the reputation of being savage warriors. A traveler from New Zealand who visited the island just before the Germans took possession found the natives all armed and involved in deadly feuds. He counted nine kinds of rifles of English and American make, besides several cannons. There were then ten white traders living near each other along the beach and some of their half-caste descendants are there today.

When Germany took over the islands she gave the natives a certain number of days to give up their arms. They generally obeyed, but a few threw theirs into the caves which underlie the island, where they are found from time to time by exploring parties.

Germans Taught Copra Making.

There are two things to the Germans' credit in the Pacific: They built roads and they taught the natives to make copra.

Copra is easily made and stored. The meat of the ripe coconut is broken into pieces and dried in the sun just long enough to extract the moisture; then it is bagged and ready for sale. In the South seas copra is a magic word. For this the Pacific trader dares the malaria and savages of the Solomons and the New Hebrides, and the teeth of the coral reefs. The trade store and copra shed stand on the beach of every coral isle, and when a steamer or schooner calls, the surfboats go in and out, over the reef at high tide or through intricate channels when there is an open lagoon, carrying trade goods and returning with bags of copra.

The German colonial government did not know what a treasure it had under its feet, but was content to run a little trade store, a branch of the Jaluit store, which sold to the natives tobacco and beer, Alaska canned salmon, sugar rice and ship biscuits in exchange for copra. It also sold prints and thin Japanese silks for the Mother Hubbard dresses which the American missionaries taught the native women to wear and for the lavalavas which the native men wore to the mission churches.

Then came a great change, owing to the discovery of phosphate.

According to geologists, Nauru, like Aphrodite, rose dripping from the sea ages ago. This emergence may have been sudden, or the process of elevation may have been gradual. At any rate, when the coral island was exposed it must have looked like the fantastic structures built in aquariums, with pinnacles, towers, bridges, flying buttresses, and other architectural fantasies upreared into the air.

Then came the sea birds, millions and millions of them, feeding on the abundant sea food, nesting in the coral, hatching their young in ever-increasing multitudes, and depositing the waste of their bodies in the coral till the lower crevices were filled and a gradually rising body of guano attained at length a level with the tops of the pinnacles, and then rose above them and lay in a level plateau across the island.

Vast Phosphate Deposits.

On the margin the rains, the winds, and the breakers, spouting high against the coral, washed away this deposit, so that ramparts of bare pinnacles stood up and still stand all around the island; but the coral walls back from the shore held safe the treasure. After this the teeming bird life deserted the island, how or why is a mystery.

Then under Nature's forces a transformation occurred. Guano is chiefly phosphoric acid and nitrogen; coral is chiefly lime. Somehow, by the close contact, the guano became changed into phosphate of lime, which is guano raised to the nth power. It had now become a hard rock, odorless and generally colorless, although some specimens show fine, dark stratification and take a high polish.

A British trading company operating from Sydney discovered phosphate on Ocean island, a smaller neighbor of Nauru, and then found the larger deposits on the latter island. A lease was obtained from the Germans on a partnership basis and when the World war started the exploitation was proving profitable for both groups.

There were exciting times on the little islands during the war. An Australian warship called, replaced the German flag by the British and received the agreement of the German residents to submit to British control. But when the ship had sailed away the Germans seized control and deported the British residents to Ocean island. It was months before word could be gotten to the outside world and another ship sent to arrest the Germans and restore British control on the island.

Nauru has about twelve hundred natives. In 1918 all indicated their desire to become British subjects.

How Phosphate Is Mined.

Phosphate is mined by Chinese coolies in open quarries, but these are not like stone quarries, where everything is taken out as the work progresses. The phosphate is packed between the coral pinnacles as tightly as the filling in a tooth and must be excavated, leaving the pinnacles standing.

There is, perhaps, no hotter working place on earth, for as the workmen descend, digging and blasting, they are below the level of the trade wind's cool breath and exposed to the fierce rays of the tropic sun.

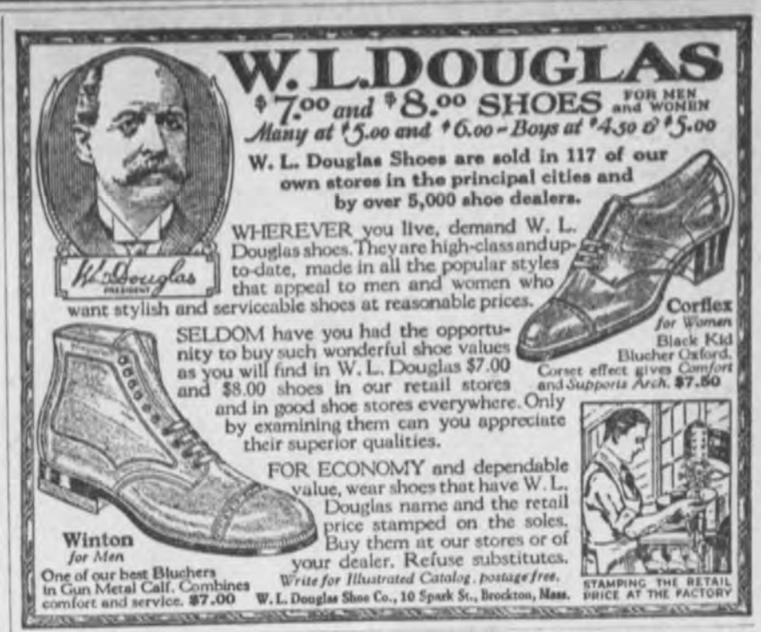
When a coolie has filled a pair of baskets he hangs one on each end of a carrying-pole and makes his way by devious paths through the worked-out places to a central carrier, called the "flying fox," running on a cable. He dumps his baskets and trots back for another load, while the carrier conveys the phosphate to a hopper, a tall wooden tower with chutes, from which it is dropped into cars ready to take it to the dryers, huge buildings containing crushing and drying machinery and storage bins for the finished product.

Two classes of laborers, the workers in the phosphate field and the loading crews on the cars and boats, include few natives of Nauru. The former, as we have seen, are Chinese coolies, the latter Kanakas recruited from other islands.

Nauru is about seven and a half miles long and half as wide and is shaped like an oyster. It is bordered by the reef, which is bare at low tide and inside of which is a beach of white coral sand. The beach above tide level is covered with coconut palms, interspersed with pandanus and other trees and shrubs.

Back of the coconut plain rises a palisade of tall coral pinnacles whose summit is the phosphate plateau which is covered by a forest of evergreen trees, the most common one being the tamanu with handsome deep green leaves, resembling laurel, and flowers like orange blossoms.

In the center of one end of the island is a small lagoon surrounded by a coconut grove. The broad plateau is uninhabited, as the natives live only under the coconut trees.



Broke the Rules

A small girl, with her mother, was watching two men at work in the hall of a public building. They were kneeling in the middle of the flooring repairing the mosaic with pieces of colored stone, carefully fitting them together in a gigantic jigsaw puzzle.

After two or three minutes one of the men lifted a small piece of stone that was not quite the right size, placed it on a small block and began to chip the edge. The child was astonished at such a breach of the rules of the game.

"Oh, mummy, look," she cried. "He's cheating."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Victory Just Around

only the final count will decide the winner of the prizes, and the real decision rests with the candidates who are aspiring for first honors. If you have a friend in the campaign whom you would like to see win the Grand Capital Prize, the Sedan, this week is going to be the last opportunity you will get to help them. GET BUSY.

A WORD TO THE WISE

It is not sufficient to rest on your oars and depend on the votes you now have. Rest assured that your competitors are worthy your steel. You are on the home stretch now—go to it, and may the best candidate win. There is no doubt at all but what voting will be heavier at the final count than at any time in this campaign. Oftimes in campaigns of this kind the volume turned in the last few hours will equal or surpass what has been turned in during the whole campaign up to that time. It usually does, and from now on it is volume that counts So you must look to your laurels for there is little doubt but that your competitors are worth every bit of ambition and stick-to-it-iveness you have in you.

MAKE REPORTS PLAIN

Be sure that your report sheets are made out plainly; that your vote totals are correct, and that you add correctly the amount at the bottom of each column for both ad cards and subscriptions, and that the correct amount accompanies each report, preferably in bank notes of the largest denominations you can secure. This will avoid any chance of error and it will save much time as well.

Remember that the ballot box is at the Columbiana Savings Bank which will open at 7 o'clock to 8 o'clock for your benefit. The zero hour and the End of the Rainbow is near at hand. Your fate is in your own hands.

MISS ISBELL WINNER OF THE FIRST PRIZE

At the close of the Shelby County Reporter's Circulation Campaign Saturday night at 8 o'clock, the committee of judges met and canvassed the votes turned in during the last week of the campaign and awarded the prizes as follows:

First Prize, Ford Sedan, to Miss Nellie Isbell, Columbiana.

Second Prize, Ford Touring car to Mrs. C. H. Simpson, Wilsonville.

Third Prize, Kennedy Radio Set, to C. S. Day, Jr., Montevallo.

Fourth Prize, Columbia Grafonola, to Miss Annie Mae Campbell, Calera.

Fifth Prize, Merchandise order at Farmers Exchange, to Whitson Finley, Columbiana.

Sixth Prize, Elgin Watch, to C. B. Davis, Rt 3, Columbiana.

Eighth Prize, Merchandise Order at The J. F. Pope Co. (loc'), Miss Georgia Wheeler, Rt. 1, Wilsonville.

Ninth Prize, $25 in gold, to Miss Lois Crumpton, Rt 3, Columbiaana.

Tenth Prize, $20 in gold, to Jas-Leonard, Columbiana.

During the canpaign about 750 new subscriptions were taken for the Reporter.T hese with the 1125 subscribers on the list when the calpaign started bring the total up to 1875. The indications are, however that something like 100 old subscribers failed to renew and their nades will be dropped from the list, making an actual paid circulation for the paper of not less than 1750 copies.

This is possibly the largest circulataion of any paper ever published in Shelby county and considering the fact that the Reporter has been in the county for only a little more than a year, it is doubtful if there is in all the state another weekly paper that can show so good a record.

The Reporter takes this opportunity to thank edery one who contributed in any way to the success of the campaign; both those wh worked for subscriptions, and hose who subscribed for the first time and those who showed their appreciation for the paper by renewing their subscriptions.

Mrs. Frances Barnett

Mrs. Frances Barnett died a' an early hour Wednesday morning at her home one mile east of Columbiana after an illness of less than two weeks. She was 72 years old. Mrs. Barnett had been affected for some time with a bronchial trouble that with her advanced age made it impossible for her to withstand an attack of measles, and this caused her death. She was the widow of the late G. D. Barnett who preceded her less than a year ago. She was a life-long member of the Methodist church and a good woman. She had talked with members of her family freely and while expressing the hope that she might recover, she was fully reconciled to the call of death.

The funeral service was announced for today; to be held at the Methodist church and to be conducted by Rev. W. A. Mays and Rev. T. K. Roberts.

Mrs. Barnett is survived by 9 sons and daughters: Misses Kate and Nellie Barnett, Mrs. J. W. McGiboney, Mrs. Lapsley Holcombe and Mrs. H. R. Davis of Columbiana; Mrs. Joe Tinney of Tumlin's Gap; Mrs. E. I. Goodwin of Talladega; J. A. Barnett of Columbiana, and W. P. Barnett of Acton.

Carter-Cole Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Carter announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter Margaret Addline, to Mr. Lloyd Denton Cole, of Shawmut, Ala., the wedding to take place in June.

A. S. Lisles of Kingdom was a visitor to the Reporter Tuesday. Mr. Lisles is a good friend of the paper and always has a word of encouragement.

New Subscribers Are Still Coming In

New subhcriptions to the Reporter continues to come in tho the contest is over. On Monday S. M. Oglesby of Dunnavant and B. F. Killingsworth of Montevallo came in to enter their subscriptions; Miss Nellie Isbell gave in the subscription of Miss Sadie Henderson of Childersburg; J. V. Cooper gave in the renewal of W. B. Bell Wilsonville and J. A. Cates gave in the subscription of John Cobb Siluria, making five new subscriptions in all. On Tuesday J. W. Finley, of Rt. 1, Columbiana, came in to enter his subscription.

The Reporter takes this for a good sign and looks hopefully forward to the day when the paper may indeed go into every home in Shelby count.

NEW PRINCIPAL IS WELL EQUIPPED

The Reporter was not able last week to give very much information about Mr. Tucker, the newly chosen principal of Shelby County High School. Mr. Tucker's record indicates that he is well fitted both by training and experience for the responsible place to which he has been chosen.

He was born and reared in DeKalb county, on Sand Mountain. In his early years hé attended the rural schools of DeKalb county and after he had passed the age at which pupils now graduate from high school and after considerable experience in teaching, he entered the State Agricultural School at Albertville from which he graduated with a good record. The Agricultural school at that time was under the presidency of J. B. Hobdy, now director of vocational education of Alabama, and ranked as it is now, as one of the very best secondary schools in the state.

After finishing the Agricultural school, Mr. Tucker re-entered the teaching profession, serving first in the rural schools and later being made principal of a high school that had an enrollment of 250 pupils which place he filled for four years. Following this service Mr. Tucker was made superintendent of education of his county and served in that capacity for four years. At that time there were 200 teachers employed in the rural schools and during his term in office remarkable progress was made in the development of these schools.

Desiring further to fit himself for his chosen work, Mr. Tucker two years ago entered Peabody College at Nashville and he will be graduated from that institution in the coming August with the B. S. Degree. As a student in Peabody he has given most of his time to the work of Education and Psychology from the view point of administration and supervision.

Mr. Tucker is 38 years old and is married, is a member of the Baptist church and an active church worker.

SHELBY COUNTY ASKED TO LEAD IN THE MILLION DOLLAR DRIVE FOR ALABAMA COLLEGE

To the People of Shelby County:

Alabama College is the only state college for women. It belongs to the state, but is particularly a part of Shelby county.

The success of the college in its appeal to the state at large for funds to carry on its great program of work is going to depend to a large extent upon the enthusiasm of the people of Shelby county towards their college. The home people of the college as of an individual determine to a large extent what the people who are removed from it think of it. It is, therefore, urgently hoped that the people of the county will respond readily to the campaign to raise $20,000 in the county towards the campaign. This amount may be paid in five installments, so that in order to reach the quota, the entire county of Shelby with more than 20,000 white people in it will not have to raise more than four thousand dollars in cash.

May we not expect the people of Shelby to go "over the top" first of all the counties in the state? When this is done, it will make it possible for the students of the college and the workers back at their homes to hold up Shelby county as an example and stimulate the other counties of the state to follow suit. It is expected that everyone will want to contribute.

Sincerely yours,

L. B. RIDDLE,
Chairman, Shelby County.

If a graduate of Shelby High fail to receive a letter of invitation, because of inacurate records, regard this statement in the Reporter as your invitation and notify Ehney Camp president of the senior class, not later than Tuesday night, May 20, how many plates you will want. The cost per plate will be 50c. Graduates are cordially invited to bring their sweethearts and wives —the more the merrier.

Exchangeites Discuss Needs of Montevallo

Montevallo, Ala., May 12.—At the last meeting of the Exchange Club, Dr. J. I. Reid addressed the Club on the "Needs of Montevallo from the Standpoint of the Million Dollar Drive. He pledged to the college authorities a one hundred per cent support on the part of the Montevallo Exchange Club, and said that he felt sure that all Montevallo would be ready to do likewise. He urged that Montevallo make a move in its own progress and get ready for the great development that is in store for the college. He urged first the building of a sewerage system for the town, that this was the first necessity. The next important step should be the building of a larger hotel. The present hotel accommodations cannot begin to supply the present needs. The town must also build many more residences, as there are calls for houses every day in the year.

The committee appointed to make recommendations for the general improvement of the town strongly urged the sewerage system, the larger hotel, and more residences.

Misses Agnes Hardy and Helen Townsend from the college made interesting and inspiring talks on the Million Dollar Drive, that created much enthusiasm among the members and Montevallo will soon be ready to go over the top.

Success With Poultry

Reinhardt Brothers of Wilsonville are growing steadily into what promises to become a large and profitable poultry business.

A good many years ago the Messrs. Reinhardt began handling chickens; buying and selling, and raising a good number each year themselves. A year ago they decided to go into the poultry business right so they sold off their scrub stock and bought incubators brooders and some thoroughbred eggs. Because of their experience they came out well at the end of the first year and felt encouraged to go on.

They started their second year with 140 fine pure bred hens; 60 White Leghorns and 80 White Wyandottes. They have sold hatching eggs and baby chicks through the season, part of the time not being able to fill all orders that came to them.

It is their plan to build their flocks to 5000 hens. They have recently completed a new poultry house, which they built according to the plans by the United States Department of Agriculture and they will build another soon. Their equipment consists of two incubators of 900 capacity and three brooders of 2000 capacity. Three more incubators of 650 capacity each will soon be added to the equipment.

Mr. Reinhardt in discussing the progress made thus far says he believes that Shelby county offers unusual opportunities for successful poultry growing. He is also heartily in favor of holding a Shelby county poultry show some time in the fall as has been proposed by Mr. Cowart of Calera.

MEMORIAL AT SUMMER HILL

There will be memorial service at Summer Hill the 4th Sunday in May. Everybody invited to come and bring well filled baskets. Also everyone interested come on Thursday before to clean off the cemetery.

The total number of tardinesses for the month was 26.

FARM BUREAU PLANS ORGANIZATION FOR MARKETING EGGS

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Shelby County Farm Bureau was held at the court house recently to consider the plan being offered by the state Farm Bureau for the organization of a co-operative marketing association that would hanadle poultry products, placing them on the market in a manner similar to that already in practice for the marketing of cotton and hay.

The meeting was well attended and there was a good interest in the undertaking. After some discussion of the plan by District Agent Binford, of the Extension Service, Mr. Massey of the cotton marketing association and others, it was decided to put on a campaign for members of the association in Shelby county.

Mrs. J. F. Pope had been chosen by the state meeting to lead the movement in this county and Geo. M. Baker and Melvin Archer were appointed as a committee to assist Mrs. Pope. The campaign for members will be undertaken soon.

rived from such an organization

In discussion of the possible benefits to be derived from such an organization it was brought out that the records show that a flock of 80 good hens on a farm, given reasonable attention, would return in a year as actual profit an amount as great as the average yield of cotton per farm in Shelby county brought last year.

Mrs. W. H Pope, of Wilsonville, gave some of her experiences with poultry that proved interesting. She stated that from a flock of 54 hens she had realized on an average a profit of $15 a month while buying all her feed. She added that to one in position to raise feed the profit ought to be much greater.

County Agent Lauderdale states that he finds the people greatly interested in the proposal to organize a poultry association for Shelby county and, in another column of this paper he gives the answers to a number of questions concerning the plan that are being asked him from time to time.

DEATH OF MURPHY BLOW TO SMITH

DEMOCRATIC LEADERS DO NOT NOW THINK GOVERNOR CAN WIN THE NOMINATION.

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Washington.—Interest, already high pitched, in the coming Democratic national convention has been increased in zest by the death of the leader of Tammany hall, Charles F. Murphy. It may seem curious, but political observers here generally seem to believe that the death of one person removed as an individual from any suggestion of national ambitions for himself, should be able to shadow the chances of preferment of another individual, who did have some ambitions, namely, Alfred E. Smith, governor of New York state.

It may be that with another man who has been drafted to succeed in the leadership of the supporters of the New York candidate, he will be able to command at the outset the delegate votes with which he has been accredited, but seemingly now the democracy as represented in its leadership in Washington has given over thought that Alfred E. Smith will be a formidable candidate for the nomination. There has been a good deal of gossip in Washington recently concerning a ticket which finally may win out in the great Democratic gathering—Samuel M. Ralston for president, and Alfred E. Smith for vice president.

A ticket of this kind, according to the thoughts of the politicians, would be a wise one in a number of senses. It would give the country a chance to vote for a middle western man and for an eastern man, thus balancing the ticket geographically, and it would placate in considerable measure the "drys" of the party and the "wets" with them.

Smith's Religion Counts.

It is not a grateful thing to discuss religious matters in connection with American politics, but the question of the religion of candidates has entered largely if somewhat quietly into the question of preference for high nomination place. One of the known objections entered, particularly in the South and in parts of the West, to the nomination of Alfred E. Smith, is the fact that he is a member of the Roman Catholic church. Some of the politicians seem to think that the nomination of Governor Smith for the vice presidency with a middle western Protestant at the head of the ticket, would shadow the religious issue, if it be a real issue, in the matter.

Some of the Democrats do not believe that Governor Smith would accept the second place on the ticket. A number of prominent men who have been suggested for second place on one or the other of the two great party tickets have entered objection to consideration in this connection. However, there is not in evidence as much reluctance to accept second place as once there was.

Senator Robert M. LaFollette seemingly has recovered his health, and with the rejuvenation of this senator talk has been rejuvenated of a third party. Republicans are perhaps more fearful than the Democrats of such an organization. Until, however, when it seemingly was likely a day or two ago that Alfred E. Smith of New York would have no great chance to become the Democratic nominee, there was rather sharp fear in the breasts of some Democratic leaders that if the New York governor were nominated, southern Democrats might hold a convention and name another man as a candidate, thus putting still another party into the field.

The Democrats from the South and from some parts of the Middle West, apparently are strongly moved by the religious issue.

Adams and Hull Friendly.

In Washington one gets almost daily a sharpened appreciation of the fact that political differences do not necessarily make for personal differences. John T. Adams, chairman of the Republican national committee, and Cordell Hull, chairman of the Democratic national committee, have written or inspired for publication things which would make it seem that these two master politicians never would speak as they pass by. However, an evening or two ago at a great dinner in Washington they sat side by side, and so far as anyone might know from appearances and from general geniality of conversation, the two might be Damon and Pythias, or something of like kind which any other simile bromide may suggest.

Cordell Hull is a possible nominee of the Democratic party for the presidency. It is generally understood that unless the lightning strikes him with its pleasant bolt of preferment he will continue through the next campaign as the chairman of the committee of which he is now the head. So far as John T. Adams is concerned, it is rather hard to tell just now whether or not he will be found at the helm of the ship while it is plowing the troubled seas of the election campaign. This matter probably eventually will be settled by President Coolidge, who now has enough votes pledged to him to assure his nomination in the Republican convention on the first ballot.

Asks More Pay for Congressmen.

Representative Celler of the Tenth district of Brooklyn, N. Y., had the courage or the nerve, whichever way opinion would have it, to introduce a bill into congress increasing the pay of members of the house and senate from $7,500 to $10,000 a year.

The Brooklyn representative has declared that a congressman cannot live on his present salary and meet all the expenditures which his position imposes. He unquestionably is right so far as a good many members of congress are concerned, but there are others, the majority of house members, possibly, who not only do live on $7,500 a year, and live fairly comfortably, but manage to save money out of the sum which Uncle Sam pays them in monthly installments.

President Coolidge said after taking office that he wished to pledge his administration in advance to strict economy in government expenditures. If the bill which Representative Celler has introduced should pass both houses and go to the President, the wonder naturally is what he would do with it. If there were a strong voting expression shown in the passage of the bill a veto would injure the feelings of members of congress, and inasmuch as they are human, it might make some of them resentful.

Some Spend Much, Others Little.

Some members feel that they have a social dignity of office to maintain, and in order to maintain it a certain scale of living is necessary. There are other congressmen who have few social demands made upon them who live in lodgings and save the dollars and the nickels wherever possible, and who go home with money in hand. The demands made upon the members by their constituents are unequally distributed.

Some representatives and senators are compelled to do a lot of entertaining or otherwise would be put down as tightwads and as neglectful of the amenities of life. Others who come from more remote districts rarely have visitors from home, and moreover, perhaps, not caring much for the social life manage to get along without so much as looking into scenes of enticing social activities.

There are many members of congress who if they should prefer private life could earn sums vastly greater than the amount which the government pays them. These men, however, seemingly, are willing to take the smaller pay for the distinction of serving their constituents in congress. So it is that some men make a sacrifice by accepting the office, while other men make cash. It all depends on the man and on the demands which are made upon him.

Congress is always timid about passing any bill which is intended to benefit its members in a pecuniary way. Whenever anything of this kind is to be done attempts are made to learn in advance if it can be accomplished by a strictly nonpartisan vote. If every man in both houses should vote for a pay increase the criticism of individuals would be lessened.

Sherman's Mileage Bill.

Years ago when the late James S. Sherman, vice president of the United States during the Taft administration, was a member of the house of representatives, the first session of one congress, a special session, ran from March until the hour on December 4 when the first regular session of that congress was to begin. If there had been an adjournment of the first session some time previously most of the members would have gone home and would have drawn mileage for the travel. As it was, with one session merging into another, homeward travel and travel backward to the capital was not necessary. However, scores of members of the house thought they were entitled to draw mileage even though they didn't travel, and so they looked about for somebody with courage enough to put in a mileage bill.

Sherman was known as one of the best natured men who ever lived. He agreed to put in the bill. He did put it in and it was passed by the house fairly quickly. Then there came a blast from the country. "What did the members mean by taking mileage at twenty cents a mile for travel that was never entered upon?"

Every senator of the United States was peppered with telegrams and letters from all over the country telling him that he must vote against the mileage grab, as it was so called. It is perhaps unnecessary to say the bill never went through the upper house.

One of the arguments advanced by Representative Celler of Brooklyn in behalf of his bill is that unless representatives and senators are paid more money they cannot afford to live in Washington and meet the requirements of their positions, and this will mean that only rich men in the future can afford to serve their constituents in the capital of the United States. The Brooklyn representative seems to see the day when the house will become what years ago the senate was called, "A Millionaire's Club."

Leisurely Cooking

It seemed to the commuter impatiently awaiting his breakfast, that the eggs were taking ages to come to a boil. He stepped softly to the kitchen door and took a peep. Apparently lost in thought, the new culinary artist was gazing at an advertising calendar which adorned the kitchen wall.

"Gee whiz," murmured the suburbanite to himself as he stole back, "this here cook lady cooks by the calendar."

FIGHTING BOLL WEEVIL

Scientists Favor Use of Calcium Arsenate in Form of Powder by Dusting.

Due to the fact that there is an effort on the part of bankers and various business interests to obtain concerted application by cotton farmers of methods of boll weevil control recommended by state and government experts, manufacturers of calcium arsenate have anticipated an increased demand for the product, according to the experts, and from all indications there will be a supply this year of 75,000,000 pounds. However, in order to obtain the lowest prices, farmers are urged to place their orders for the poison as soon as possible.

Wider use and increased consumption of the poison also has caused the cost of the poison to drop, it is said, and the farmers can purchase it with the assurance that a larger profit this year can be had by using it than in previous years.

While most farmers who have used the dusting method of weevil control have reported a high degree of success and profit, there are a few who failed to notice a substantial increase in yield. In the latter cases experts declare that this is due, for the most part, to the fact that the farmers did not make applications either in the right manner, at the proper time or at right intervals. Their advice to farmers is expressed in their slogan, "Do it right or not at all."

Control of the boll weevil by poisoning in the pre-square stage will reduce the infestation, but it is necessary in many instances to continue poisoning when the cotton is in the fruiting stage. Calcium arsenate should be applied at this time, the experts say, only in dust form, as it has been found that much more satisfactory results are obtained than by the use of any mixtures or liquid poisons yet tested.

Dusting should begin when 10 per cent of the squares in the field show weevil puncture, and at least three applications of from five to seven pounds per acre at intervals of four or five days. If a heavy rain follows an application it should be repeated at once.

Experts and scientists of the United States Department of Agriculture have the following to say on the subject of poisoning:

"Use only pure calcium arsenate in the form of a dry powder, and apply this only in dust form. Poison when the air is calm and the plants are moist. In most sections this means making only night applications. Keep your cotton thoroughly dusted until the weevils are under control. This usually means about three applications at the rate of one every four days. Then stop poisoning until the weevils again become abundant.

"If the weevils become abundant early enough to injure young bolls, make one or two more applications late in the season. If there is a heavy rain within 24 hours after dusting repeat this application immediately.

"Do not expect to eradicate the weevils. Poisoning merely controls them sufficiently to permit a full crop of cotton and you can always find weevils in the successfully poisoned fields.

"Use only dusting machinery especially constructed for cotton dusting."

Farmers must not let prevail the opinion that poisoning alone will make a cotton crop under boll weevil conditions, according to the experts, who go on to say that, "although the success of poisoning the weevil under certain conditions has been proved beyond a doubt, there is danger that farmers may depend too much upon it and neglect the cultural practices which are absolutely essential in any system of boll weevil control. The basis of this control is still the cultural practices recommended by the experts.

"Poisoning is supplementary and depends for its success upon the other necessary steps. Unless the planter gives due attention to the seed, preparation, time of planting and other recommendations made, it will be useless for him to depend upon poisoning to make a crop. The crop itself must actually be made by other expedients; poisoning is merely a device to protect it when it is made."

Poisoning the boll weevil by the methods as described in the foregoing article and paragraphs has been tested and applied, not only by the scientists but by practical and successful farmers, for eight years, and there is every reason to believe that a cotton farmer who applies the cultural methods as recommended, together with the calcium arsenate method of poisoning, will have an increased yield and profit at the end of the season.

Broadcast Corn Fertilizer

Fertilizer for corn is usually sown with the planter having a fertilizer attachment because it saves time and labor to do it that way. It is better when applying large amounts to broadcast the fertilizer with a disc drill after the ground is broken. It is then harrowed and planted.

Get Seed Corn Ready

Getting seed corn ready to plant is too important to be left until the last minute. After the seed ears are finally selected the irregular kernels on the butts and tips of the ears should be shelled off and discarded. Hand shelling is best.

Sometimes an ear will look all right before shelling but will have a large number of kernels with damaged tips Each ear, therefore, should be shelled separately and the kernels inspected before mixing with the general supply

Lesson for May 18

ISAIAH AND THE ASSYRIAN CRISIS.

LESSON TEXT—Isa. 36, 37.

GOLDEN TEXT—"God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble."—Ps. 46:1.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How God Answered Their Letter.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Isaiah and the Boastful Assyrian.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Isaiah's Faith Saved a City.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Isaiah's Service to His Country.

I. The King of Assyria Invades Judah (Isa. 36).

1. Rabshakeh Meets a Deputation From Judah (vv. 1-21). Rabshakeh was a representative of Sennacherib, the king of Assyria, whose mission was to induce Judah to surrender. In order to accomplish this he:

(1) Tried to bully them into submission (vv. 4-9). He taunted them with their weakness and told them that Egypt was a broken reed that would not only fail of support but even pierce the hand that reached out to it. He challenged them by offering 2,000 horses, if they would furnish riders for them. If they could not furnish this small number it would be futile for them to attempt to withstand the great Assyrian army.

(2) He asserted that it was useless for them to put their trust in God (v. 10). He even declared that the Lord had sent him to destroy Judah.

(3) He tried to create a panic among the people (vv. 13-21). Fearing a panic among the people the deputation of the Jews urged Rabshakeh not to speak in the Jews' language. Taking up the suggestion he spoke loudly in the Jews' language, warning them against trusting in Hezekiah.

(4) He promised them plenty in another land similar to their own (vv. 16, 17). He urged them to make agreement with him and upon his return from Egypt he would take them to a land of plenty, but the people were loyal to Hezekiah, for they knew that the cruel Assyrians could not be trusted.

2. The Deputation Reports to Hezekiah (v. 22). They rent their garments doubtless in fear and dismay over their perilous condition, for the crisis long before predicted by Isaiah had now come upon them.

II. Hezekiah's Behavior (Isa. 37:1-35).

1. Resorted to the House of the Lord (v. 1). This is a sure resort of God's people in time of distress (Ps. 73:16, 17; 77:13). This action was prompted by faith, for God had promised that those who in time of distress resorted to His house would be heard by Him (II Chron. 7:15, 16).

2. Sent Isaiah (vv. 2-7). The logical and natural thing for the king to do under such circumstances was to send for God's prophet. The prophet sent back words of encouragement to Hezekiah, assuring him that God would bring deliverance.

3. Hezekiah's Prayer (vv. 14-20). Rabshakeh, who seems to have withdrawn from Jerusalem for a little while, now returns from Sennacherib with a letter warning Hezekiah against trusting God for deliverance, assuring him that he would be deceived for no god was able to stand against the Assyrian army. He spread the letter before the Lord and prayed.

(1) He recognized God's throne, making it the ground of his plea (v. 16).

(2) He recognized the peril which threatened the people (vv. 17-19). Sennacherib had indeed laid waste the surrounding nations, but that ruin resulted because the gods of the nations were not real.

(3) He asked for deliverance (v. 20). He desired that deliverance would come in such a way as to vindicate and honor the Lord.

4. Isaiah's Message to Hezekiah (vv. 21-35).

(1) That Sennacherib's sin was blasphemy against the Holy One of Israel (vv. 21-28).

(2) That Sennacherib had forgotten that he was an instrument in God's hand (vv. 24-28).

(3) Judgment upon Sennacherib was imminent (vv. 29-35). Deliverance would soon come and that through the energy of the Lord of hosts.

III. Destruction of the Assyrian Army (vv. 36-38).

The angel of the Lord went forth and smote in the camp of the Assyrians 185,000 men, so Sennacherib was turned back by the way he came. He did not enter Jerusalem and after this defeat he went back to Nineveh to live and while there worshiping in the house of his god he was assassinated.

The SANDMAN STORY

LAZY HANS

IN A far-off country once there lived a lazy man named Hans; and that was not all the fault he had, for Hans spent much time at the tavern at the end of the village where he lived, and all of his money, too, which in truth was not much.

The only work that Hans ever did was to sit on the bank of the river that flowed by the village and fish.

Sometimes he caught nothing at all; and when he did, as far as his family were concerned, he might just as well have caught nothing, for he sold the fish at the tavern and did not go home until hunger drove him there.

His patient wife did washing to get money for herself and little Hans, or they would have fared hard, so little did big Hans bother with the welfare of his family.

One day as he sat by the river fishing he suddenly felt a tug at the line he was holding. Hans tried to pull in his catch, for he was sure it must weigh many pounds.

But the tugging grew harder as he pulled and Hans wound the line around one wrist and pulled with all his strength.

"From the Water Came a Big Head."

Slowly from the water there came a big head and a wide open mouth. Hans remembered the story of Jonah and the whale and tried to unwind the fishing line from his wrist, but before he could do so the huge fish caught the line in its mouth and jerked poor Hans into the water.

Turning around, the big fish began to swim away, dragging Hans behind him at a furious rate of speed. The bank and the land disappeared from his view as they dashed along. Hans remembered afterwards, though he could never find the place where the big fish suddenly dived under the water, taking him with it.

The next thing Hans knew he found himself standing on the bottom of the river or ocean. He did not know where he was, but on a throne of coral sat a big man with a long, white beard looking at Hans very crossly.

"So you are the lazy fisherman who sells his catch at the tavern," said the man on the throne. "Well, as you will not work on land I will see that you work here in my kingdom. Pick up all the shells you see lying around here, and see that you leave not one."

Hans was so scared that he did not dare say what he thought—that he could never in a thousand years pick up all the shells. He meekly went to work, and into a basket which the man on the throne gave him, he put the shells.

His back began to ache and he grew very tired indeed, but always, when he stopped, he saw the man on the throne looking at him and holding in a threatening manner a three-pronged fork that Hans was certain had very sharp points.

Days and days Hans thought he must have worked. He did not remember the nights at all. And then all at once he felt very wet. He hadn't before. He shivered, and to his surprise he found himself in the river beside the bank where he had been fishing when the big fish carried him off.

Hans scrambled up the bank and sat down, rubbing his eyes. "I wonder if I fell asleep," he said, "and dreamed it all." But his back still ached and Hans believed in fairies and goblins and he had no wish to work at the bottom of the ocean again.

"I wonder," thought Hans, "if I sell the fish I catch and carry the money home to Gretchen and little Hans, if the magic folks will let me alone. I believe I will try it and see."

"What ever has happened to lazy Hans?" asked the people in the village. "He does not spend his time or money at the tavern any more, and little Hans and Gretchen look so well and happy."

"It must be the fairies that made the change in him," said one.

"It would have taken more than the fairies to have changed Hans," said another. "My belief is that the goblins carried him off and gave him a sound beating."

But Hans held his peace and never told, and never did he again see the big fish or any of the magic folks, for always he sold the fish he caught and carried the money home to Gretchen and little Hans. And those who do right have no reason to fear the goblins or any of the magic people.

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

THE NEW MOON

TO SEE the new moon over the right shoulder brings good luck: over the left shoulder bad luck. This superstition is general throughout England and the United States—except in Alabama where it is said they consider it better to see the new moon first over the left shoulder. It is curious how they should have become "twisted" in Alabama, for the whole explanation of the superstition points to the right shoulder as the fortunate one to see the moon over. The idea of luck in connection with the new moon is a survival from the days when the crescent was the symbol of Isis, "from whom came all that was good and beautiful among men." Thousands of years ago by the banks of the Nile men accounted it lucky to see the symbol of Isis in the sky, as men do today by the banks of the Mississippi—though most of the latter never heard of the goddess. As to the right shoulder part of the superstition that is similar in origin to the superstition about getting out of bed right foot first and springs from an association of ideas, facts and words thus: Most normal people use preferably the "starboard" hand to do things with, which thus becomes the "right" hand to use and by extension the term "right" has come to be applied to all that side of the body. To see the new moon "right" see it over the "right" shoulder. It may be asked why over the shoulder at all? It is because of the idea associated with the word "right" in "right shoulder."

BEN BLOWER

"WHAT Ben Blower has is always a little bit better than every one else has." When people said that they smiled.

Mr. Blower was spending the week-end in the country with a club acquaintance whose wife had heard of Mr. Blower but had not met him. Her husband introduced, that Saturday night at dinner, a brisk little man in a black coat that somehow suggested the cut of a robin's tail feathers.

"My husband says that you made a very quick run up from town," Mr. Blower's hostess began.

"Ah, well—my motah, you see," he exploded with his own special pronunciation of words ending in the letter "r."

"You have a fast car?"

"New York to Boston in five houahs," said he.

From that the conversation turned to the Pilgrim tercentenary.

"Pilgrims—ah, yes," started off Mr. Blower again. "Can tell you all about the Pilgrims—direct descendant of Miles Standish and Priscillah."

"But Priscilla married John Alden, history tells us," she questioned, hurrying to the rescue of the Puritan maiden.

"History doesn't know everything," said Mr. Blower haughtily. So it went. He told his hostess that he had made and spent sums equal to any fortune. "You never hear of my income," he explained, "because I spend it on purpose to avoid the income tax." His children were all of the "genius type," his clothes were made in England; his friends were only of the best; and she was made to feel that he refrained from telling her his brand of cigarettes and politics only because such a declaration on his part would be used as advertising and campaign material.

As they parted for the night she said wearily, "I hope you rest well."

"I always rest well," said he.

And she dragged herself up to bed thinking that the blower habit might be harmless and amusing for half an hour in one's club; for a longer period it became quite a different matter.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

FACTS about your name; it's history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

PAMELA

THE quaintly demure name of Pamela, generally contracted to "Pam" in this country, is a literary name. It owes its prevalence to both the fancy of writers and the fashion for endings in "a," which distinguished Queen Anne's Augustan age. Alicia, Olivia and Lucinda are contemporaries of Pamela, having submitted to the same demand for vowel endings.

About the time that Pope launched Belinda as the heroine of his "Rape of the Lock," and Clarissa was fabricated from the Italian Clarice, the great Richardson adopted Pamela from Sir Philip Sidney's "Arcadia," as a recommendation to the maid servant whom he made his heroine.

English ladies who wished to be en mode, straightway adopted the name, and history of that period is filled with Pamelas. It was a popular name among the nobility, despite its original application to a maid servant, but later it suffered a decline, and became most frequent in the lower classes. Now, however, Pamela has returned to her own, and is again enjoying vogue in the best circles. In this country she has almost become a generic term for ingenue or "flapper."

The bloodstone is Pamela's talisman. It will preserve her bodily health; indeed, it was worn by the ancients as a blood tonic. Likewise it is said to guard her from deception, especially of a lover. Sunday is her lucky day and 5 her lucky number.

TOO LONG.

"Too long! He hasn't got a cent left."

Taffeta Frocks for Afternoons; Style Points in Modes for Girls

SO LONG as taffeta silk holds the allegiance of the feminine world fashion will be compelled to extend the glad hand to frocks with bouffant skirts. For taffeta is a long-established and beautiful favorite too sprightly and too flattering to be neglected, but it does not lend itself to the straightline mode. The shops are showing worlds of it in fascinating colors and changeable effects, which are destined to do honor to summer afternoons and evenings.

In the lighter colors and changeable weaves such silks are so decorative in themselves that they are prettiest when simply made up. Even in black and darker colors their crispness gives them vivacity. These are often combined with banding of lace or fine embroidered batiste. The pretty frock pictured may be imagined in black and white, with the bands that form the skirt herring-boned together with heavy silk floss, or in powder-blue with gray, or sand with gold, or in changeable taffeta with the herringboning done in one of the colors in the silk. It has a collar of fine embroidered net with a bow and ends of velvet baby ribbon on the shoulder and at the waistline. The skirt is moderately full and the silk has sufficient body to make it stand out. Both the silk and the design of the frock give it a quaint flavor that is borne out by the colonial pumps with big silver buckles worn with it, and the demure hair dressing is in keeping.

Taffeta silk is very pretty in the long tunic frocks with box-plaited tunic skirts set onto long, straight bodices worn over narrow, straight underskirts. Lingerie lace in rows of ruffles has always been liked on taffeta frocks for neck and sleeve finishing and is quite as popular as ever.

Taffetas, especially the changeable ones, look well with adornments made of the silk, as ruffles, ruchings, folds and covered cords, and with narrow

Even the very littlest girls surprise their elders with definite ideas as to what they want to wear and they all seem to grow more determined as the years go by. Nobody is more difficult to influence than girls in their early teens when it comes to choosing clothes—either they have no interest at all in the matter or they are as unchanging as the laws of the Medes and Persians when their minds are once made up. Mothers have difficulties of their own in keeping them from rushing into things that are beyond their years.

But designers have been kind to them and are making things easy by choosing the same fabrics for girls as for grownups and by adapting styles originated for older people to youthful wearers. The straightline figure belongs to youth and it is the foundation of the modes for young girls—there is almost no departure from it.

It is to be borne in mind that there are sports, utility and dressy styles for juniors as well as for their elders and that they are formed along the same lines. A pretty outfit of the sports type is shown in the illustration and the young wearer finds herself in possession of a plaited skirt, a monogram blouse, a smart jacket and a rakish hat, the same things as are worn by young women in their twenties. It is in little details that the difference lies, in the shorter blouse, wider collar and simpler jacket. Flannel or twill might be used for the skirt and jacket and wash silk for the blouse.

The kilted skirt made of the sturdiest materials, with a blouse of drill, is the best possible combination for all kinds of strenuous outdoor wear, but it has a rival in the knicker and blouse suits that grow more and more popular with athletic young folks.

For ordinary everyday dresses for the growing girl gingham is easily in the lead of fabrics. Linen and some of the heavier cotton weaves make many of the frocks she will wear on summer days and voile appears to be slated as a favorite when she is to be dressed up. It is in fashioning her dressier clothes that designers appear to work more independently of styles for grown people.

Some Facts About the Egg Marketing Campaign

(By A. A. Lauderdale, County Agent.)

I have been asked a number of questions relating to the egg marketing campaign to be launched on June 1st. Such questions may have occurred to others, also. I am here with listing a few of these questions and answers, which may throw light on the plan of our campaign.

1. What kind of an an organization is it?

The Alabama Farm Bureau Poultry Producers' Association is strictly a poultry producers organization, with only egg producers as members.

2. Why do we need such an organization?

The present system of marketing is unsatisfactory, because we are not paid for producing good eggs, and under the present system, we are forced to put eggs on the market during the heavy producing season, regardless of price.

3. How can a co-operative egg marketing asscciation benefit its members?

By establishing a central selling agency that will reduce the cost of handling, and marketing the eggs on a supply and demand basis.

4. What is necessary for a farmer to sell his eggs through this association?

To sign a marketing contract, which is an agreement to market through this association only. The farmer may use all the eggs necessary for eating purposes, for hatching, and sell his neighbor hatching eggs, but his market eggs must go through the association. The association will not attempt to market the eggs of its members in any comuunity, unless there is sufficient volume to warrant economical operation.

5. What are the requirements for membership?

Alabama Farm Bureau members can become members of the Egg Marketing Association by signing the marketing agreement, without extra fee; non Farm Bureau members may agree to pay a $2 fee, to be deducted from the receipts of his eggs.

6. Why is a membership fee required?

To cover the cost in getting the orgzaniation started, purchase necessary equipment, etc.

7. Why is it necessary to sign a contract?

To insure a quantity of eggs sufficient to enable the association to arrange intelligently for the marketing of the eggs.

8. Can a member produce more or less eggs?

He can increase or decrease his flock, as he likes. He only agrees to deliver all eggs produced for selling to the association.

9. How many hens necessary to establish a collecting center in a community?

At lease 500.

10. Who will grade the eggs?

Perhaps a merchant in the community, who will have charge of the collecting center in that community; he will be trained in classing and grading the eggs.

11. How often will payment be made?

It is expected that the Association will make returns on the 1st and 16th of each month, all things considered.

12. Have co-operative egg marketing associations been successful?

Yes, in Virginia, California, Oregon, Missouri, Illinois, Connecticut, etc.

13. When will the association begin to operate?

If 100,000 hens are signed up for the state, the association will begin in the early fall.

Plan For Raising Million Dollars For Ala. College

The executive committee of the board of trustees of Alabama College College, which is also the executive committee of the Million Dollar Campaign just launched, has studied the resources of Alabama and the faith of her people in the higher education of young women. They have likewise reviewed the distressing needs of the only state college for women at Montevallo, which is required to turn away three hundred students this year, more next year, and still more the next. It is not even adequately equipped to take care of these who are at present in attendance. They have recalled the fact that the people of Alabama have adready contributed most generously approximately two million dollars to the institutions which are largely for the young men.

After considering carefully all these facts, they were convinced that when the people realize the needs and the splendid opportunities of Alabama College, there will be in Alabama ten corporations or individuals who would like to invest at least as much as ten thousand dollars each in the womanhood of the state. Similiarly, they have believed there are twenty who would like to invest five thousand each. Studying the question from this angle, they have worked out the following estimate of the number of people in Alabama who would like to contribute the amounts opposite the numbers. It is on this basis that they have judged it not unreasonable to expect one million dollars from the people of Alabama.

10	men or corp	$10,000	$100,000
20	" "	5,000	100,000
40	" "	2,500	100,000
100	" "	1,000	100,000
200	" "	500	100,000
400	" "	250,	100,000
1000	" "	100	100,000
2000	" "	50	100,000
4000	" "	25	100,000
Miscellaneous & small gifts			100,000
Total			$1 000,000

The board of trustees urge every loyal citizen who has opportunity to contribute to this fund, but they do not undertake to suggest how much that contribution shall be. The amounts estimated may assist one who is expecting to give in deciding upon what is his just quota.

The Money You Pay For Service Comes Back to Alabama

THAT the Telephone Company is a larger spender than a collector is a fact known to very few.

The Bell System invests in new plant and spends for operating expenses, such as wages and taxes, and for supplies purchased in Alabama during one year, as much money as it collects from the public for telephone service.

The millions of dollars we poured into Alabama last year, no doubt, contributed to the commercial progress and prosperity of the State, while a large part of the money we collected for service found its way back to local communities where the telephone workers of Alabama are home builders and citizens.

The money you pay is for service, the value of which it is difficult to estimate. Its efficiency and continued extension is due not only to the loyalty of faithful workers and the confidence of investors, but in a large measure to your cordial interest and co-operation.

You Are Safer ~ On An L&N Train Than On the Street

L&N THE OLD RELIABLE

The interesting figures quoted below are taken from the latest available statistics of the National Safety Council, and substantiate in a most convincing way the statement made in the headline of this advertisement. Read them carefully and then consider the fact that 57,646,281 passengers were carried by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad during the past four years and not one was killed in a train accident, according to figures published by the Interstate Commerce Commission. In the year 1923, there were 13,278,268 passengers who used trains of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad and only a negligible few sustained even slight injuries.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad, protected by safety devices of the latest improved types, manned by carefully-trained and competent employees, and administered by officers who have earned their positions through years of experience, ranks as one of the safest railroads in America.

Automatic block signals have been installed on a great portion of the L. & N. Railroad; over a million dollars is being spent this year in extending the block system, and nearly one half million dollars has been appropriated for immediate installation of automatic control devices, which mechanically regulate speed of trains according to signal indications.

Latest available figures show that an average of 206 American citizens are killed by accidents every day in the year. Of this number, automobiles take much the heaviest toll—averaging 38 deaths per day. Accidental falls rank second, with 35; drowning, third with 19; burning, fourth with 16—and so on down the line until the remarkably small average of fatalities on American railroads of a little over 1 per day is reached. The latter figure represents passengers and employees who were killed in collisions or derailments.

Due to modern safety methods and constant vigilance on the part of the carriers, you are safer on an American railroad than anywhere else in the world.

THE DAIRY

FEEDING DAIRY COWS FOR PRODUCING MILK

A cow weighing 1,000 pounds needs each day, for the maintenance of her body, an amount of food equivalent to that supplied in 8 pounds of clover hay and 20 pounds of good corn silage. She must have this food regardless of whether or not she produces any milk. Food used for milk production must be in addition to that required to keep the cow's body.

A 1-000-pound cow producing 20 pounds of 4 per cent milk a day, if properly fed, devotes about half of her feed to maintenance and half to milk production. Obviously when a dairyman has gone to the expense of supplying that half of the food required for maintaining the cow's body, it is poor economy to withhold any of the other half, all of which goes to produce milk. A cow then requires feed in accordance to the amount of milk she is able to produce. The heavy producer needs the most feed.

Farm-grown roughages (silage, hay, etc.) furnish the cheapest food nutrients. However, a good dairy cow cannot eat enough roughage to supply her needs for milk production. She must have some grain. Therefore, to feed with the most economy the following rules must be observed, says the University of Missouri college of agriculture:

1. Feed all the roughage a cow will eat. She will eat more if fed three times a day instead of twice.

2. Feed grain in proportion to the pounds of milk produced.

To a Jersey or Guernsey cow feed 1 pound of grain for each 3 to 3½ pounds of milk produced.

To a Holstein, Ayrshire or Shorthorn feed 1 pound of grain for each 4 to 4½ pounds of milk produced.

Hollanders Breed Cows for Higher Production

"Weed, feed and breed" should be the slogan of every dairyman who has an eye to the future. Weed out the poor producer, feed well according to the amount of milk produced, and breed only to good, pure bred sires whose dams have records of better than 400 pounds of butterfat. If you follow these suggestions, your herd's average yield will be doubled, and more than doubled, in a few years.

In the United States 4,000 pounds of milk containing 160 pounds of butterfat is the production of the average cow. In Holland the average is just about double that figure. Why? Merely because the Hollanders have for many years fed and bred their cattle for high production.

A study of the records of more than 18,000 cow-testing associations in this country reveals two significant facts: First, in all cases the high-producing groups were the most profitable—they returned the greatest income over cost of feed. Second, the highest producers were also the groups that produced milk and butterfat most economically—that is, they showed the lowest feed cost a pound of butterfat or to the 100 pounds of milk.

Sudan Grass Makes Good Supplemental Pastures

In the handling of a herd of good milk cows, it seems to be imperative that farmers generally make provision for having supplemental pastures for their cows along in July and August when normally the native pastures give mighty little good feed. Probably the outstanding annual feed crop which we have for that purpose is sudan grass and the planting of that crop on thousands of acres simply for the pasture it would give when the other pastures were at best inferior would mean normally a higher return an acre than now is obtained.

Pastures provide cheap milk because pasture is a cheap feed and gives an excellent yield of milk. Plan to put in a few acres of sudan grass to use for pasturing your milk cows along next summer. The return will be higher an acre than if handled in any other way.

Dairy Notes

Cleanliness precedes a larger cream check.

Tuberculous animals show no symptoms until the disease is far advanced.

As a business man, Mr. Dairyman, can you afford not to improve your herd?

If it were not that it results in cows giving more milk, warming their drinking water would be a waste of time.

Most scrub cows don't seem to appreciate the law of compensation; it doesn't take half the time to milk them that it does to feed them.

Butter scoring 92 per cent brings from seven to nine cents more a pound than butter scoring 89 per cent Why not make better butter?

The beginning of a balanced ration for dairy cattle is to give the cow all the roughage she will eat—and nothing is better than alfalfa, or some of the other legumes.

"GROCERIES AND FEED" MAY SATISFY MORE THAN ONE HUNGER

Girls who want to succeed in business frequently ask whether bookkeeping isn't a blind alley occupation; whether once proved dependable in handling details, they won't be expected to content themselves with the petty things as long as they work. And other girls, hunting an excuse, often, for going in search of the romantic success that they think to find in some big city, insist that "working for father never gets you anywhere. Why, your father and mother can't even seem to learn that you're grown up, if you're a girl!"

Yet father may be in his own comfortable fashion, a "capitalist," able to choose for daughter business connections and short cuts to an established place, that not one wage earner in 10,000 finds. And the task of winning father's confidence by hard work plus some clever salesmanship, is, if we may believe the daughters who have tried it, just the same sort of work plus salesmanship that's required to get ahead on any job.

It's the story of the bookkeeper plus the story of the daughter entering father's business that is indicated in a dignified letter head reading:

I. R. LEONARD
Dealer In GROCERIES AND FEED
Sullivan, Indiana

"After graduation," writes Miss Leonard, "I accepted a position as bookkeeper and clerk in my father's grocery store. Soon he began consulting me on minor details and management. Then he turned the whole over to me to manage. Later, deciding to retire from active business, he sold it to me. Now I own and operate one of the largest grocery stores in southern Indiana.

"I recommend bookkeeping, store management, and saving till she can go into business for herself to any young woman who has a talent for detail or for management. She can succeed and enjoy her work," continues Miss Leonard.

"A clean grocery store, with packages all in an orderly row, with goods displayed to the best advantage and the fragrant odor of good coffee rising above it all, ought to appeal to the housewifely instincts of any girl."

CINNAMON AND BRONZE

Once there was held a convention of clever business women. From Detroit, Cleveland, Seattle, New York and elsewhere they hobnobbed or developed temporary factions and antagonisms. Many "big" women stood out from the crowd.

One of them was particularly striking looking. She wore brown, not dead brown, but "the vivid child of cinnamon and bronze" as some one put it. Sports coat, dinner dress, evening dress, all carried the same note. Her clothes spoke of money, of good taste, of that sophisticated something that makes a woman look distinguished 100 yards away.

By and by some of the distant curious got closer to the stranger. Her age was apparently the early thirties. Her coloring was the sort to support and be intensified by the clever warm brown flannel and bronzed brocade.

"She runs a book store and makes $10,000 a year," was the next item of information that went the rounds.

"She's very sure of herself, but not in the least snippy," some one else contributed.

"And did you notice that when bonds were pledged in the executive session she just naturally seemed to head up her state delegation?" another Miss Gossip announced.

Introduced eventually, Christine Coffee proved, as the girl said, calm but not snippy. She had driven her mother and sister up for the week—a 500-mile drive not all over good roads—and she had to see that they were amused. That had kept her from making many acquaintances convention-fashion.

The book store, in the West Virginia capital, started as a very tiny venture. It had grown gradually but soundly as the shifting population of the capital proved to want one sort of thing, the permanent residents a somewhat different line. In Miss Coffee's calm eyes, finding out what people want and furnishing it to them seems like doing sums in multiplication. Yet informative folk often furnish staggering statistics on the number of merchant bankrupts in the U. S. A. per year!

Occasionally, from unexpected sources, some other detail of Christine Coffee's book store in Charleston drifts into daylight. None of them contradict the impression given by the woman herself. All of them credit a personality to the little shop as spicy as cinnamon, as richly permanent as bronze.

MARRIED TWELVE YEARS BEFORE BABY CAME

Gladly Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Louisville, Nebraska.—"I was married twelve years before my boy was born. I had a lot of female troubles and had been treated by a physician for them but they continued much the same. Then I read your advertisement in the newspapers and thought I would give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a good trial, for if it had helped others, why not me? I have taken 36 bottles of the medicine and am never without it in the house. My baby boy is three years old now and I sure am happy since I got relief from my troubles. When any one has troubles like mine, or any ways like mine, I am always glad to recommend the Vegetable Compound so that they will get the right kind of medicine." — Mrs. Joe Novak, Box 662, Louisville, Neb.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, 98 out of every 100 report they were benefited by its use. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Woman

If a man is in grief, who cheers him? In trouble, who consoles him? In wrath, who soothes him? In joy, who makes him doubly happy? In prosperity, who rejoices? In disgrace, who backs him against the world, and dresses with gentle unguents and warm poultices the rankling wounds made by the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune? Who, but woman, if you please. — William Makepeace Thackeray.

The Usual Arrangement

"Who's the boss at your home—you or your wife?" "Oh, we split it up—I say I am, but she really is."

Often a man does himself a favor by keeping on good terms with his neighbors.

The more haste we make in the wrong direction the further we are from our destination.

Is Your Work Hard?

Is your work wearing you out? Are you tortured with throbbing backache—feel tired, weak and worn out? Then look to your kidneys! Many occupations tend to weaken the kidneys. Constant backache, headaches, dizziness and rheumatic pains result. One suffers annoying kidney irregularities; feels nervous, irritable and worn out. Don't wait! Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Workers everywhere recommend Doan's. They should help you, too. Ask your neighbor!

An Alabama Case

J. D. Williams, prop. of general store, E. Main St., Fort Payne, Ala., says: "Continual jarring and jolting on the wagon weakened my kidneys. My back was so lame and weak I couldn't lift anything at all and when I stooped I had a sharp, quick pain in my back. Two boxes of Doan's Pills rid me of the trouble. I believe the cure is permanent."

PROFESSIONAL NURSE SAYS TANLAC HAS NO EQUAL

Mrs. J. Clark Says Tanlac Was More Than Match for Her Troubles.

By reason of the fact that she speaks from her long experience as a professional nurse, the statement of Mrs. J. Clark, of 415 Walsworth Ave., Oakland, Calif., will be of interest to all who are in need of an upbuilding tonic.

"In all my fifteen years' experience as a trained nurse," says Mrs. Clark's statement, "I never found the equal of Tanlac as a stomach medicine and tonic. Two years ago an attack of influenza left me without appetite and my stomach in such a bad fix that the little I did eat seemed to do me harm instead of good.

"Stomach pains would make me so weak I would feel right faint. The least exertion would completely exhaust me and six months before taking Tanlac I was so weak I had to hire my housework done. I was in bed most of the time for two months and was getting desperate.

"Tanlac was more than a match for my troubles and eight bottles left me feeling fine. I eat and sleep like a child and have energy and strength that makes life a pleasure. Tanlac is simply grand."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Spoons in History

Ordinary spoons were known to the Egyptians, who made them of wood, stone, ivory and bronze, and in Biblical times we may read that Moses made golden spoons for the tabernacle. Silver spoons have been found in the buried cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum. The name "spoon" is evolved from an Anglo-Saxon word that meant splinter of wood, so we can guess what the primitive English employed for this useful implement.

An Evasion

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best--Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfil the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Russia's New Paradise

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

So little had been heard of the region along the northeast shore of the Black sea, until Sukhum Kaleh recently became a health resort for Russian officials, that it might be assumed always to have been a waste land. It constitutes an excellent example, however, of the fact that the thriving region of one age often is the neglected realm of another.

This was the famous Colchis of Greek days and more than 600 years before Christ, Meletus, then most powerful center of the Greek world, planted the city of Dioscurias on the site of the present Sukhum. The port and its neighborhood became of great importance, and in due time they were incorporated into the Roman and Byzantine empires. It was one of the greatest of Genoese trading stations in late Byzantine times; but with the coming of Turkish rule a blight fell that has never been wholly removed.

Though there is easy access to this strip of coast by water from Crimea and the Sea of Azov, Russia came into possession of the region late, and only after her control had been extended entirely around the east end of the Caucasus mountains and her armies had "marched through Georgia." The mountains were the allies of the Circassians and Abkhasians who lived along this shore. Here the towering Caucasus becomes a coast range, and its innumerable spurs that strike at right angles into the water cut the country up into a number of compartments.

The Crimea has been a delightful resort land for the Russians for generations, but the present development of the northeast coast of the Black sea is taking place because its climate and surroundings are really superior to those of the Crimean peninsula. The veranda of a villa in the new vacation paradise can command a magnificent view of the Black sea, deep forests, and lofty Mt. Elbruz, one-third of which is constantly covered with snow. The same mountains shelter the coast from the cold winter blasts from the north and east. As a result, though the district is in the latitude of Massachusetts, it has temperatures comparable to those of coast regions much farther south. The thermometer seldom approaches the freezing point in winter or rises much above 80 degrees in the summer.

Climate Is Delightful.

Sukhum Kaleh is one hundred miles north of Batum at the eastern end of the Black sea and is the only good port between Batum and the Sea of Azov. Mountaineers, accustomed to their frosty heights, shun the city, fearing malaria, for the torrential streams have all built small marshes about their mouths. But the foothills of the Caucasus, a background splashed against the sky with giant strokes, afford one of the most delightful climates in the world. It is natural that Russians make this district their vacation capital since the Caucasus is the only great mountain range in all soviet land and presents a striking relief to the flat but fruitful plains. A famous Alpine guide who went to the Caucasus by rail, exasperated by endless horizontal lines in the Ukraine, finally broke out saying it was no use to go farther hunting for mountains since it was hourly becoming more evident that the world was truly flat.

Though the Caucasus mountains as a whole are barren, gaunt, rugged to a fault, the western strip along the Black sea is clothed heavily with forests and almost tropical undergrowth. Warm winds sweeping eastward are robbed of moisture by the mountain ridge. What arid Turkestan loses, Circassia and Abkhasia use to grow Circassian walnut trees for beautiful furniture. Observers report the Caucasus forests remarkable for their variety; in addition to walnut there are oak, beech, pine, and many other varieties growing side by side. One enthusiast declares plums and pears almost drop in the traveler's mouth as he rides down the Kodor valley. Strawberries, raspberries and currants abound in the glens.

Botanists have found in this mountain retreat survivors of the vegetable world when the earth was young. Common plants, which ordinarily attain a height of one or two feet, become giants five or six feet tall. Mountainsides are great bouquets. There are great yellow scabious flowers, azure columbines and crimson blooms like Alpine snake-weed. Beneath these gaudy canopies are found shade-loving blooms, geraniums, orchids, forget-me-nots, violets, jasmines, rhododendrons. Thickets of box cover much of seaward slope.

Origin of the People Unknown.

The Abkhasians, or the remnant of them, who inhabit this Caucasian paradise, are a race which seems to have no ties with the historical world. Ethnologists are said to have worked on the problem of their origin in vain. Like northerners they are tall, fair-complexioned, blue-eyed, have auburn hair and love sports and athletics. Yet they have an oriental regularity of feature. Other similarities ally them to Semitic races, and some students have gone so far as to see in them a strain from old Egyptian colonists. They have no written language. Their fruitful mountain slopes provide an easy living and not seldom an adventurer in the hills is reminded of old Greek idyls as he comes upon a picturesque shepherd tending his flock, grazing in infinite peace on a solitary mountain meadow.

The Abkhasians of the coast were the Vikings of the Black sea before that body of water came under Russian dominion. In their long galleys holding 100 to 300 men they raided the coasts of the Crimea, Anatolia, and even European Turkey. After Russian ships plied the sea these marine forays had to be given up. Then in 1838 the Muscovite forces came to the isolated northeast coast itself and the land became Russian territory. The Abkhasians were not happy under the Russian yoke and thousands of them moved into Turkey. When Turkey was at war with Russia in 1877, the Abkhasians helped the invading Turkish armies, and when the Russians won the war, 30,000 of them emigrated in a body to Asiatic and European Turkey. The region was almost depopulated by this movement and has remained largely unoccupied since. The old inhabitants were forest lovers, practicing their religious rites among the trees and holding the oak sacred as did the Druids. Offerings were hung to the branches, and even some of the dead were disposed of in this way.

He who searches in the forests, among the undergrowth, and even beneath the sea, will find many evidences of the past north of this fringe of coast land. During the Roman regime there was a highway along the coast and a few of the milestones are still standing, though all traces of the road have disappeared. To the natives of today these staunch reminders of a past civilization are merely "fairy altars."

Ruins of Greek City.

Changes in the level of the shore line have helped to obliterate marks of the past. At Sukhum ruins of the old Greek city of Dioscurias can be seen under the waters of the harbor. The very sands are filled with evidences of a past civilization, and after severe storms old coins, rings and various other objects have been found on the beach.

Herodotus knew the Caucasus for the highest mountains with which the civilized world was acquainted. He reported that the people lived on fruit, and so they do to a great extent, even today. Leaves for making fast dye were obtained in the forests, he wrote, and the people were insensible to laws of decency or morality. To the Black sea shore of the Caucus came Jason in his tiny ship in search of the golden fleece. Perhaps the "golden fleece" was merely an excuse, a "business trip," which would permit him to spend a summer at what the world has rediscovered as an attractive vacation resort.

Prometheus was bound by the gods to the frozen flanks of Elbruz, legend has it. He was the god of fire and cultural progress, a friend of man, and it was for frustrating acts of despotic deities that he was chained to the highest peak in Europe.

Elbruz is constantly topped "with kingly ermine snow," but visitors say it does not compare in majesty to many other famous peaks. Like Mt. Rainier, Elbruz is a volcanic cone. Many peaks of the Caucasian barrier were once volcanoes spewing lava. Though it is the highest mountain in Europe, its 18,470 feet are exceeded by Alaskan peaks, many in South America and a few in Africa and Asia.

A quick way to see the northeast coast at its best is to sail in a coasting steamer from Batum to Novoroslisk. The vessel is in sight of land all the way, and from its deck the rugged coast-line with its background of peaks stands out in all its grandeur. Often the tops of the range are shrouded in clouds, but from time to time the veil shifts and discloses sparklingly white peaks.

Wood That Won't Float

As a general proposition that statement that wood floats will be generally accepted without question or qualification, but as a matter of fact there are several woods that are heavier than water and invariably sink in water.

One of them is the "mancano" wood of the Philippines—unknown to us until recently, but which, it is hoped, will serve as a substitute for the costly lignum vitae.

Lignum vitae is the wood of a tree native to the American tropics. Some of the best of it comes from Cuba. Its name, meaning "wood of life," was bestowed upon it by the early Spaniards, among whom a belief arose it possessed almost miraculous properties as a cure for various diseases.

Famous Hampton Court

Hampton Court palace, built by Cardinal Wolsey, is probably the finest of all the old English palaces. It is up the river about fifteen miles from Waterloo. It is of red brick, softened by time, and contains 1,000 apartments. It is rich in story. The ghost of the murdered Catherine Howard walks there. There is a haunted gallery, a maze in the beautiful gardens and a park of over 1,000 acres. Most of the apartments are occupied by royal pensioners, like the mother of Warneford, who brought down the first Zeppelin. George II was the last sovereign to use Hampton court.

We don't give you but ten days to tear it up after you receive this letter. Don't you go up there and move the worms and the old copper head and hide them and tell him where to find them. I recon you don't no how sorry people nose you are. You think they dont know you done all this and you had better not do it any more, and don't notify him to get everything away for you are coming through. Tear that thing up and keep it tore up. You are sorrow than them that make the whiskey or you would treat all alike. If you are going to let one make, let all make; one is not any better than tothern.

You are just ajactly sorry or you would not let that thing stand for men to go and get drunk and beat up their folks and mistreat them. You are getting a little money by letting that thing stand but your money won't do you any good. If you don't get busy you will get put out of office for letting that thing stand. There is too many folks nose how you are doing and if you don't tear that thing up and keep it tore up you will get something you are not expecting. This is a warning to help you out of danger. It is not so far from his house and you had better search his house for it is there and stays there. We are going to give you only 10 days to do it it and this means do it now or you will wish you had.

If———'s still was tore up here would not be any whiskey around. You have let your deputies shoot men's guts out, now shoot his out. If you don't you won't no your name when we get threw with you.

A CALL TO THE HIGHEST BROTHER TOM'S THEME

A large congregation gathered in the high school auditorium Sunday morning to hear the annual commencement sermon, given this year by Rev. T. K. Roberts, of Columbiana, known to his many friends as "Brother Tom."

The group of 23 young men and young women of the class of '24 seated on the rostrum with him, them an earnest and eleoquent appeal from this text: "Arise and be doing and the Lord be with thee." It was a "Call to the Highest," a call to make for their lives not just a wise choice but the wisest choice.

The next exercise of the commencement will be the Senior Play "Kicked Out of College" which will be given tonight and which is said to be one of the best plays given this season. Tomorrow, Friday, will be commencement day. The commencement address will be given by Hon. A. B. "Take No Chance With Runner," Says Deputy Chief Deputy C. J. Falkner says he has found that it won't do to take any sort of chance with a rum runner. After chasing a man for nearly half a mile thru woods, fields and swamps Sunday night Mr. Falkner came up with him and placed him under arrest. On the way back to join the other officers the runner shoved the deputy into the creek and tried to make his second get-away. He was caught, however, handcuffs were slipped on him and in this way was brought to jail.

Card From Judge Lyman

Montevallo, Ala., May 17, 1924.
To the Democrats of the Eighteenth Judicial Circuit:

For the manifestation of your confidence as expressed in the recent primary election, in nominating me to complete the current term as your circuit judge, I am profoundly grateful. It is not possible for me to put into words the extent of my appreciation.

The superb loyalty and activity of my primary supporters is thankfully acknowledged. I have no terms calculated to convey to them any idea of the fullness of my gratitude.

My late competitors are now my ardent adherents. Any disappointment they may have experienced I am fully assured has dissolved in their united purpose to have your choice endorsed by the whole electorate in November. For them and all those who preferred them, I entertain, as always, the friendliest feelings.

Be assured of my renewed sense of the obligation I am under to render faithful fitting service. It shall be my ambition and my unremitting endeavor to worthily discharge the trust you have committed to me, and to deserve the honor you have conferred.

Yours sincerely,
E. S. Lyman.

Million Dollar Campaign for Alabama College Starts June 2

Alabama College at Montevallo will launch its Million Dollar Campaign June 2, with Dean O. C. Carmichael at the helm and the state fully organized for an intensive drive which will last for two months.

The purpose of this campaign is to provide funds for expansion. This sum will enable the college to take care of the hundreds of young women who are anxious to enter but who are barred because accomodations are limited. Today there are 650 students enrolled in the school, and there is not another crack or crevice into which a girl might be stowed.

Not only are the dormitories crowded to capacity but the classrooms are overflowing. Teachers find it difficult to teach their subjects satisfactorilly with students sitting in chairs as well as in the desks provided, to say nothing of those who are standing lined about the walls because space cannot be found to place chairs for them. Yet according to the college authorities this is the condition in many of the Freshman courses where the growth of the college is naturally felt most.

Organization of the human machine which is to collect this million dollars is going forward rapidly, with all available clubs and groups in the state cooperating, and every one of the 650 girls now enrolled in the school pledged to spread the gospel in her own home town.

The congressional districts of the state have been taken as the first units of division and one member of the executive committee is to head each of the districts. These district chairmen will have student assistants who have already been appointed from among the student body to take charge of the detail work in their respective districts.

The district chairmen will appoint county chairmen, who will in turn divide their counties into sections and appoint heads of each section. These sectional organizations will have direct charge of collecting the money and will make periodical reports and remittances to the county chairman, thence to the district chairman and to the main organization.

The larger cities in the state will be organized separately, the local clubs in each city being invited to act as a basis for the organization.

The aim of the campaign is to provide funds for immediate expansion. Unless this expansion can be financed hundreds of girls must be turned away this year as they were last. It was only by putting up a temporary wooden dormitory that the school was able to make room for the students now enrolled. As it is, several hundred were turned away.

Enrollments on the first of May were equal to the number enrolled on the first of August last year, indicating that there will be more than four hundred who cannot be accomodated.

"We have demonstrated that we can put up temporary living quarters as we did last year," says Dean Carmichael. "But we cannot provide class room space and educational equipment."

"Today there are 3,000 young men of college age in state schools while there are only 1,000 young women in state schools, 650 of them being enrolled at Alabama College. These figures quoted in the face of the fact that there are almost twice as many young girls graduating from high schools of the state every year as there are boys indicates only one condition. The young women of Alabama are finding that their state cannot meet their demands and are going outside of Alabama to get their educations.

"The quota of a million dollars has been divided among the citizens of the state in a general way. It is estimated that if every white man and woman gives one dollar the sum will run far in excess of the desired million. When one stops to consider that in Alabama alone the people spend more than two million dollars a year for chewing gum, the fact that Alabama College is asking for one million to invest in the young womanhood of the state seems conservative."

THE OFFICIAL COUNT

The official vote of Shelby county in the primay election last week as declared by the executive committee is as follows:

THE SOUTH AS A FIELD FOR HOME MISSIONS

By Richard H. Edmonds, Editor of the Manufacturers Record, Baltimore.

(The article given below is an open letter written by Richard H. Edmonds, editor of THE MANUFACTURERS' RECORD of Baltimore, to Dr. B.D. Gray, Corresponding Secretary of the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention. Mr. Edmonds is as Dr. Gray says, "One of the country's foremost publicists and the South's most potent spokesman," The letter is reprinted from the Alabama Baptist.

The editor of the Reporter hopes that every reader of the paper will read Mr. Edmonds' article with the greatest care.)

"I need not remind you that I have been saying for a good many years that the South is one of the greatest fields for missionary activity, based on the influence which it will have upon world affairs, that can be found in all the world. There is nothing just like the Southern situation.

"Perhaps you remember that I published a year or so ago a statement from Mr. Jesse Grant to the effect that his father, General Grant, in studying the influence of foreign immigration upon this country, and regarding as a very serious danger the menace of too many foreigners in America, said that he thought the time would come when the Anglo-Saxonism of the South would have to save the United Sates from destruction. If General Grant had lived to the present time and seen the extent of the foreign element in the North and West and the influence which it is exerting, he would, I am sure, have realized even more deeply that he did in his life time that the future of this country is in the hands of the South, to be saved or lost according to what the Anglo-Saxons of the South may do.

"As you know the population of New York City has about 76 percent of the foreign stock; that is, of people born abroad, or born of one or more parents who were born abroad. Chicago has about 75 or 76 per cent foreign stock in its population. All New England has 60 per cent. A few days ago I saw an official government report that of 31,000 students in the public schools of New Haven, 22,000 were of foreign origin; only 9,000 being native American children. There were 2,000 more Italians in these schools than the total number of Americans born, or born of native American stock.

"The condition is typical of much of the North and West, and this foreign element, thoroughly Americanized as some of it is, is yet entirely different in most respects from the native Anglo Saxon. In the early days the settlers in Virginia as well as those who landed at Plymouth Rock, were largely of a God-fearing people who came here to seek religious and civil liberty, and to found a country free from the interminable entanglements and diplomacy of Europe. The people who have been coming to this country of recent years are to a large extent a God-ignoring, if not a God hating people. Many of them are of Bolshevistic strain which proclaims 'to hell with all churches, all governments, all synagogues! We are anachists! We are Atheists!'

"In the South on the contrary, the foreign element is still comparatively small. North Carolina stands preeminent in this respect with only seven tenths of one percent of foreign stock, while Rhode Island at the other end of the list with 69 per cent of foreign stock.

"The resources of the south for material development are greater than those of any other equal area in the world. They guarantee a development as far in excess of that which we now see as the progress and the wealth of the South today exceeds the desperate poverty of the South of 1865. Though I have watched the movement of industrial development in this section for nearly fifty years, nothing in all that time is at all comparable in extent and variety of activity to that which is now under way from Maryland out to Texas and Oklahoma. We are making marvelous strides. Capital from all sections is rushing into the South. New England cotton manufacturers, disturbed by the labor and legislative conditions in their section due largely to the foreign element, are rushing hotfoot into the South They have invested about $30,000,000 in the purchase of Southern mills in the last twelve months, and are spending the same amount in the building of new mills.

"Outside of New York, Chicago, and Philadelphia, 39 hotels, each costing over $1,000,000 were completed in the United States last year and of this number nineteen, or almost exactly one-half, are in the South. Some of these hotels cost $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 each. This year will show still a greater activity in hotel building; and this tremendous movement in hotel building is merely typical of what is taking place in every line of activity throughout the South.

"The great business leaders of the country are looking to the South as the safest place in the United States in which to invest money, because of its freedom from heavy foreign immigration. The very fact that the foreign element is so dominent in some sections of the West has for years been causing the Anglo-Saxon people of these regions to move South to be in touch with the Anglo-Saxonism of this section.

"A southern born man, a large banker in New York, said to me a few years ago that he was living in New York in order to make money, but that he had established a home back in the South for the raising of his family, for under no condition would he be willing for his children to be educated outside of the South.

"The tremendous increase in business and in wealth of the South, not simply in a few states but in every state, will have a very serious influence upon the whole country. Having saved the South after the Civil War to Anglo-Saxonism, and prevented its sinking into the condition of Haiti of San to Dimingo, this section has gradually been going forward in educational work, and in the utilization of its vast stores of raw materials, until it has reached a point where even the veriest skeptic of the past can now realize that the possibilities of the future are almost unlimited.

"What shall the South do with the enormous wealth which has been coming to it? This wealth will test its stamina and its moral backbone to a far greater extent than poverty ever tested them. We shall be in greater danger from the menace of the power of unwisely used wealth than we were from the danger of destruction by poverty at the close of the civil war and for years the religious life of this section is in some respects the most tremendous issue which faces the world. The salvation of the individual soul in the South takes on a broader phase than merely that of one more soul saved for work here and for life eternal hereafter; because every

SUNDAY WAS BUSY DAY WITH SHERIFF'S FORCE

Four men, one still, one Hudson car, 45 gallons of whiskey and about 200 gallons of beer make up the toll taken on Sunday by Sheriff Falkner and his associates in their efforts to curb violation of the laws in Shelby county.

The still was of 50 gallons capacity and was located about five miles north of Dunnavant; with it was taken about 200 gallons of beer. Three men, Godfrey Isbell, Steve Isbell and Austin Isbell, were placed under arrest.

On Sunday night as the officers were returning to Columbiana in a Ford car they were met on the Shoal Creek bridge near Dunnavant by a man driving a Hudson, who showed no disposition either to give part of the road or to stop. Officer Gardner who was at the wheel of the officers' car drove his Ford right into the big car throwing it down an embankment and by a miracle holding his own car on the bridge. The driver of the Hudson, Joe Hollis, of Birmingham, jumped from his car and took to the fields. Chief Deputy Curtis Falkner, who is the champion sprinter of the Sheriff's force took up the chase and after a run of nearly half a mile thru the fields and swamps came up with his man and placed him under arrest.

The car was loaded with 45 gallons of whiskey. Sheriff Falkner and Deputy Coshatt were also members of the officers party.

On Thursday of last week Sheriff Falkner, Deputies Falkner and Clay Lester, State Officer Gardner and Federal Agent Adkins raided two big stills in Fungo Hollow near Pelham. The stills about 100 yards apart were of 400 gallons capacity each, and were in operation when the officers came up. Eighty gallons of whiskey was taken and about 4000 gallons of beer poured out. Allen McClendon and Manon Burnett were placed under arrest. Two other men escaped.

MRS. SISK HEADS WOMEN VOTERS

ORGANIZATION WILL ENDEAVOR TO INCREASE STATE VOTE TWENTY PER CENT AT NEXT ELECTION.

Gadsden.—Following the election of Mrs. Amelia Worthington (Brenton K.) Fisk of Birmingham as president, the Alabama League of Women Voters adjourned its fourth annual session here.

Other officers named were first vice president, Mrs. C. R. Bricken, Montgomery; second vice president, Miss Ita Stocks, Gadsden; third vice president, Mrs. M. Y. Fritts, Dothan; secretary, Mrs. A. J. Bowron, Birmingham; treasurer, Miss Annie Jo Croates Gadsden; publicity chairman, Mrs. R. F. Johnson, Birmingham. It was decided to allow the executive board to select the 1925 convention city. Dothan, Auburn, Anniston and Birmingham are bidding for the honor.

More counties will be organized within the year and it was decided to conduct a big membership drive next September. A state bulletin was authorized. It will be published at regular intervals, will be mailed to every member, and will carry information regarding all state and even local candidates.

The convention voted to conduct citizenship schools in the counties where leagues exist to instruct voters how to mark ballots and to construe and interpret the election laws of the state, also to give instruction as to the duties of local and county officers.

One of the most interesting plans decided upon was the authorization of official visits to county institutions in order to spread correct information as to how they are conducted. Another plan is to get out more voters at coming elections. A poll tax campaign will be conducted probably next October.

The convention went on record as being determined to increase Alabama's vote by 20 per cent at the next general election. The statement was made on the floor that only 29 per cent of the qualified voters of Alabama voted in the last general election.

Owing to the unseasonable weather conditions which have prevailed for the past few weeks in Morgan county it is said a large part of the early planted cotton must be replanted. DAIRY FACTS

HEALTHY COWS GIVE HIGH QUALITY MILK

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The purchase of a good herd bull is the first forward step in producing better calves at a less cost per pound. In common or grade herds calves sired by good pure bred beef bulls weigh on the average about 125 pounds a head more when one year old than calves of the same age sired by the general run of scrub bulls, says the United States Department of Agriculture, and they sell for about 2 cents a pound more as stockers and feeders. Two-year-old steers sired by good pure bred bulls weigh on an average about 200 pounds a head more than steers of the same age sired by scrub bulls, and sell for from 2 to 4 cents a pounds more as stockers and feeders.

In the case of yearlings, scrubs weigh about 300 pounds, and when they sell for about 4 cents a pound as stockers and feeders they bring $12 a head, while grades at the same age weigh about 425 pounds, and will sell for about 2 cents more, or 6 cents a pound, bringing $25.50. Two-year-old scrubs weigh about 525 pounds a head, and, assuming that they sell for 8 cents a pound, will bring $42 a head, while grades of equal age weigh about 725 pounds, and at 2 cents more a pound (10 cents) as stockers and feeders, bring $72.50.

There is practically no difference in the cost of feed for the two classes of calves up to the yearling age, but from that time on grades develop more capacity and require more feed than scrubs. The difference in cost of feed, however, is a very small item when the offspring of the good bulls are worth practically twice as much as those of scrub bulls.

There Are Many Coffee Cows in United States

There are 3,000,000 coffee cows and 750,000 tea cows in the United States declare dairy statistielans of the United States Department of Agriculture. That is to say, the quantity of milk and cream used in tea and coffee in the United States is equivalent to the production from that many cows.

Coffee consumption is around 1,000,000,000 pounds annually or approximately 40,000,000,000 cups. This requires 40,000,000,000 ounces of cream, the milk equivalent of which is 12,500,000,000 pounds, or practically one-eighth the total production of milk in the United States.

Consumption of tea in the United States is practically 85,000,000 pounds or approximately 21,000,000,000 cups. The quantity of cream used in tea averages only one-half that in coffee or one-half ounce per cup, or a total in terms of milk of over 3,000,000,000 pounds.

Making liberal allowances for the use of milk in coffee and tea or of half milk and half cream, there still would be more than one-eighth the total production of milk used in these two beverages. The department's survey also brought out the fact that one-tenth the sugar consumed for all purposes in the United States is used in coffee and tea, the quantity thus consumed being 800,000,000 pounds a year.

Consumption of Cream and Milk Is Increased

Consumption of fluid milk and cream in both farm and city homes has been increasing rapidly for several years, a survey just completed by the United States Department of Agriculture indicates. Average consumption in 1923 was 53 gallons, compared with 50 gallons in 1922, and 49 gallons in 1921. The average daily consumption in 1923 figures out 1.6 pints per person.

Farm people who have producing cows consume more milk and cream than do city people, but farm people without cows or with nonproducing cows, consume less than do city people, the survey shows. Average daily per capita consumption on farms having cows was 1.78 pints in 1923; on farms without cows or having nonproducers the average consumption was .775 of a pint, and in city homes the per capita daily consumption averaged .87 of a pint.

The farm figures were tabulated from approximately 30,000 schedules of consumption on individual farms, and represent the most comprehensive survey ever made of milk and cream consumption. Data on consumption in cities were obtained principally from boards of health and covered nearly 300 cities, or about 25,000,000 people.

Dairy Cow's Requirements

A dairy cow's requirements are measured by her body weight and milk production. An average dairy cow giving a good flow of milk requires about 50 pounds of silage and 15 pounds of alfalfa or clover hay besides a grain ration of from 6 to 10 pounds. Some farmers have the idea they do not need a silo because they have alfalfa or clover. This is a great mistake and a most wasteful and incorrect conception of feeding Legume hay is not a balanced food.

FIGHTING BOLL WEEVIL

Big Factor in Results of Poisoning Insects Is Use of Suitable Machinery.

A determining factor in the results of poisoning the boll weevil with calcium arsenate is the use of suitable dusting machinery, according to experts of the United States Department of Agriculture, who have conducted extensive tests of various types under various conditions at Tallulah, La. Engineers and experts of the Department of Agriculture have worked for several years with representatives of manufacturing concerns and the fundamentals of suitable machines for dusting have been worked out. Nearly all dusting machines on the market are built according to the recommendations of the government experts.

However, there are several types of successful machines, each type being better suited to certain conditions than others. The machines are classified as follows: hand guns, saddle guns, one-mule machines, cart machines and power machines.

"The hand gun may be used for dusting one row at a time," say the experts, "is hand operated and carried by man. It usually retails from $15 to $25. One gun will take care of from five to eight acres per season and, on account of labor difficulties involved, it is seldom practicable to use hand guns on more than 25 acres in one organization.

"The saddle gun is built to be carried on mule back while operating and usually covers two rows at a time. The price is about $55 or furnished with saddle and attachments complete, $75.

"The one-mule machine is the new type of intermediate machine which is operated by one man and one mule. It runs between the rows like a walking cultivator and treats two or three rows at a time. It probably will retail around $125 and will take care of from 50 to 75 acres of cotton through the season.

"The cart machine is the two-wheeled type operated by one man and two mules. It usually treats three or four rows at a time and will take care of about 100 acres of cotton for the season. It derives its power from the wheels. The retail prices probably will vary from $200 to $300.

"The power machine is the four-wheeled, two-mule machine which derives its power from a small gasoline engine mounted on the platform. This usually dusts from five to seven rows at a trip and will take care of from 150 to 200 acres of cotton for the season under proper conditions. However, it should be used only in very large fields where facilities for turning are good and also should be used only by fairly skilled labor. It probably will retail around $500.

"In buying dusting machinery, consider carefully the area to be treated and buy at least enough machinery to cover this every three days. Buying a surplus of dusting machinery is really the very best of economy because this is more or less of a permanent investment and will save on the expense of operation and on the poison used.

"Important points to consider in the selection of the type of machinery to be used are the area of fields, presence of stumps or other obstructions. Driving a wheeled machine through a field with a large number of stumps is very difficult, especially so at night, and it is almost impossible to keep from running into stumps occasionally." Choice of the machines to be used must be made with such matters taken into consideration.

"The basic principle of the present system of cotton dusting requires that every portion of the cotton plant be thoroughly covered by the fine particles of poison," say the experts. "This means that a dust cloud must be created which will drift throughout the cotton. It is desirable to have as much of this adhere to the cotton plant as possible and thus the presence of dew greatly increases the efficiency of the application. In addition to this, however, atmospheric conditions must be just right or the poison has a tendency to drift off and not settle through the plants. This is largely a question of dampness, air movement, etc., and by far the best conditions for dusting are experienced at night when the air is calm and the plants are damp and when the dust cloud will drift through and settle on every portion of the cotton plant.

"The type of dust cloud for successful cotton dusting bears directly on machine construction, particularly to the arrangement of the nozzles or distributors. It has been found that it is not necessary to blow the poison directly on the plants but that the powder which simply drifts on the cotton will be just as efficient. Nozzles are usually placed at approximate average row widths and it does not matter whether the nozzles are over the rows or between them."

Farmers are advised to consult with their county agent or state college of agriculture as to the best type of machine for their individual uses.

Materials for Spraying

The following is given by R. S. Herrick, secretary of the Iowa Fruit Growers' association, as a basis for estimating materials required for average sixteen to twenty-five-year-old trees to be sprayed four times:

Get exact number of trees to be sprayed. One-half as many pounds of dry lead arsenate will be required as there are trees to be sprayed. One-half as many gallons of liquid lime-sulphur will be required as there are trees to be sprayed.

FOUNDATION STOCK IS BIG ESSENTIAL

The good breeder of live stock may be said to be the one that has been successful in the selection of the parents of his stock. The corner stone of success is selection. Care and feed are essential, but they can develop an animal no further than the inheritance that animal has received from its parents will permit. A man was seen one time upon the Denver market trying to buy a boar to take home to his herd. When engaged in conversation he showed that type, ancestry or health did not enter his mind. A boar was a boar and nothing more to him.

Selection is just as important to that man who was a producer of market hogs as it is to the producer of animals from which others breed. Satisfactory results cannot be obtained by taking anything as foundation stock and then save the best from their increase. There is quite likely not to be any best among the increase. The live stock man must decide upon his ideal before he starts in the business and selects his foundation animals with his ideal always before his mind's eye. It is impossible very frequently to obtain our ideal or even approach it, but to have a goal toward which to work and never reach it, is better than not to have any goal at all.

Selection is important, as has been suggested, and it may now be said that selection to a type is important. Diversity of types seen in a breeder's flock or herd is generally indicative of haphazard breeding operations. What is the value of uniformity of type? No one will question its financial advantages in feeding or selling. Many worry about which breed to raise, but the selection of and adherence to a type is even more important than the selection of a breed. The breeder of live stock must be a student of animal form and a judge to insure success in his endeavor.—B. W. Fairbanks, Colorado Agricultural College.

Winter Swine Slaughter Shows Decided Increase

During the winter months of December, January and February, 16,821,291 hogs were slaughtered in establishments operating under federal meat inspection. This number exceeds the previous record for three months, made December, 1918, and January and February, 1919, by more than one million hogs.

Those who have studied the reasons for this enormous increase say that many factors are involved. Increased breeding, due to the successful corn crop for the last two years and a satisfactory public purchasing power, have contributed to the record-breaking slaughter. The hogs have been somewhat lighter in weight, however, than in former years and the large number does not mean such a record-breaking quantity of pork as the hog slaughter might indicate.

Roughage for Fattening Lambs in Feeding Test

Very little difference between alfalfa and soy-bean hay as roughages for fattening lambs was noted in a feeding test at the Illinois experiment station. The two hays were fed to lots of 25 lambs fed shelled corn in addition, with no supplement. Gains made by the two groups of lambs were almost exactly the same. The lambs given soy-bean hay ate somewhat more hay than those fed alfalfa, but the soy-bean hay group ate slightly less corn to compensate for the increased hay consumption. Somewhat more of the soy-bean hay was wasted than of alfalfa. At the end of the test the alfalfa lambs were valued ten cents higher than those fed soy-bean hay, but both lots brought the same price when sold at Chicago.

Tetanus in Lambs Often Follows Spring Docking

Tetanus is quite common among lambs at this time of the year, since it frequently follows docking if the operation is not properly performed. Tetanus is often spoken of as "lock jaw," though that is really not the correct name because the locking of the jaws does not always occur.

Little can be done for animals that are already diseased. The scab that has formed over the stump of the tail after docking should be removed and the stump painted with tincture of iodine two or three times daily. When docking lambs again the stump should be painted immediately after the operation. Some stockmen make a practice of searing the stump with a hot iron. The latter sterilizes the wound and also controls the bleeding.

Sunlight for Little Pigs

Sunlight is indispensable to the health and vigor of newly born pigs. This is true in all except extremely hot weather. The sooner they get it the better it is for them, and farrowing houses fitted to let in the sunshine are decidedly advantageous. As soon as the little fellows are strong enough to run around and follow after the sow they may be let outdoors into the sunshine. They ought to be strong enough to do this within from three days to a week.

USE BISCUIT DOUGH FOR MAKING CAKES

Opinions Differ as to Merits of Old-Fashioned Delicacy.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Opinions will always differ as to the respective merits of the "old-fashioned strawberry shortcake" made with biscuit dough, and the kind in which "cake" literally means cake. The success of the first kind can always be relied on if the housekeeper is considered a good biscuit maker, for she simply bakes her biscuit dough in one large round piece in a pie tin, and splits it open when done. She may, of course, cut the dough with a cookie cutter and bake individual shortcakes if she prefers.

If one wishes to make the other type of strawberry shortcake it is sometimes a question as to just which one to use of the many different cake recipes offered in the cookbook. Many persons prefer a sponge cake or sunshine cake. This is not a "short" at all and it combines pleasantly with the whipped cream that garnishes the strawberries. The following recipe is recommended by the experimental kitchen of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Sponge Cake.

4 eggs	¾ cupful pastry flour
¾ cupful sugar	¼ teaspoonful salt
1 teaspoonful vanilla	1 teaspoonful baking powder
1 teaspoonful lemon juice

To the well-beaten yolks of eggs gradually add the sugar and the flavoring. Sift together twice, the flour, salt and baking powder, and fold into the egg yolk and sugar. Fold this mixture into the well-beaten egg whites. Bake the cake in shallow pans in a moderate oven for about 30 minutes. This makes two sheets about 7 by 10 inches.

When done, place the two sheets together with the slightly crushed berries and whipped cream between and on top. The whipped cream should be sweetened and flavored.

Government Recipe for Making Superior Starch

An excellent starch is made by adding one cupful of water to from one to four tablespoonfuls of starch, according to the stiffness desired, says the United States Department of Agriculture. When the paste is smooth add one-half tablespoonful of borax, one-half teaspoonful of paraffin or white fat and one quart of boiling water. Boil 20 minutes, stirring thoroughly until clear and smooth. If a scum or lumps form, strain. Use hot for all except colored clothes. Turn garments wrong side out before starching and starch first those things in which the most stiffness is desired, as water from the garments thins the starch. Freezing and wind both take the starch out of clothes.

SCREENS SHOULD GO UP EARLY IN SPRING

Housekeeper Will Guard Against Flies.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There are three general measures to be observed in combating flies in the home: Keeping them out entirely, by means of screens; using fly paper, traps, and poison to destroy any that manage to get in; getting rid of all near-by breeding places, through personal or community effort.

The bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture has explained many times over exactly why the common house fly is such a dangerous visitor. Every school child understands that this insect breeds in manure and decaying garbage, that the adult may alight on animal or human excreta and then fly directly to the food on the table, carrying filth and dangerous disease germs, and that a well-screened house, promptly closed doors, and a good fly swatter are aids in protecting the family from contamination and possible sickness.

It is the part of the good housekeeper to have the screen doors and window screens in place early in the season before the flies get into the house, and to trap, or otherwise kill, as many of the early-season flies as possible, before they have had an opportunity to multiply. An individual female fly will lay from 120 to 150 eggs at one time and will usually lay from two to four such batches during a season. These eggs will hatch, under favorable conditions, in less than 24 hours. The larva, or worm, stage usually lasts, in summer, from four to seven days and the pupal, or sleeping stage from three to six days.

A few flies usually manage to get in any house during the warm weather, either when doors are opened and shut, or through unnoticed cracks or spaces around screens, broken window panes, or other entrances. All foods should be kept covered or screened so that stray flies cannot light on them. Putting sticky fly paper and poison preparations about helps to rid the house of those which accidentally get in. A very effective fly poison is made by adding three teaspoonfuls of commercial formalin to a pint of milk or water sweetened with a little brown sugar.

It is perfectly obvious, from all that is known and has been written about the life habits of the house fly, that screens, flytraps, fly paper, and fly poisons would be unnecessary if all substances in which flies lay their eggs and breed were properly attended to. These include horse, chicken, hog, and cow manure, fermenting garbage, human excrement, and a great variety of fermenting and decaying vegetable and animal materials. All accumulations of these substances should be eliminated, or, if this is not possible, tightly covered or screened so that flies cannot reach them. In the country the main source of flies is the necessary manure heap. Farmers' Bulletin 851 tells how to care for manure so as to reduce this difficulty to a minimum. The proper disposal of sewage in rural districts is also of the greatest importance because of the likelihood of the spread of fly-borne diseases from human excrement. Other bulletins of the department make valuable suggestions for modern methods of sewage disposal for the farm home.

OF IMPORTANCE TO KEEP FOODSTUFFS DRY

Closet Arranged to Keep Dry Foodstuffs Dry.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The keeping quality of foodstuffs, such as flour, sugar, raisins, dried corn, and rice and other cereals, depends chiefly on the fact that they are dry. In the home, therefore, these foods should be kept dry and clean and protected against insects and other vermin. For tea, coffee, and spices the containers should be as nearly air-tight as possible in order to prevent loss of flavor. Dried meats, such as smoked hams, strips of bacon, and jerked beef, and home-dried fruits and vegetables are best kept in muslin bags hung in a clean cool, dry storeroom. If dried meats are hung in the cellar or dried fruits or vegetables are stored in the steamy kitchen, they are likely to mold.

There are special points about keeping milk, fresh meat, fish, poultry, eggs, leftovers, fruits, vegetables, cooking fats, table oils, bread, crackers or canned goods, all of which are discussed in a new Farmers' Bulletin 1374, entitled "Care of Food in the Home." It may be obtained as long as the supply lasts, by applying to the United States Department of Agriculture.

"WELL, STRONG--- JUST DID FINE"

What a Missouri Lady Who Suffered From Weakness and Nervousness Says About Taking Cardui.

Matthews, Mo.—"Before the birth of my little girl," Mrs. Lena Stancil, of this place, recently stated, "I was so weak in my back and sides I couldn't go about. I was too weak to stand up or do any work.

"I felt like my back was coming in two. I lost weight. I didn't eat anything much and was so restless I couldn't sleep nights.

"My mother used to take Cardui, so I sent to get it. I was improving after my first bottle. Cardui is certainly a great help for nervousness and weak back. I took six bottles of Cardui and by then I was well and strong, just did fine from then on. Cardui helped me so much.

Many thousands of women have been saved from needless suffering and ill health because they have learned the value of Cardui, either from their mothers, as in the case of Mrs. Stancil, or from experienced women friends and relatives.

Other women, who have had no one to advise them, can find out for themselves what a great help it can be to them in building up and strengthening run-down systems, by simply giving Cardui a fair trial.

The Letter to Sheriff Falkner.—

The letter to Sheriff Falkner, published in the Reporter last week was written to the Sheriff himself. It was published at the request of Mr. Falkner in order that the people of Shelby county might know something of what he is having to contend with in his efforts to enforce the law.

The letter was not signed. It was not the first letter like that, nor the last, that Sheriff Falkner has received. The people of Shelby county may judge for themselves as to the character and the motives of a man who would write such a letter and not sign his name to it.

Fine Samples of Cover Crops.—

The Reporter has had on display the past week some fine specimens of winter cover crops that show the possibilities of these crops in Shelby county. B. J. Owen of Columbiana brought in a handful of hairy vetch that he took from his garden that is over six feet long. County Agent Lauderdale left a sample of bur clover from the farm of J. T. Lovett in Kingdom community that is over four feet high. J. A. Cates Route 2, Columbiana, brought from his farm a sample of crimson clover that is nearly three feet high. It is in full bloom and the field is a beautiful sight. Mr. Cates has plowed under several acres of crimson clover and has a good sized plot which he is allowing to mature for seed.

The Reporter hopes the time is not far away when not an acre of our farm lands will be allowed to go through the winter without one of these fine crops growing on it.

The Men Who Serve You Whom You Do Not See

Ticket sellers, gatemen, conductors, dining car stewards, waiters and porters are about the only employees of a railroad with whom you ever come in contact; yet, in the operation of a great transportation system, almost every trade and profession is represented.

In order to maintain the high standard of safety, comfort and satisfactory freight and passenger service which has long distinguished the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, more than 52,000 men and women each day perform some special and definite task.

Approximately 300 executives direct the operation of various departments; 7,000 clerks handle the mass of detail, records, figures, etc.; 12,400 track workers guard the safety of passengers; 18,800 mechanics and helpers keep the equipment in repair; while 2,000 brakemen and flagmen, 5,000 dispatchers, agents, and others, 1,000 conductors, 8,400 engineers and firemen complete the list of active workers. To this number must be added construction engineers, lawyers, doctors, agricultural agents and other specialists—all of whom contribute to the sum total of successful railroad operation.

Remember that one out of every fifteen bread winners in the Nation is employed in the transportation industry, and that these employees are good citizens—an asset to any community.

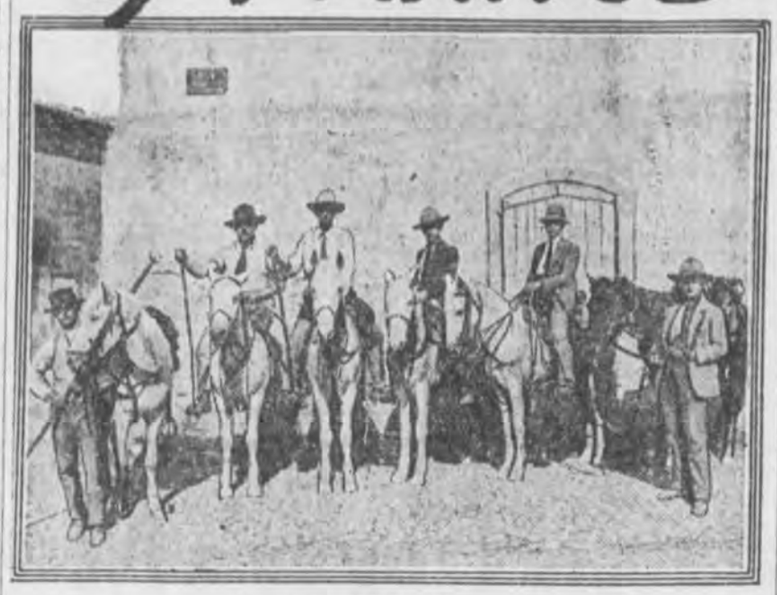
COW COUNTRY of FRANCE



Young Cowboys of Camargue.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

France, heavily populated for centuries, is thought of as a land of many small farms and a few estates of reasonable size, but with no place for the cowboy, a creature of the broad plains. But France, unknown even to many Frenchmen, has its cowboys and its "cow country," in the Camargue, a region in the delta of the Rhone.

The Camargue is not large, but such as it is it is truly a region of cattle and horsemen, where herds are rounded up, roped and branded, where one hears the creak of leather and the pounding of hoofs, and where life has the freedom and outdoor stamp that it always has in the open spaces. Set an Arizona cowboy, an Argentinian gaucho or a Venezuelon llanero down in the Camargue after he had toured the rest of France and he would probably draw the first free breath he had drawn in months.

Once the Camargue was as fertile as the delta of the Nile and was devoted to grain growing. But it was despoiled by Louis XIV and became a waste land of scrubby grass. Cattle raising which rescued it from its wilderness condition, has thriven in the marshy plain for many years. But the cowboy may not hold on there for long, for drainage and irrigation are making inroads about the borders of the wild country and reclamationists dream of the day when the entire delta will become again such a granary as it was in Roman days.

Among the clumps of scrubby tamarisks dotting the landscape like tiny islands on a dead-calm sea may be found a great variety of game. From all sides come flocks of sea-ravens, plovers, herons and wild ducks of all sorts. On the shallow borders of the marsh stand lines of pink flamingoes. Sometimes a blue Egyptian ibis strays this way.

On the salt moor the rabbit multiplies as in Australia, in spite of the inroads made by the sportsmen, who are not forced to depend upon cap hunting, as was the mighty hunter Tartarin. Beavers which were numerous many years ago, are still found on the banks of the Rhone, and small land-tortoises are often seen.

Wild Cattle, Horses and Sheep.

When you have crossed the wonderfully fertile lands, where crops and vineyards grow, you enter the wild Camargue. It is a marshy plain reaching to the shores of the sea. Thereon is found the sansouiro, the salt moor, and what scanty vegetation may grow along these marshes.

The extraordinary feature of this wild section of France is the great herds of bulls and horses grazing peacefully, with flocks of sheep nibbling the scant grasses of the desolate moor.

Camargue is a land of cloudless skies and a hot sun, sometimes dangerous in its intensity. But down from the cold central plateau of France there sweeps the mistral, a chilling wind which blows, on an average, one day in every two. One might well picture Camargue as the setting for the well-known contest between the blustering wind and the genial sun, to see which could first force the traveler to remove his cloak.

The mistral's power is such that the roofs of the humbler homes and cowboy shelters hang low to withstand the force of the dry, cold wind, often cyclonic in power, and a cross is fixed to the wall as additional protection. But, cold as the mistral is, it is a blessing, for the malarial mosquitoes and miasmic vapors of the land cannot withstand its blasts, and the muddy morasses dry up before its cleansing breath. For this reason it is called the "great mud-eater."

The mistral is perhaps the main factor in the environment of the land; and, by a strange coincidence, a newer force which has influenced the region bears the same name. One might well call this part of Provence the land of the two mistrals. So simply and beautifully have the poems of Frederic Mistral described the herdsman's land and life that one of them, "Mireo," won for him the Nobel prize for literature in 1904 and the lasting love of his people.

Master of phrases that he was, Mistral was also a master of psychology. He saw dances, sports and costumes as the unifying factors in a native life which was threatened by the melting pot of cosmopolitan civilization, and he sought in every way to conserve all such native elements as would make for happiness and patriotism, for race expression and for individual glory.

The herdsman of the Carmague is a picturesque figure. Living a lonely life among herds of black cattle and half wild horses, he has developed the same manly traits that distinguish the western cowboy. Courage, chivalry, determination, endurance—all are his. But individualism and self-reliance left small place for patriotism, and it was here that the poet hoped to round out the character of the fearless rider.

Hence the rodeo, or round-up, has become a cultural conference, during which the freedom-loving guardians, or herdsmen, impress upon themselves the mark of Provence while they brand their cattle with the initial or heraldic emblem which distinguishes their live stock.

Women and Home Life.

The women have not been neglected in this plan to unite the people of Provence into a happy family of families. Their lovely dress has been revived and the fashion dictates of Paris repudiated in favor of a costume which was not only the costume of their mothers but which is beautiful in its own right.

The interest of the Provencal herdsman is in his ranch and herds, but home means the more to him for all that. Nor is he ashamed to live under the same roof with his animals or harvest. The flavor of the soil permeates the very home life of the Camargue peasant.

Near the house one is sure to note the tree or trees which add distinction to the spot. Trees are few and far between in the Camargue. The graceful poplars, which add charm to more sheltered parts of Provence, are seldom found between the two main mouths of the Rhone, for such towering stateliness cannot withstand the unrelenting blasts of the mistral; but a clump of stout, low trees or somber cypresses is fostered by the farmers of the Camargue much as the solitary trees of Palestine are protected by the guardians of the holy tombs of the saints.

The rude well without a sweep, the creaking grindstone, the clutter of outworn tools, the peculiar spindle for making the seden, or horsehair lariat, the rickety ladder, the small stacks of coarse fodder—these are the homely features that surrounds the mas.

To an extent that is not common in cities, the mas is the true home of the people. In an inhospitable land, the home is the welcome retreat of host as well as stranger. The warm hearts and hearths of Camargue are ample compensation for the desolation of the outer world.

The gardian of Camargue can be likened not only to the American cowpuncher, but also to the vaquero of Spain, the gaucho of South American pampas, and to the rough riders of Australian stations or the South African veldt. He is, however, a special type, having more to do than protect cattle or horses. More than all else, the gardian is preserving the old traditions of the Camargue peasant, his customs, his melodious Provencal language, and something of his old-fashioned dress.

The gardian still wears a bright-colored shirt and a black coat lined with velvet. His trousers are of brown cloth, resembling leather, and are supported by a taiolo, a kind of large wollen belt several yards long.

The righthand man of the gardian is the Camargue pony. Light gray in color and with a shaggy coat, the steed has a hang-dog air and an unkempt appearance. His low-hanging head, big and square, has sleepy eyes and a quiet expression. But never did a more disarming appearance camouflage a more satanic spirit. When mounted, this Rip Van Winkle among horses becomes spirited and full of the devil, half wild and with a savage temper.

Scientific men have searched in vain for an explanation of the origin of the Camargue pony. Some say he is descended from Numidian horses brought over by the Roman cavalry; others ascribe his ancestry to the horses left in the Rhone delta by the Saracens. He resembles the long-haired horse of Tibet and the Siberian pony.

JEREMIAH AND THE BABYLONIAN CRISIS

LESSON TEXT—Jer. 26.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Amend your ways and your doings, and obey the voice of the Lord your God."—Jer. 26:13.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Saves a Brave Prophet.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Story of a Brave Prophet.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Standing Bravely for the Right.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jeremiah's Message to His People.

I. Jeremiah's Solemn Warning to Judah (vv. 1-7).

The Lord commanded him to stand in a conspicuous place in the Temple and proclaim the judgment which was about to fall upon them because of their sins. The object was to provoke them to repentance (v. 3). If they would not repent, God would make the Temple as Shiloh (v. 6). Just as Shiloh was once the dwelling place of the Lord and now fallen into decay and abandoned, so will it be with the Temple. Jeremiah was sent to speak the words which the Lord had told him and not to diminish a word.

II. Jeremiah on Trial (vv. 8-11).

1. Cause of Arrest (v. 8). It was for faithfully speaking all the Lord had commanded. The one who speaks boldly what God commands shall be opposed. The time-server and self-seeker will not stand for such a ministry. The Isaiahs and Jeremiahs must suffer.

2. The Charge (vv. 8, 9). It was a capital crime. They said, "Thou shalt surely die." His guilt according to their charge was twofold: (1) Pretending to speak for God; (2) Speaking against the temple and the city. According to their charge he was guilty of blasphemy and sacrilege.

The one who prophesied without God's command was to be punished by death (Deut. 18:20). Blasphemy was also punished by death (Lev. 24:16). Both Jesus and Stephen were accused of blespuemy.

3. The Princes Sit in Judgment (vv. 10,11). When the excitement reached the ears of the princes they came to judge of the merits of the case. Matters of state were not entirely in the hands of the priests and elders, but were partly controlled by members of the royal family.

III. Jeremiah's Defense (vv. 12-15).

Threats of death did not deter him from preaching, but only made him repeat his message.

1. Reiterates His Divine Commission (v. 12). He had nothing to deny, but to repeat what he had said. He plainly told them that in opposing him they were opposing God, for he was God's messenger.

2. His Exhortation (v. 13). He urged them to amend their ways and obey God, and God would not bring upon them judgment.

3. He Gave Himself Up (v. 14). He did not resist the powers of government (Rom. 13:1). Knowing that he was sent of God he was content to trust God for deliverance.

4. Warns of Fatal Consequence (v. 15). He frankly told them that God had sent him, and if they killed him they would be guilty of defying God. Woe would not only fall upon them, but the nation and city would suffer.

IV. Jeremiah Saved (vv. 16-24).

He was acquitted. God is able to raise up friends and advocates from the ranks of those who oppose us.

1. Judgment of the Princes (v. 16). They pronounced him not guilty, as he had spoken in the name of the Lord. Jeremiah's words convinced them that he was speaking the truth.

2. Speech of the Elders (vv. 17-23). As the princes probably represented the king, so the elders represented the people. The elders pleaded for Jeremiah and adduced several cases in illustration:

(1) Micah (vv. 18, 19). Micah had prophesied against Jerusalem, but King Hezekiah instead of putting him to death, repented and thus turned aside the punishment which was impending.

(2) Urijah (vv. 20-23). Urijah prophesied against the city and land and thus incurred the wrath of Jehoiakim, who even brought him back from Egypt whence he had fled and slew him.

Though all this was done, judgment was not thus thwarted. Killing God's prophets does not prevent God's judgment, but intensifies it. In the case of Hezekiah God's judgments were turned aside through heeding the words of the prophet, and in the case of Jehoiakim judgment fell upon the nation because of refusal and maltreatment of the prophet.

3. Rescued by Ahikam (v. 24). Ahikam must have been a man of influence to be able to interfere at such a time.

Opportunities

We may not at first see it, but almost always opportunities are hiding back of the difficulties—and it pays to hunt them out.

Speaking the Truth

It is better to hold back the truth than to speak it ungraciously.—St. Francis de Sales.

HOUSEWORK NOT DRUDGERY

For Women In Good Health

Read How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Changed Conditions For These Housewives

Back Don't Bother Me Now

Lincoln, Nebraska. — "My back would bother me so and when I had to do any heavy lifting it made me sick to my stomach with the pains in my back. I have my housework to do and four babies to take care of so when I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I took it and I feel better. My back don't bother me and I can eat more and work. I do all my housework and washing for six in the family. I will tell other women to take the Vegetable Compound and you may publish my letter."—Mrs. CHARLES F. DOLEZAL, 1201 Garber Ave., Lincoln, Nebraska.

Felt Better At Once

Volga City, Iowa.—"I will tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was all run down and could hardly be on my feet. I was so cold I could not keep warm. I had numb feelings and then heat flashes would pass over my body. I had severe pains in my sides and was very nervous. I saw your advertisement in the newspapers so I thought I would try your medicine. My husband got me a bottle of the Vegetable Compound and I began to feel better as soon as I started taking it. I have taken it off and on for three years now. I keep house and do all my work for my husband and two little boys and make my garden. I feel fine and I tell others what the medicine has done for me. I think it is the best medicine in the world for women."—Mrs. THOMAS GRINDLE, Volga City, Iowa.

Can Do Any Kind of Work

Fouke, Arkansas.—"I had the 'Flu' and after that I had a pain in my side and was not able to do my work I was so weak. I found an advertisement in a paper and it told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would do, and I took it. Now I can do any kind of work I want to. I think every family ought to keep it in the house all the time and I intend to do so."—Mrs. DORA PHILYAW, R.R. No. 2, Fouke, Arkansas.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

This shows that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This goes to prove that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure-all—can and does do good work. For sale by druggists everywhere.

While the Sun Shines

Old Doc Jones, slightly absent-minded at times, was an enthusiastic gardener. One sultry summer evening, when warnings of a shower rumbled in the west, Mrs. Jones called to him and, getting no response, found him struggling with the hose.

She demanded, "When are you coming in to supper?"

The gardener wiped the perspiration from his forehead and pointed to the horizon.

"Goodness, dear," he replied, "I must get the garden watered before that storm breaks."—American Legion Weekly.

ENGINEERING BOTH BABIES AND BUSINESS

Would you expect a woman who d adopted as her slogan, "Babies fore Business," to be written up in orts of magazines as an unusual- successful geological engineer?

Ten years ago, when the two Gould dies were healthy, little school ldren, Nina S. Gould went back to r job of being an assistant geolog- l engineer. In the office of Gould Gould she has entire charge of re- rts, maps, cost estimates and enough er technical details to make the erage woman—or man—blink. She's honorary member of Chi Epsilon, fraternity for women doing geolog- l work.

Mrs. Gould found time, as the chil- n's interests and her own led her tside home walls, to take an active erest first in the kindergarten club d then in the school patrons' club, organize two Camp Fire groups, d to become an active member in a cial study club.

At present she serves as the busi- ss women's representative on the ard of directors of the Y. W. C. A., vice president of the civic commit- e of the chamber of commerce, keeps church and Sunday school work d presides over the Town club with picked business women members d an active city-beautiful program. so she goes to ball games with the ldren!

It's hardly fair to call Oklahoma y with its 110,000 people a gopher airie, even though the Town club still struggling with untidy chicken rds inside the city limits. Anyway rs. Gould's answer to "Would you e to move to New York?" was "No."

But a girl just starting? "A large y is too lonesome," advises this oman of many friends, "for the girl t going into business. She has far ore opportunity for making friends the smaller place. And as to suc- ss, if a girl is happy outside of siness hours, she makes a more effi- ent business girl.

"A smaller city is the best place to e (which means to live, laugh and ork), to rear a family, and a place here one may have a chance to grow to the life of a community; that is become an integral part of the owth, development of the neighbor- od, the city and the state."

STYLES IN WEDDING GOWNS; TUXEDO KNITTED OF PURE SILK

HAPPY is this year's bride in the choosing of her wedding gown! The mode is in a tolerant mood and there are almost no "Thou shalt not" edicts from the throne of fashion, but instead the widest latitude is allowed in the choice of styles. The bride may choose a long, sheathlike unbelted model, a draped affair, a period gown or a straightline dress flaring toward the hemline by means of godets. She may select time-honored satin or today's supple crepes or airy lace and chiffons—in any case the mode smiles approvingly. And in the matter of the veil—she may wear a lace veil, a tulle veil or both if she chooses, for tulle veils posed over white roses continue to contribute their exquisite beauty to the bridal bouquet.

How fickle is fashion! Just because novelty sweaters have been courting favor these past several seasons, we have apparently somewhat ignored our tried and true friend, the tuxedo. However, we have swung around the circle, and true to our first love we pay homage to the tuxedo along with its present-day contemporaries, the slipover and the jacquette.

To a patrician clientele the tuxedo knitted of pure silk ever appeals as an aristocrat among sweaters. The smartest shops are showing the tuxedo this season with novelty touches such as this one in the picture which is knitted of pure silk in silvery gray. Of course it is to be had in a range of other delectable shades, including cinnamon, artichoke, poudre blue, orchid, apricot and pure white. This exclusive model achieves distinction through its use of a novelty zig-zag stitch.

lace are distinctly up-to-date. There is also no argument as to sleeves; let her have long sleeves or no sleeves at all as she will and anything in the way of necklines except the very high or the very low.

Brides and bridesmaids will do well to choose pretty dresses of crepe and lace in the season's fashionable colors, which will measure up to the standard set for dinner and evening wear. For the maids, nile green, sunshine yellow, peach, orchid and poudre blue suggest themselves. Pretty and wearable hats in the same colors as the gowns are characteristic of today's preference. It is to be noted also that spring weddings revealed a liking for draperies and skirts widened by godets or other devices, and for a waistline low but punctuated by sashes of wide, soft ribbon ending under big soft bows without ends at one side. Girdles of narrow ribbons adorned with flat ribbon flowers vary the management of the waistline.

Like the wedding veil, strands of pearls for the bride and her attendants remain secure in their position and are established as the proper choice in jewelry.

Wedding veils may fall from close-fitting caps, with headband and chin strap all made of tulle, or from small caps with coronets of lace or from caps with upstanding frills of tulle across the back, like that pictured. Orange buds and blossoms finish off the headdress and the girdle usually. Lilies-of-the-valley alone or with forming rainbow patterns in effective shadow designs.

Novelties with scarfs, using these color combinations forecast the sweater joys which the summer months will bring forth. Here are also very pretty striped effects, with the stripes either horizontal or vertical, which are very sheer and in surplice effect.

Among interesting sweater exponents, is the slipon with high neck. A widespread vogue is predicted for the sleeveless models.

At resorts society is favoring bright red slipon sweaters worn with white skirts or in some instances the order is reversed, the skirt being red and overbloused with a white knitted slipon. At any rate red and white combinations in sweaters are quite the last word in fashion's realm.

To begin the day, a little seasonable fruit is enjoyed. Oranges, grape fruit, apples, prunes, bananas are all good, giving us enough of a variety.

SUNDAY — Breakfast: Cinnamon rolls, bacon and eggs. Dinner: Chicken pie, mashed potatoes. Supper: Sandwiches, lettuce salad.

MONDAY — Breakfast: Buckwheat cakes, sausage. Dinner: Ham souffle, escalloped potatoes. Supper: Onion and apple salad.

TUESDAY—Breakfast: Baked potatoes, drawn butter sauce. Dinner: Stuffed, baked calves' hearts, boiled onions. Supper: Omelet.

WEDNESDAY — Breakfast: Boiled rice with cream. Dinner: Broiled steak, baked bananas. Supper: English drop cakes.

THURSDAY — Breakfast: Graham gems, doughnuts. Dinner: Apple dumplings. Supper: Cookies, canned pears.

FRIDAY—Breakfast: Eggs on toast. Dinner: Potatoes baked in half shell. Supper: Fish salad.

SATURDAY — Breakfast: Oranges, oatmeal, cream and sugar. Dinner: Veal roast, basted with pickled peach syrup. Supper: Graham bread, canned strawberries.

Ham Souffle.

Take a cupful of cold, cooked, chopped ham, one-half cupful of bread crumbs, three eggs, a pint of milk, pepper and salt to taste. Beat the eggs, mix the ingredients thoroughly, and bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven. Serve with tomato sauce. Canned tomato soup makes a very good sauce, saving time, when that is to be considered.

Baked Bananas.

Slice bananas lengthwise, lay in a well-buttered pan, sprinkle with lemon juice, butter and add a bit of water, bake until well done. Serve as a garnish to the broiled steak.

Fish Salad.

Cook together over hot water a tablespoonful of flour, a teaspoonful each of salt, mustard, sugar and melted butter, a dash of cayenne and one-third of a cupful of mild vinegar, the beaten yolks of two eggs. Stir until smooth, beat with an egg beater while cooling. Separate into small flakes any cold fish, add a little lemon juice and let stand one hour. Stir with a fork, add the dressing with half a cupful of whipped cream. Place in small molds if desired, chill and serve garnished with lemon slices and parsley.

Luck means the hardships and privations which you have not hesitated to endure; the long nights you have devoted to work. Luck means the appointments you have never failed to keep; the trains you have never failed to catch.—Max O'Rell.

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS

A most delicious dish of ham and potatoes may be prepared as follows:

Ham and Scalloped Potatoes.—Prepare potatoes as usual and place a slice of ham on top. Bake until the potatoes are tender and the ham a good brown. Serve from the dish in which it was baked.

Jellied Prunes.—Pick over, wash and soak one-third of a pound of prunes in two cupfuls of cold water and cook in the same water until soft; remove the prunes, stone and cut into quarters. To the prune water add enough boiling water to make two cupfuls. Soak two and one-half tablespoonfuls of granulated gelatin in one-half cupful of cold water, dissolve in hot liquid, add one cupful of sugar, one-fourth cupful of lemon juice, then strain, add the prunes, mold and chill. Stir twice while cooling to prevent prunes from settling.

Bread Pudding.—Pour a quart of scalded milk over two cupfuls of stale bread crumbs, let stand fifteen minutes. Add the yolks of two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of butter, a grating of nutmeg and one-half cupful of sugar, then fold in the stiffly-beaten whites of the eggs, a half cupful of raisins, turn into a buttered baking dish and bake until firm. Serve with a hard sauce.

Oatmeal Bread.—Add two cupfuls of boiling water to one cupful of oatmeal and let stand for one hour; add one cupful of molasses, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-half of a yeast cake dissolved in one-half cupful of lukewarm water and four cupfuls of bread flour; let rise, beat thoroughly, turn into buttered bread pans, let rise again and bake.

Cheese and Cherries.—A delicious filling for sandwiches is cream cheese and chopped maraschino cherries, adding a bit of the liquor to make of the right consistency to spread.

Cottage Pudding With Chocolate Sauce.—Prepare the pudding by creaming two-thirds of a cupful of sugar with three tablespoonfuls of butter, add a beaten egg, one cupful of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and alternate the flour with one-half cupful of milk. Beat well and bake in a small, shallow pan. Serve with chocolate sauce.

GOOD BISCUITS
Are Your Best Food

SCIENTISTS tell us that wholesome properly raised biscuits contain more calories and more nourishment than any other bread. But every one knows that to be healthful and easily digested, biscuits must be carefully made and properly baked.

"Happily, my experience has shown that it is almost impossible to make poor biscuits with self-rising flour," writes a housewife of Blythewood, S. C. "My biscuits in the North, made with ordinary flour, were invariably a failure, but I can truthfully say that when I use self-rising flour the reverse is the case. . . . Through a number of years' experience I have found self-rising flour to be all and more than its manufacturers claim it to be. . . . Its convenience and economy in saving both time and labor can hardly be over-estimated."

Because it simplifies the work of baking and practically eliminates failures, self-rising flour is the most economical flour you can use. Aside from this, dietitians and food experts commend its healthful qualities. Next time you cook biscuits try self-rising flour. You'll never regret it!

soul saved becomes an added power for the extension of religious forces of the South in the domination of this section by true religion, and thus influencing the entire nation, and the world.

"Who can measure the responsibilities of the South, and its opportunities? Only God, Himself, who spans the heavens with His hand can really grasp, or comprehend the infinite opportunity and the infinite responsibility which rests upon the existing religious forces of the South to put forth the most tremendous efforts which they, or any other people have ever exerted for carrying forward God's work in the South.

"As Baptists we need to plant our churches in every stragic point where rapid industrial or business development will tend to draw people away from religious work unless we do our part to hold them in line. The young men and the young women of the South, lured by the glowing prospects of business activities, and tempted by the sweep of social life, are liable to be carried away from religious life, unless the older people of this generation put forth redoubled efforts to save them to the cause of Christ. We need every minister of the Gospel in the South shall feel more deeply than he has ever felt before that he is preaching not simply the Gospel of Christ to the individual man or woman, but that he is working to the utmost extent of his ability and power for saving the South, and thus saving the nation.

"I believe that God has placed upon the Southern Baptists a greater responsibility than was ever placed upon any other denomination in the world's history. By virtue of numbers and position and increasing wealth, Soutnern Baptists can largely shape the destiny of the South, or they can by their failure to measure up to the opportunity permit the South to gradually lose the strength of its religious life and the concentration of its work upon the advancement of the cause of Christ. What will be the answer of Southern Baptists? How will they meet this situation? Will they recognize that here is a mission field unsurpassed on the face of the earth and that in developing to the utmost extent the Baptist cause in this section, in advancing its educational activities, they are putting into effect the forces which will control the world to a greater or less degree according as we lay deep and broad the foundation at the present time?

"It is a great task to which we have been called. I wish I might say some word which would ring through the South and awaken the people to the fullest extent to the responsibility which God has placed upon them, aand to the opportunity which He has given them to do in this section what no other denomination in all the world's history has ever been able to accomplish in a country of such limitless resources and of such boundless wealth as this section will have in the coming years.

"This may be called, in contrast to the iron and steel age, the plastic age of the world. We are molding the concrete work which in its soft or fluxing condition can be shaped according to the molds that are made. We build our houses and pave our streets with this plastic mataerial, which, when it is hardened, for beauty or usefulness, remains almost imperishable.

"The South is in the fluxing age, the plastic stage of civilization. In the years to come it will be largely exactly according to how it is moulded at the present time. According as we design the mold, according as we make the mixture and permit it to become hardened or "set," so will its future be for good or evil. It is too late after the plastic material has been hardened, to remold it. It will be too late a few years hence to remold the life of the South. The work must be done today, or to some extent left undone through eternity. The time lost now can never be regained.

"In your work you have an opportunity given to few men in human history. The prayer of every lover of Christ, of every lover of the individual soul, and of his country should be for greater strength and greater power, and co-operation of the Baptists of the South, unstintedly, unhesitatingly to carry forward your tremendous work. Eternity alone can reveal the influence which the work of the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention will have upon the destiny of this section, upon the destiny of America, and upon the destiny of the world."

COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL FINISHES A VERY SUCCESSFUL SESSION

Alumni Organization and Plans For Expansion Feature Closing

Commencement exercises of the Shelby County High School were brought to a close Friday night with an alumni banquet at the school auditorium, given by the class of '24 that brought together more former graduates than than had ever before met in the history of the school. A permanent organization of the alumni was formed and the understanding was had that a meeting of the alumni should be a part of each future commencement exercise. Pledges for the Shelby County High School Extension Fund to the amount of $675 were made with the greatest enthusiasm.

A large audience filled the auditorium Friday morning for the graduating exercises when diplomas were awarded to 23 young men and women who passed out of the school, some to go to college others to enter at once perhaps into the activities of life.

Following the invocation by Rev. John Milner and the singing of America, Prof. Parker introduced Mayor L. H. Ellis, who introduced the speaker of the day, Hon. A. B. Chilton of Montgomery. Mr. Chilton had for his subject, Things New and Old, and from it delivered an address prepared with great care, which many declared to be the best for such an occasion they had ever heard.

Following the address Mr. Parker made a brief report as principal of the school showing that all debts of the school had been paid and that more than $1200 would be left over for next year.

The Lincoln medal, offered for the best essay on the life of Abraham Lincoln was awarded to Ezra Crumpton. The five dollar gold piece given by Max Lefkovits to the pupil making the highest average grade was awarded to Ehney Camp, president of the senior class. His average for the year was 94. A similar award was made to Miss Estell Comer for the highest average made by a girl, her average being 93 1-3. Miss Evelyn Ellis made an average for the year of 92 4-5.

Following these awards Judge A. P. Longshore in appropriate words delivered diplomas to the graduates, among these being his own son, James Longshore. Judge Longshore stated that each year for the past twelve years he had had a son in high school who had been also a member of the foot ball, baseball and basketball teams.

The program was brought to a close with a beautiful solo by Mrs. Mildred White Wallace, accompanied by Mrs. Jatie Middleton.

The senior play, "Kicked Out of College," given Thursday night under the direction of Mrs. J. O. Luck of the Expression department was greeted by one of the largest audiences that ever gathered in the high school. The cast was well chosen and the players furnished an evening of genuine fun.

Just before the curtain was raised Ehney Camp, in behalf of the senior class presented to the school a handsome library table and a beautiful floor lamp. These were received by Prof. Parker who commended the class for its generosity.

A special feature of the evening's program was the music given by Mrs. Wallace and Mrs. Middleton.

PUBLIC SCHOOL SENDS 16 TO HIGH SCHOOL

The closing exercises of the Columbiana Public School were held at the high school auditorium on Wednesday night of last week. The exercises consisted of music, songs and readings by the pupils and an address by Prof. R. E. Parker. Diplomas were awarded by Principal J. B. King to 16 members of the Seventh grade promoting them to high school. Those receiving diplomas were. Louise Longshore, Ruth Christian, Celia Morrow, Edith Holcombe, Mary Thomas Goodwin, Olive Tinney, Earl Walton, Hartford Gould, Hallett McKnight, Howard McGiboney, Luther McGiboney, J. B. Baker, Sidney Bird, Douglas Holman, Edmund Craddock and Walter Seale.

The public school had had a remarkably successful session and Mr. King and his assistants, the Misses Bishop and Mrs. Niven, deserve the thanks of the entire community for their faithful and untiring efforts.

The final report of the school shows there was an enrollment for the year of 175; 90 girls and 85 boys. The actual enrollment at the end of the year was 126 with an average attendance for the last month of 117.

Stores Will Have Half Holiday

The business men of Columbiana have signed an agreement to close their places of business on Thursday afternoon of each week, beginning Thursday June 12th, and continuing to September 1st.

In adopting this plan the business men are but falling in line with other progressive towns, many of which have been following the custom for a number of years. After the people become accustomed to it, the new plan will not inconvenience anyone and will give the employes in the various places of business a half holiday each week through the hot season, that they will enjoy and appreciate.

Under the agreement, Drug Stores will open at five o'clock and cafes will open to serve meals.

Cotton Association Makes Another Payment

The State Farm Bureau Cotton Marketing association is making a fourth payment to owners of cotton delivered to the association in 1923, of a little over 2c a pound.

Mrs. Mary Taylor Williams

The death of Mrs. Mary Taylor Williams Friday, May 16, brought genuine sorrow to many Shelby county people, especially at Vincent, where she once resided for more than thirty years.

Death came as a result of a long illness. She had resided in Bessemer for the past eight years where she had made numerous friends, being a lovable Christian character.

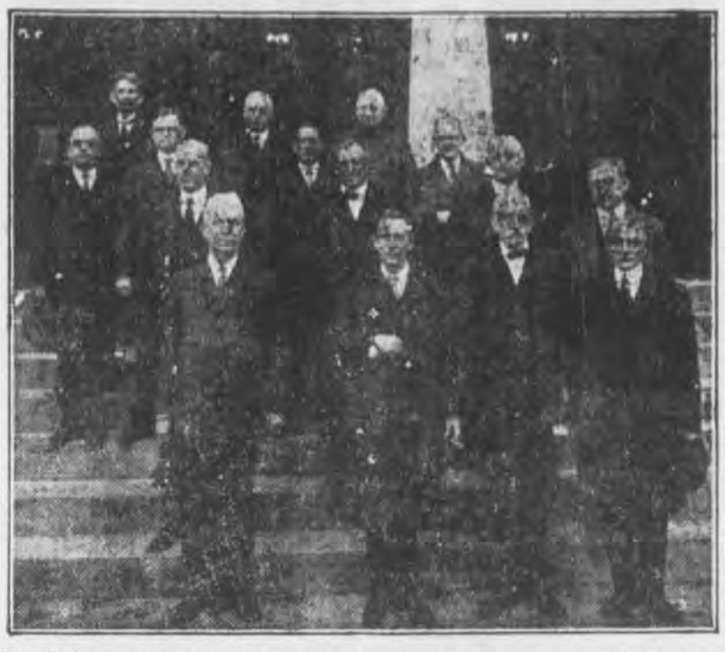
She is survived by her husband Eugene C. Williams, one son, Tom C. Williams and eight daughters, Mrs. B. F. Robertson of Wilsonville, Mrs. George L. Scott, Longview, Mrs. George C. Polk, Clanton, Mrs. John Porter, Mrs. W. M. Reaves; Miss Ella Williams, Miss Olive Williams and Miss Jeffie Bell Williams, of Bessemer.

Her remains were laid to rest in Vincent cemetery Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, with McCollum in charge.

Mrs. Williams was a daughter of the late John C. Taylor and Mrs. Jane Taylor of the Fourmile community.

S, T. Kimbrough of Birmingham was among the commencement visitors last week.

How Montevallo Campaign Fund From Drive Will Be Expended



Detailed plans for the distribution of the million dollars which the Alabama College is going to realize from its drive for funds, have been worked out by officials of the college. They include many features which should prove interesting to the mothers and and fathers of daughters throughout the State.

The following list of immediate needs of the college which was given out by the trustees will give an idea of the extent of the proposed expansion:

Dormitory and furnishings for four to five hundred students; auditorium and administration offices; academic building and equipment; social religious building; president's residence; gymnasium, two practice homes; dormitory and furnishings for teachers; addition to music building.

Enrollment for 1922-23 was 427 students; 1923-24, 659; approximately 300 students will have to be turned away in 1924 after every available room, including the temporary dormitory, has been filled. A dormitory for 400 students would be filled during the session 1924-25.

Need for Auditorium and Offices.

The present auditorium is inadequate even for seating the present student body. The seats are very poor, the building is old, and it was never designed for the student body or for the artists' concerts and lectures which are held each year by the institution. An auditorium is sorely needed.

For office space, the president, dean, with two secretaries, registrar, and bookkeeper of the college occupy three small rooms in the main dormitory. There is only one place for private conference to be used by the entire administration forces. For lack of space, the records are housed in a room almost a block away from the administration offices. This arrangement handicaps seriously effective work of the executive organization.

Need for Academic Building.

The class rooms for the academic courses are scattered from one end of the campus to the other. It is often difficult to find rooms for all the classes that must meet at a particular hour. The teachers have no offices or places where they can meet with students in conference. While they are not holding classes themselves, other classes are being held in their class rooms and hence it is impossible for the teachers to hold necessary conferences with their students. This situation makes it imperative that something be done to provide an adequate academic building.

Need for a Social Building.

The college clubs are forced to use old cottages on the campus and off the campus for their places of meeting. Many of the clubs have no places at all in which to meet. Large organizations such as the student body, the Y. W. C. A., the Technical Staff, the Alumnae Association, and the Newspaper Staff have no adequate places for carrying on their work. The parlors in the main dormitory are entirely inadequate for the uses of the student body and faculty. There is no suitable place for holding the religious services which are held on Sunday and Wednesday nights of each week. For all these purposes a separate building is sorely needed. This building should be the center of the social and religious life of the institution and no institution can properly develop without a building such as this.

Need for a Home for the President.

The president of the institution has for three years been without a home. His home was burned in the spring of 1921. Since that time he and his family have been domiciled in the college infirmary without privacy, without the necessities of home life. A most pressing need of the institution is a home for the president and his family.

Need for a Gymnasium.

Every student who attends Alabama College must take physical education. Hundreds of them engage in games of all kinds. For the physical education work and for the various games which are a necessary part of the recreation of students, a gymnasium building is badly needed. The present building is not half large enough for a single basketball couurt and not one-third large enough for class instruction. For the proper physical development of the students the institutions must have a well equipped gymnasium.

Need for Home Economics Practice Houses.

There is only one practice home which can be used by the students in this department. A necessary part of their course is a term in the practice home for the purpose of making practical application of the work which they learn in textbooks, lecture-room, and laboratories. This department is seriously handicapped. At least two more practice homes will be required for the courses which are being given.

Need for a Teachers' Home.

It is obvious that if the teachers are to do their best work they must be comfortably situated. The town of Montevallo is very small and does not provide adequate boarding places for the teachers. The result is they must occupy the student dormitories or have a dormitory of their own. The latter plan is preferable both from the point of view of the students and teachers, and it is proposed that one of the first uses of the funds be the erection of a dormitory for teachers.

Need for An Addition to Music Building.

One of the most handsome buildings of the State is Calkins Hall at Alabama College. It is used exclusively for music instruction. It is scarcely more than half large enough for the present demands of the music department. Classes and practice schedules must use other rooms in the dormitory and elsewhere. The present building was constructed with a view to additions. This should be made at once in order to take care of the immediate demands of the students who desire music instruction.

Conference of Extension Workers and Editors

A. A. Lauderdale, county agent, and Mrs. Lauderdale, J. M. Hughes president of the county Farm Bureau, and Luther Fowler, editor of the Reporter, went to Birmingham Saturday to attend a conference of workers from the Extension Service, the Farm Bureau and editors from ten counties. This is one of a series of conferences being held over the state at the suggestion of F. G. Stephens of Oneonto, president of the Alabama Press Association, the object being to bring workers to a better understanding so that their efforts to improve agricultural conditions in Alabama may become more effective. In no other state has such a program for co-operiative service been worked out as yet.

Durant, who for the past two years has served as pastor of the Baptist churches of Columbiana, Wilton and Shelby, has received and accepted a unanimous call to become pastor of the Thirty-fifth Avenue Baptist church, Birmingham. Mr. Durant was pastor of this church, which is one of the larger suburban churches of Birmingham, for three years immediately following his return from service in the World War and just before he came to Columbiana. He finds pleasure in the prospect of returning to a congregation whose loyalty and zeal have already been proved and he is looking forward to a pleasant and successful pastorate with them.

Mr. Durant expects to take up his new work about July 1st and he will carry with him the prayers and the best wishes of hundreds of loyal friends in Columbiana, his "old home town," and in Shelby county.

Montevallo, Ala., May 24.—The graduating exercises of the Montevallo Training School were held in the college auditorium at nine a. m. today. P. W. Hodges, of the state department of education at Montgomery, delivered the address. His subject was "The Man that Counts." His address was treated under four heads: Activity, Independence, Aspiration and Preparation. He produced a very profound effect upon the entire audience, especially upon those who were being graduated at this time.

OFFICERS WADE RIVER TO CAPTURE A STILL

State Officer Gardner and Chief Deputy Curtis Falkner do not permit a little thing like the lack of a boat in which to cross a river, to hold them back in their efforts to apprehend violators of the laws.

On Saturday afternoon as they approached Buzzard's Island in Coosa River they found evidence that convinced them that a still on the island was in operation. The only boat in sight was tied up on the island side of the river. The officers waded the river and cautiously climbed drifts and crawled through thickets until they came upon the still in full operation with two men at work. The men, C. H. Canada and Theo Wolf, seemed so completely taken by surprise that they made no effort to escape. They were turned over to the sheriff of St. Clair county. The still, a 60-gallon copper outfit, was destroyed with a quantity of beer and 8 gallons of liquor, Sheriff J. J. Falkner was also a member of the officer's party.

On Thursday before the officers captured a 400-gallon still in operation, 32 barrels of beer and 50 gallons of whiskey in the Cahaba Valley. Manon Cox and Marion Cross were placed under arrest. About 100 yards distant the officers found another 400-gallon still that was not in operation, which they destroyed with 24 barrels of beer. It is estimated that the two outfits complete represented a money value of over $2,000.

It is hoped that every one who is at all interested in poultry or who might become interested, will come to this meeting especially are the ladies urged to come.

To make this first community organization 100 per cent in every way will make it easier to get good strong organizations in other communities.

TWO CHEAT LAW BY ENDING LIVES

MAN HELD FOR MURDER HANGS SELF IN JAIL; MOUNTAINEER WHO SHOT WIFE SLAYS HIMSELF.

Scottsboro, Ala.—Using his bunk chains as a means of hanging himself, Fred Smith, prisoner in the Jackson county jail, committed suicide. The act was discovered when an attendant carried Smith's breakfast to his cell. A plate of food in the cell was found untouched, showing the prisoner had eaten no supper.

Authorities believe he committed suicide when officers were about to close in on him after a chase extending over a wide section of mountain country.

Mrs. Maynard is fighting for her life and it is believed she will recover from gunshot wounds in the back. She is Maynard's second wife and the couple has five children. Several children by a former marriage also survive Maynard.

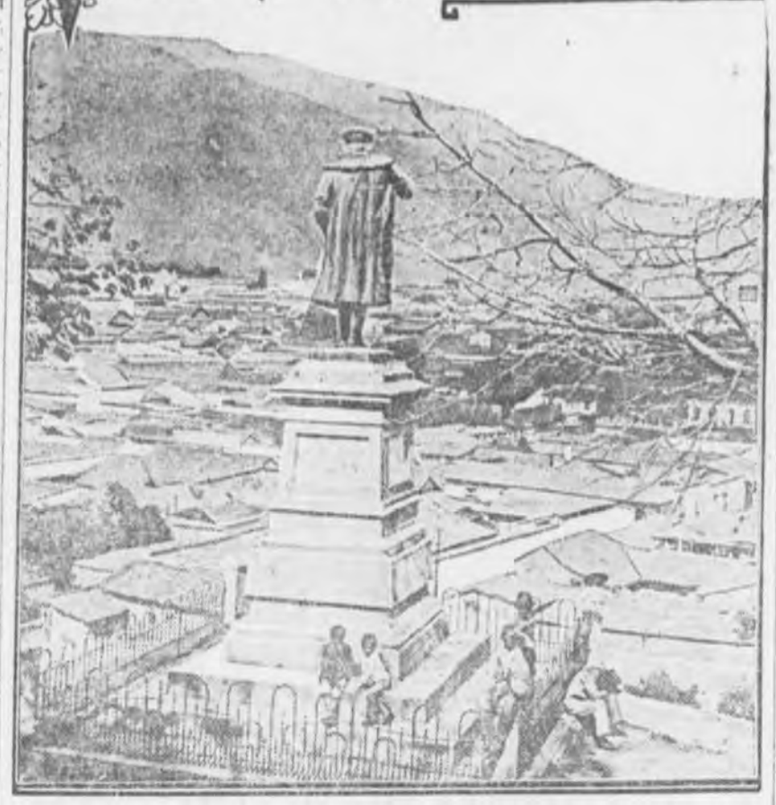
VENEZUELA



Columbus Overlooking Caracas

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Venezuela is to be looked into more closely by explorers; for though the more accessible coast regions and those along the lower portion of the Orinoco river are developed, there are thousands of square miles of back country southwestward toward the Andes and southward toward Brazil that are wholly unknown.

The portion of Venezuela that is best known is the coastal region due south of Porto Rico. Nature set a barrier in the form of mountains a short distance back from this coast and for a long time all development was confined to the north of it. Farther west, however, where the large Gulf of Maracaibo bites deeply into the land the mountains, too, run inward, skirting the gulf at a distance, and add a considerable area to the region accessible from the north by water. In the amphitheater about Maracaibo and the narrow strip of sloping land that stretches off along the Caribbean the Spaniards built their colonial power, neglecting for a time the great Orinoco valley that lay south of the mountains with its broad plains and dense forests.

Maracaibo furnished the name for Venezuela. About this great protected lagoon which, because of the many rivers emptying into it, is practically a lake, the aborigines lived in typical lake dwellings on piles. Ojeda, Spanish navigator, came sailing this way in 1498 transporting as one of the first tourists to the Western world Amerigo Vespucci, "pickle merchant of Seville," who by a strange twist of fortune gave his name to America. Seeing the lake villages with water passages between the houses, the explorer called the region Venezuela, "Little Venice," and the name, though wholly inept to a land of high mountains, broad plains and mighty rivers, came to apply to the whole vast colony.

Maracaibo Becomes an Oil Port.

Because the mountains, rising from a tropical coast, pierce the temperate zone, Venezuela's most flourishing cities built by the conquerors rose on the highlands just inland, each having its port. Thus Caracas and Valencia came to prominence, one served by the port of La Guaira, the other by Puerto Cabello. But Maracaibo, on the strait leading to the great lake gulf, ranks as third city, having a population of more than 50,000. It is the greatest lowland city of the republic. Just now petroleum development is taking place around the lake and even in it, for derricks are rising in the water as they do at some points on the coast of California. As a result of the petroleum discoveries, the city of Maracaibo, in addition to handling cacao, coffee, sugar and hard woods, is becoming an oil port. A bar comes within 12 feet of the surface at the entrance to Lake Maracaibo, but inside the great body of water is 30 feet deep and so capable of floating the largest ocean freighters. Plans to dredge an entrance are under way.

It is the extensive Orinoco valley and its bordering plains and forests that constitute Venezuela's land of tomorrow. The open country has already been developed to a certain extent. The northern bank of the Orinoco is in a way comparable to the banks of the Missouri where that stream flows through the great plains of our West; but in such a comparison it must be kept in mind, of course, that Venezuela is a tropical country and that the grasses and shrubs of its llanos are ranker than those on which our buffalo used to browse.

Orinoco a Mighty River.

Just as great herds of bison roamed our prairies, so vast droves of half-wild cattle covered the level llanos north of the Orinoco in Venezuela's colonial days. These cattle played an important part in making independence possible in Spanish-speaking South America; for the armies of liberation and their guerilla forces lived on their meat. These inroads almost exterminated the herds, however, and it is only in recent years that the cattle industry has shown indications of regaining its former importance.

If it were not hard by the Amazon, mightiest river of the earth, the Orinoco would stand out as a tremendous stream for, judged by the total volume of water which it yearly empties into the sea, it is probably one of the half-dozen greatest rivers of the world. In length the Orinoco cannot compete with other great streams; the distance from its source to its mouth is about 1,600 miles. It has many huge tributaries, however, which give it a high rank in length of navigable waters, about 4,500 miles.

The river finds its way into the Atlantic through a huge delta covering some 7,000 square miles. The first introduction which the river navigator gets to the Orinoco leads him to class it as a second Amazon; for on its low, moist delta forest growths run riot. One sails between the massive green walls formed by rank-growing strands of thousands of rambling vines.

Above the delta, however, a hundred or more miles inland, the screening effect of coastal mountains comes into play, and the plains or llanos begin. Even in the prairie region trees fringe the river banks, but back from the stream, where the dry seasons make themselves felt, only little clumps of stunted palms and bushes break the monotony of the grass-covered plains. South of the river are great forests like those of the Amazon basin, and from these tree-covered regions flow numerous large tributaries, some of which are not well known. It is in this part of Venezuela that exploration is to be pushed.

Boats Almost Reach the Andes.

Ocean ships sail up the Orinoco as they sail up the Amazon, though not so far. Cuidad Bolivar, 260 miles from the ocean, is the New Orleans of Venezuela and is the country's fourth port. Here the river is ten or twelve miles wide even in dry season and spreads out amazingly when the floods, 40 or 50 feet deep, sweep down. Smaller boats ascend the river hundreds of miles above Cuidad Bolivar, almost to the Andes, in fact. The traffic on the river is not nearly so heavy as the excellent navigation facilities warrant, owing to the sparseness of the population. Canoes and rafts floating down from remote regions of the upper Orinoco basin bring considerable quantities of rubber, balata gum, chicle, and hides to Cuidad Bolivar.

Physiography has played a queer trick on the Orinoco in the upper reaches of the river. A stream flows out of the river at one point, carrying part of its waters to the Amazon. This stream, the Casiquiare, is navigable by small boats, so that it is possible to go inland by water from the mouth of the Orinoco to the mouth of the Amazon.

It is where the Orinoco system merges with the Amazon system, and in the region generally west to the Andes that Venezuela's least-known territories are to be found. From time to time during the past several centuries explorers have penetrated parts of this vast unknown land. But for the most part they have gone by water and have seen only the rivers bordered by their dense walls of vegetation which shut out perhaps interesting secrets beyond.

Legends and reports about this region and its outskirts are numerous, and where one begins and the other ends is often difficult to determine. The connection of the Orinoco and Amazon by a natural "canal" was long considered a myth, but in 1799 Alexander van Humboldt confirmed the fact that the two river systems merge through a good-sized stream. Many of the huge Orinoco tributaries are said to contribute waters of distinct colors, one milky white, another black, still another yellowish, etc. In one of the rapids just above the limit of navigation in the main stream are reported to be "musical stones" which, like the statue of Memnon in Egypt, give out sounds when warmed by the rays of the sun.

So great is the discharge of the Orinoco that it very materially reduces the saltness of the Gulf of Paria and the neighboring waters. This effect is so marked that Columbus, who touched near the mouth of the Orinoco in 1498, spoke of these waters as "the fresh-water sea."

FIGHTING BOLL WEEVIL

Numerous Tests Prove That Calcium Arsenate Dusting Method Is Best.

That the calcium arsenate dusting method for controlling the boll weevil enables cotton producers in every portion of the cotton belt to obtain a larger yield to the acre and a larger profit than can be obtained without treatment of any kind or with the application of other poisons such as commercial mixtures which are placed on the market is proven by tests conducted last year by government and state experiment stations under average conditions.

Tests at these stations were made under the supervision of trained workers with facilities at their disposal for checking as accurately as possible the results. Tracts that were dusted or poisoned by other means were checked against untreated tracts and the final results compared. Comparisons of the costs of treatment, yields and profits or losses in the various states, as reported by the stations, were as follows:

North Carolina—The average cost per acre for applications of the home-mixed molasses-calcium-arsenate mixture (one gallon of molasses, one gallon of water and one pound of calcium arsenate) was $1.59; commercial liquid poison, $7.25, and calcium arsenate in dust form, $9.27. The plats treated with the home mixture showed an increase in yield over the untreated of 24 pounds of seed cotton, those treated with commercial mixture an increase of 30 pounds, and those treated with dust 241 pounds. Profit or loss was: home mixture, gain of $1.50 per acre; commercial mixture, loss of $3.29; and dust, a gain of $19.65.

South Carolina—Reports show that the cost of each application of a commercial mixture was $2.10, while the cost of each application of dust was $0.85. The gain in yield for the former was 179 pounds of seed cotton per acre and for the latter 327 pounds. The plats on which the commercial mixture was used showed a loss while the dust treated plats yielded an increased profit of $40.18 per acre.

Georgia—The total cost of applying a commercial mixture was $9.00 per acre and the cost of calcium arsenate dusting was $7.50. An average yield of 918 pounds was obtained from all tracts while the plats on which the dust was applied showed a greater profit per acre than the others by $9.40 per acre.

Florida—Reports show that plats treated with calcium arsenate in dust form yielded a profit of $40.79 per acre more than the plats tested with commercial poisons or other liquid mixtures.

Alabama—Treatment by the home mixture method cost an average of $11.17 per acre; by the commercial mixture, $14.32; and by the dusting method, $11.88. An increase of 21.3 per cent in yield was obtained by the first method, 36.2 per cent by the second method, and 77.5 per cent by the calcium arsenate dusting method. An increase in profit of $1.70 per acre was recorded on plats treated with the home mixture; $7.57 was the gain in profit by using commercial mixtures, while an increase in profit of $35.90 per acre was obtained by using dust.

Mississippi—The cost of poisoning with the home mixture was a total of $8.19 per acre; commercial mixture, $11.25; and calcium arsenate dusting, $6.95. The increase in yield for the first was 399 pounds per acre; second, 498 pounds; and for the third, 533 pounds. An increase in profit of $38.36 per acre was realized from the home mixture plats; an increase of $46.50 per acre for the commercial mixture plats; and an increase of $54.79 for the calcium arsenate dust plats.

Government Station, Tallulah, La.—Treatment with the home mixture cost $4.68 per acre; with the commercial mixture used at other stations, $5.55; and with calcium arsenate in dust form, $6.41. The increase in yield for the home mixture plats was 86 pounds per acre; a decrease of 19 pounds per acre was recorded for the commercial mixture plats, while an increase of an average of 208 pounds was obtained on the plats where calcium arsenate in dust form was used. A gain in profit of $5.47 per acre was obtained by the first method; a loss of $10.98 per acre was noted by the second method; and a gain of $18.17 per acre was obtained from plats where the third method was used.

As a result of comparisons in costs, yields and net profits over a period of years, the experts who have conducted or supervised these tests have concluded that the calcium arsenate dusting method, together with certain other practices, is the most practicable and profitable for the cotton growers and as an organization, the Association of Southern Agricultural Workers, have made recommendations as to the best way to fight the boll weevil.

These points are based on the recommendations of the body of scientists and experts.

San Jose Scale Spray

Spraying orchards while trees are dormant is the most effective way to get rid of San Jose scale. Orchardists have conclusively demonstrated within the last few seasons in midwest orchards that the pest can be checked, preventing the loss of both fruit and trees, by spraying the latter while they are still dormant. Agricultural colleges will furnish full instructions on preparing the spray and how to apply it.

No More "Heathen"

There are no more "heathen" in the world, according to a ruling made at the headquarters of the Salvation Army in Chicago. It was decided that "heathen" is too rude a name to apply to nations which have civilization older than the Christian religion. Hereforth such people will be called "non-Christian."

Attachable to any bottle, a wringer has been invented to remove the excess shoe dressing from a swab as it is withdrawn.

STAGE-DRIVER FOR 38 YEARS

Kentuckian Says He Used to Have Bad Spells of Indigestion Until He Began to Take Black-Draught.

West Liberty, Ky.—Over the mountain roads between here and Wrigley, which for many years were rough and often dangerous, Mr. F. M. Caskey, of this place, has carried the mail for thirty-eight years.

Winter and summer, rain or shine, each day Mr. Caskey has driven his team of mules up the steep trail and back again, so that his friends and neighbors may have their daily mail. And now, although 66 years old, Mr. Caskey, hale and hearty, daily can be seen driving his sturdy mules over the mountains to Wrigley.

At one time, however, Mr. Caskey was not in such robust health as he is now—so he told a recent visitor to West Liberty.

"I used to suffer a great deal with indigestion," he said. "I would have gas on my stomach and a tight feeling in my breast, an uncomfortable feeling, and, after a few days, I would have a sick headache. At times I felt like my head would burst, I would get so constipated.

"I had tried remedies, but didn't get results. One day some one told me of Black-Draught. Since then it has been a family medicine with us. I found, by taking it when I had these indigestion spells, I could ward off the headache. So I keep it in the house and have used it over ten years."

Millions use it. You should.

THE BABYLONIAN EXILE OF JUDAH

LESSON TEXT—II Chron. 36:11-21.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people."—Prov. 14:34.

PRIMARY TOPIC—What a Boy King Did.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Destruction of Jerusalem.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Last Days of Jerusalem.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Nation in Ruins.

I. The Sins of the Nation (vv. 11-16).

1. Zedekiah, the King (vv. 11-13).

(1) Insubordination to God's prophet (v. 12). In the theocratic government of Israel God's prophet occupied a higher place than the king himself. The prophet was God's messenger. Instead of receiving Jeremiah as God's messenger and conforming his life to God's will, as made known by the prophet he refused to humble himself before God.

(2) Rebellion against Nebuchadnezzar (v. 13). Zedekiah was made king of Judah by the king of Babylon but, in spite of this kindness and the word of the Lord spoken to him by Jeremiah (Jer. 38:17, 18; 52:3), he rebelled against the king of Babylon.

(3) He stiffened his neck and hardened his heart against God (v. 13). Those who rebel against rightly constituted authority soon are resisting the will and grace of God.

2. The Priests and People (vv. 14-16).

(1) They followed the heathen (v. 14). Even the priests who ministered in the house of God were practicing the sins of the heathen nations surrounding them.

(2) They polluted the house of the Lord (v. 14). The house of the Lord was sacred, having been dedicated to the Lord and consecrated to His service. For priests to officiate while living lives of impurity was pollution to God's house.

(3) They mocked God's messengers (v. 16). Instead of receiving them as from God, they mocked them.

(4) They despised God's word (v. 16). To set at naught God's counsel is to despise His word (Prov. 1:25).

(5) Misused God's prophets (v. 16). They not only mocked them but imprisoned some and slew others. This they persisted in until God could no longer restrain His wrath.

II. The Judgment Falls (vv. 17-21).

1. Slaughter by the Sword (v. 17). So severe did this judgment fall that the King of the Chaldees slew young men even in the house of the sanctuary and "had no compassion upon young man or maiden, old man or him that stooped for age."

2. The Treasures and Sacred Vessels Carried to Babylon (v. 18). This included, not only the treasures of the house of the Lord, but of the king and his princes.

3. Burned the House of God (v. 19). This was the sacred temple built by Solomon with certain additions and modifications.

4. Broke Down the Walls of Jerusalem (v. 19). The aim in this was to render the walls useless as a means of defense.

5. Burned the Palaces (v. 19). It would seem that the common houses were left for the poor people who remained in the land.

6. Destroyed All the Goodly Vessels (v. 19). This would mean that the palaces were plundered of all that was valuable.

7. Carried the People Into Captivity and Made Slaves of Them (v. 20). Those who had escaped the sword were now carried away and enslaved. It would seem that a number of people had deserted to the Babylonians. From II Kings 25:12 we learn that the poorest of the people were left in the land. Those who would not likely make any trouble were left as vinedressers and husbandmen. Since the custom was to colonize conquered territory by foreign peoples, the object in leaving the poor people was that the country might be ready and over these people Gedaliah was appointed with headquarters at Mizpeh. When the walls were broken Zedekiah fled by night, his object being doubtless to cross the Jordan at Jericho and hide in the mountains east of Jordan. He was overtaken in the plains of Jericho (II Kings 25:5) by the Chaldean army. He was captured and taken to the king of Babylon who was at Riblah, a town north of Damascus. Zedekiah was tried before Nebuchadnezzar, his eyes were put out, he was bound with fetters of brass, and carried away to Babylon, where he remained a prisoner until the day of his death (Jer. 52:11).

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

By LAURA MILLER

©, 1924, by Laura Miller

WHERE MAIN STREET IS ONLY A CREEKBED

For folks who consider life on Main Street "dreadful" there may be a tonic in the picture of life where there isn't even a Main Street. "The only roads in our county are creekbed roads," writes Olive Marsh. "We do not live in a town at all, and there is not a street of any kind within miles of us—'Main' or otherwise."

Yet "Singing Carr Creek" of Knott county, Kentucky, boasts of a community club, a camp fire, a "Blue Bird club" for little girls, a boy scout troop, and an agricultural club which is energetic enough to hold a community fair and to compete in the annual county fair. The secret lies partly in this same Olive Marsh, Radcliffe college master of arts, partly in her co-worker, Ruth Weston, and partly in the desire of the mountain folk to grow back into the world again.

The community center, which mothers all other projects, is managed by the two women together, with five men of the community elected by the people. Since Miss Marsh and Miss Weston came to Carr Creek they have raised funds to build a seven-room schoolhouse, which is in use not only for school purposes, but for clubs and other community gatherings, for the monthly clothing sale held by the center, and for the free lending library which occupies one of the rooms and comprises now about 2,500 volumes. A three-room cottage has also been built, in which Miss Marsh and Miss Weston live, and in which for the past year two orphan boys have also lived, working for their board and attending school. A one-room office building is nearly finished, and a new building, "Singing Carr Creek Home," to serve as a dormitory for orphan children, is about to be begun, the fund for its construction being nearly completed. The center owns about twenty acres of land. The Community club has made a trail across a mountain, so that the children in an isolated section of the school district can get to school without having to walk four miles around by the road. It has also built two foot-bridges across the creek at needed points, to replace the shaky footlogs which got washed out with every heavy rain.

So goes the story of marvelous accomplishment, with the thread of personal happiness all having to be read between the lines.

WHERE TRADITION AND MODERNISM MEET

The oldest museum in America has been intrusted to the direction of a woman. One hundred and fifty years ago the fathers of the Carolinas who had settled Charleston established the first scientific museum in America. About that time the wife of the governor of Connecticut became insane. Governor Winthrop of Massachusetts, with all the dignity of his office and his colonial scholarship, announced: "Had she not gone out of her way and calling to meddle in such things as are proper for men, whose minds are stronger, she had kept her wits." Yet the poor governor's lady was far, in her simple desire for reading, from seeking such knowledge as would fit her to be curator of a scientific institution.

Miss Laura M. Bragg, however, is said to be quite able to keep her wits, for she is credited not only with being a scientist but also a business woman who has placed the museum on a sound financial basis. In addition, her staff is so completely imbued with her vision that the educational service rendered the community, has astonished the museum board of governors.

An exhibit added through her foresight consists of ancient prescriptions, mortars and the early American glass bottles which accumulated in the oldest drug store in Charleston. When it was moved to modern quarters, the antique equipment was destined for the dump heap until Miss Bragg asked to make it one of the most interesting exhibits of the museum.

Daughter of a Methodist minister, she seems always to have understood people. A young B. S., fresh from technical training in biology and library work, she started a museum at Owl's Island, Me., consisting mainly of fish and shells of the vicinity which greatly interested the native population. Visitors to the convention of the American Association of Museums, which met in Charleston in April to celebrate the one hundred and fiftieth birthday of the museum, found the same commingling of scientific and neighborhood spirit in Miss Bragg's work. Alongside the rare antique furniture of the old South which draws connoisseurs from afar, are classes in modeling for Charleston children, and in simple research for their elders.

Contracted Cold at a Billy Sunday Revival

Developed Into Systemic Catarrh Recommends PE-RU-NA

Mr. A. R. Wilson, LaFollette, Tenn.

The letter written a short time ago by Mr. A. R. Wilson of LaFollette, Tenn., brings some more direct evidence of the value of Pe-ru-na in the treatment of catarrhal diseases.

It reads as follows:—"While attending Billy Sunday's great revival at Knoxville, Tenn., last February I contracted a cold which weakened my entire system. I have taken only three bottles of Pe-ru-na and feel like a new man. It is a great system builder as well as a great catarrh remedy."

To attempt to even estimate the thousands who, in the last half century, have come to know and appreciate the merits of Pe-ru-na would be worse than useless. The number is astonishing and increasing daily.

Your nearest dealer has Pe-ru-na in both tablet and liquid form. Insist upon having Pe-ru-na, the original treatment for catarrh.

Hear the Stars Twinkle

Science says light and sound are one and the same. General Ferie, Major Mesny and M. Jouaust of a French wireless laboratory claim to have succeeded in transforming light rays into audible sounds. It is known that under the action of light photo-electric cells with a foundation of selenium give off an extremely feeble electric current. Using a four-electrode lamp, the Frenchmen are said to have obtained variations of current from the star Capella, many millions of miles distant from the earth. Later, by using powerful amplifiers, they said they actually "heard" the light rays through a telephone headpiece.

Shelby County Reporter

Established 1843.

Luther Fowler, Editor and Publisher

SUBSCRIPTION, the year $1.50

Entered at the Columbiana, Ala., Postoffice as second class mail, under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Fine Example of Service—

The Reporter wishes to pay tribute to Ralph E. Parker, for the past year principal of Shelby County High School.

Mr. Parker made an excedent record as principal of our school. Before the opening of the session he visited the various communities of the county seeing prospective students and their parents with the result that the school had one of the largest enrollments in its history and was able to graduate at the close of the year the largest class in its history.

In addition to this Mr. Parker made a remarkably good and unusual record in handling the school's finances. When he took charge of the school a year ago, he found old debts amounting to $250 and an empty treasury. He is leaving the school with all debts paid in full and with a balance of over $1200 in the treasury. In doing this Mr. Parker has not permitted any interest of the school to suffer and has made substantial improvements along some lines.

Of all the service that Mr. Parker has rendered, that which seems most remarkable, because it is so unusual, is the splendid effort he is making to arouse the people of Columbiana and of Shelby county to the necessity for making immediate provision for the expansion of the high school. This effort seems out of the ordinary because most men in Mr. Parker's position of having accepted work for the coming year in another field do not show much interest in the field they are quitting.

The Reporter hopes that this fine example of unselfish service may inspire the people of Shelby county to take hold of this opportunity that is being offered them, and that they may hold on and carry on until adequate provision has been made at the high school for giving training to every Shelby county boy and girl who may be brought within the walls of the school. And the Reporter wishes for Mr. Parker continued success in the field of service to which he has been called.

Determined to Have a School.—

The citizens of Warrenton, a rural community of Marshall county, are planning to grow 150 acres of cotton the proceeds of which will be used for the erection of a new school building. The women of the community will make their contribution to the fund for the new school house by raising poultry for sale. They have bought several thousand eggs for spring hatching and they will feed their chickens under instructions from a large poultry concern from whom they are receiving free feed.

The community needs a building that will cost $15,000. The people are not able to raise the money by donations. Last year they made an effort to raise money by appealing for outside help but failed. They have adopted their present plan because they are determined to provide better facilities for the education of their boys and girls.

The 150 acres of cotton will be in one field and each family will cultivate 2 acres. The county farm agent will give personal supervision to planting, fertilization and cultivation of the cotton and he will also assist the farmers in fighting the boll weevil. There is great interest in the project for it is felt that in addition to providing the way for a new school building it will also teach the farmers how to grow cotton in spite of the boll weevil.

ONE MOTHER'S REWARD

"Service is our highest duty,
Write this on your heart, my boy,
You must serve your generation,
If you'd share the highest joy."

"If you live for self or pleasure,
Naught that's noble can survive,
These will dwarf a godlike nature,
Fail to keep your soul alive.'

Deep within his childish bosom
Sank these words so wise and true
Filled with joy his boyish vision,
Held his very being true,

Do you wonder that his mother
Left the impress on her son,
That one victory for his fellows
Leaves another to be won?

He has brought unheard of comforts,
To the plodding, patient poor,
Planted Faith in hearts once hopeless,
Helped them to their feet once more.

Just as she'd have liked to have him
He has always tried to live,
What a wondrous, priceless tribute
More than this no man can give.

Radient Spirit! Your bright influence,
Down the ages sheds its light,
Through the man you trained for service,
Man of vision, man of might

—K. H. Wallace.

Did you ever hear of Five Points Stroud and White Plains? These towns are scheduled to receive in the near future, the light and power service of the Alabama Power Company.

The public school building at Boaz, a large old-time frame structure, was destroyed by fire last week. Announcement has already been made that a modern brick building, to cost $30,000 to $40,000 will be erected to take its place.

Good People Should Support Sheriff Falkner

The good people of Pelham wish to extend many thanks to Sheriff Falkner and his force and also to Mr. Gardner and Mr. Adkins for the good work they have been doing here and all over the county.

We feel that it is time for the good people to wake up and show where they stand. We have a sheriff who is doing his part and it is time for the people who are for the right to let the world know where they stand.

If the people all over the county would say, "We are for the right," and help to put down the wrong the sheriff and his force would have a much better time and could do more good.

We want them to know that we are continually breathing a silent prayer in their behalf.

Mrs. W. J. Dennis.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our friends of Columbiana and surrounding community for their help and sympathy during the illness and death of our dear mother, Mrs. Geo. D. Barnett. Especially do we thank you for the beautiful floral offerings. May God's richest blessings be your is the prayer of her children. The Children.

Letter From Mr. Parker

To My Friends in Shelby County:

The County Board of Education has elected J. M. Tucker, of Peabody College, to succeed me. I had an interview with the newly elected principal, and I found him to be a first class school man.

I wish to congratulate the board on their choice, and I believe the school will grow under the administration of Prof. Tucker. I wish for him the loyal support you have manifested toward me. I shall endeavor to assist Prof. Tucker in becoming acquainted with the routine of the Principal's office. No one is more desirous than I that the school next year should have an auspicious beginning, and I shall endeavor to co-operate with my successor so that his start with you may be pleasant and encouraging.

I wish to thank my friends for their interest in trying to retain me for another year. Their loyalty and good will will always be treasured by me.

I also wish to thank the members of the County Board of Education for their co-operation during the year; and especially am I grateful to Mr. Pete Christian for his co-operation that enabled me to make every pay roll promptly on the first of the month.

I am deeply indebted to you for many courtesies. You have been hospitable and friendly. I shall not forget your kindness. I wish also to express my gratitude to the ladies of Columbiana for their courtesies to Mrs. Parker. She appreciates your kindness and joins me in thanking you.

To the boys and girls it has been my pleasure to teach, I wish to say that you have been honorable, thoughtful, always deserving the highest commendation. I hope that I may be able to serve you sometime in the future.

I am deeply appreciative of the loyalty shown to me by my faculty I have enjoyed working with them, and I wish for my assistants every success in the school work.

I shall anticipate returning to Shelby county from time to time. The friends I have made here I wish to retain for life.

I wish for the school continued growth, prosperity and expansion. May next year be your most successful and may each succeeding year be better and more beneficial to the boys and girls "seeking further light" in their educational development.

Cordially your friend,
R. E. Parker.

THIS WOMAN'S MARVELLOUS RECOVERY

All Due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Truman, Minn.—"I was badly run-down, had pains in my side and back; sometimes I could hardly move around in bed. My husband got me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after taking it I was so much better I could do all my work again. I do my housework, have a garden, raise chickens, and in harvest time I worked in the field and helped pick corn. Sometimes I do chores and milk. I took the Vegetable Compound before and after my four-months-old baby was born, and it has always helped me wonderfully. I believe there is no better medicine made for women, and I hope every woman will give it a fair trial."—Mrs. AUGUST R. WIEDERHOFT, R. No. 2, Box 84, Truman, Minn.

Weathervanes Back

Weathervanes, popular a century ago, and which disappeared from general use about a generation back, are coming into vogue again in America. This probably is due to the increasing use of copper as a weatherproof material for the vanes, and the revival of colonial architecture. In contrast to weathervanes of the past, which were conventional arrows, horses, or birds, gilded, the new weathervanes are more works of art, and lack the garish appearance imparted by gold leaf.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

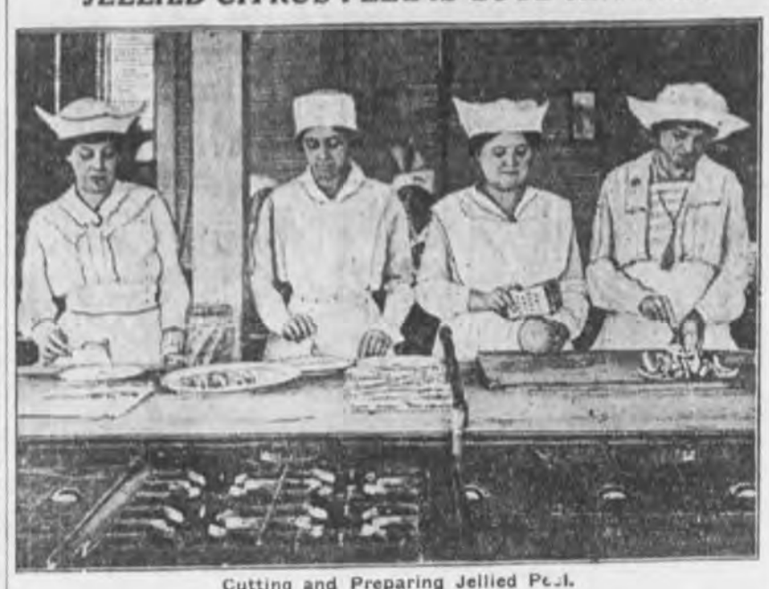
JELLIED CITRUS PEEL IS GOOD ANY TIME



Cutting and Preparing Jellied Peel.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Jellied peel from grapefruit, oranges or lemons, sometimes referred to as "candied" or "crystallized peel," is easy to make. If wrapped in waxed paper and kept tightly covered in tin or glass containers until used it will keep tender two or three weeks.

The following directions for making jellied peel are given by the United States Department of Agriculture, which has thoroughly tested the recipe.

Jellied Grapefruit, Orange or Lemon Peel.

- 5 ounces of peel
- 1 cupful granulated sugar for sirup (7 ounces)
- ⅝ cupful water for sirup, or enough to cover
- ¼ teaspoonful salt
- ½ cupful granulated sugar for rolling strips (about 3 ounces)

Thick, soft, unblemished peel from smooth rolling strips (about 3 ounces). Light-colored grapefruit skins are best for this purpose, since russet skins impart a dingy shade. Orange skins may be bright or pale in color, but should not be russet or spotted. Small oranges from which the juice has been squeezed may be further utilized in this way.

Cut the peel into strips ¼ to ½ inch wide, or into inch squares, which are not so easily handled. Parboil three times, using one quart of cold water and boiling in a lightly covered pan for one-half hour each time, and discarding the water after each cooking. The strips should then be tender and must be handled gently to prevent breaking.

Place the water, salt and sugar for the sirup in a saucepan about 6 inches in diameter at the top and stir until the sugar is dissolved; then add the strips of peel, arranging carefully so that they lie parallel to each other, to prevent their being broken when turned. Place the pan over the flame. Cook the contents rapidly for about 20 minutes, then reduce the heat and continue to boil very gently for about 20 minutes longer, or until the sirup is all absorbed by the peel. Great care must be taken at this point that the sirup does not scorch, and the strips of peel must be lifted or turned frequently so that all are equally penetrated by the sirup. Use a fork in turning the strips and in removing them from the pan.

Keep for Weeks.

Place the peel on waxed paper and when cool roll the strips in granulated sugar, turning them carefully with a knife. Let them dry out for a few hours or over night, then wrap in waxed paper and keep in tightly covered tin or glass containers until used. If left in paper boxes they tend to become hard and crusty in winter or sticky in summer. However, they should keep in good condition for two or three weeks if properly stored in a moderately cool place.

The peel should be jellied throughout, translucent, thick, tender and juicy, not shrunken nor gummy; the skin should be soft and the outer coating of sugar in distinct crystals, not in a crust.

MARK CLOTHES WHEN PUTTING THEM AWAY

Use of Individual Boxes Will Simplify Matters.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If individual boxes are used from year to year to put clothes away in, there may be kept in or near each one a small roll of mending pieces belonging to the person whose clothes are in the box. If the scraps left over when a dress is cut out are stored in the right place at the time of cutting, patching or remodeling pieces may be found in a jiffy, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture.

Millinery trimmings (feathers, ribbons, flowers, velvet pieces) should be stored if in good condition, in a box by themselves, where they can be easily found if a hat must be unexpectedly freshened. Laces of different kinds can be wound on cards or otherwise put away, so that a glance will make the right piece accessible. Lining materials and old dress foundations which have further uses are best collected by themselves. Each housekeeper must evolve her own system, but if she aims to arrange the family clothing and materials in storage so that everything is readily found when wanted she serves the double purpose of saving much time and keeping the storage room in good order, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

MAKING CORN BREAD WITH USE OF MILK

Two Ways of Mixing Outlined by Federal Experts.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Good corn bread may be made with either sweet or sour milk. The United States Department of Agriculture has found that in the sour-milk breads the method of mixing influences the texture. The first method described in this recipe, though longer than the second, yields bread of better texture.

Sour-Milk Corn Bread.

- 2 cupfuls cornmeal
- 2 cupfuls sour milk
- 2 tablespoonfuls butter
- 2 tablespoonfuls sugar, white or brown
- 1½ teaspoonfuls salt
- 2 eggs
- 1 teaspoonful soda
- 1 tablespoonful cold water

There are two ways of mixing this bread, which includes milk and eggs. By the first method the meal, milk, salt, butter and sugar are cooked in a double boiler for ten minutes. When the mixture is cool the eggs are added, well beaten, and the soda dissolved in the water.

By the other method all the dry ingredients, including the soda, are mixed together, and then the sour milk, the well-beaten eggs and the butter are added. If the second method is followed the cold water is not needed. The bread should be baked in a shallow iron or granite pan for 30 minutes.

Buttermilk may be substituted for the sour milk, in which case the butter should be increased slightly; or sour cream may be used and the butter omitted. This serves six persons.

Sweet Milk Corn Bread.

- 2 cupfuls yellow cornmeal
- 1 cupful wheat flour
- 2 cupfuls milk
- ½ cupful sugar
- 1 teaspoonful salt
- 2 eggs
- 3 teaspoonfuls baking powder

Sift together the cornmeal, flour, sugar, salt and baking powder. Add the well-beaten eggs and the milk, and bake for one-half hour in a moderate oven.

In this case, as in the recipe for sour milk corn bread, the cornmeal can be cooked for a short time with the milk if a sofer bread is desired.

All Around the House

Use left-over coffee for mixing gingerbread or for gelatin desserts. Never warm it up for a beverage as the flavor of coffee lies in a volatile oil which soon goes after the coffee is made.

Make the Stout Look Slender; Sleeveless Summer Sweaters

FASHION continues to adore slenderness and fashion journals persist in drawings of attenuated ladies that are entirely unhuman. In the pictures we call them slender, but any approach to them in life, we call scrawny—and too little fat is more unsightly than too much of it. Nevertheless the plump woman grieves and will not be comforted until she can achieve something like a willowy line in her figure. She is usually willing to do almost anything—except walk and work and diet—in order to reduce her weight.

Styles of today favor the stout woman and make opportunity for her to effectively slenderize her figure. The straight silhouette is an unmixed blessing if she is corseted properly and has her dresses made so that they are not tight anywhere. They should be moderately long—and lines may be cleverly lengthened by little expedients. Some of these are to be noted in the dress illustrated, as in the neckline—high at the back and narrow at the front—and in the long pointed sleeve. The side fastening does wonders for the stout figure. Shaped flounces and long tunics are cleverly managed, in gowns that are to conceal too assertive curves.

Dark colors and supple and sheer soft fabrics further the cause of slenderness and nothing is more flattering than laces to figures that need help, either in the direction of slenderizing or of filling out. Ordinarily the stout woman does more worrying than she needs to, for expert corset makers almost perform miracles in the management and obliteration of curves and the elimination of the waistline makes it possible to be well corseted and comfortable at the same time.

Fashions may come and fashions may go, but the sweater ever holds forth as an essential in every perfectly equipped wardrobe. The modern sweater plays a dual role. Through lavish enrichment of color, quality and artful design it has become a garment of luxury, as well as necessity. This is especially true of the sleeveless sweater, for with its magic accompaniment the simplest skirt and lingerie blouse is transformed into a costume de luxe.

The sleeveless mode is the outstanding note of this summer's sweater collection. Details of irresistible appeal are introduced, which include sparkling crystal buttons, such as enhance the charm of the sweater sans sleeves pictured herewith. Imagination must soar to rare heights to vision a garment more beautiful than this. It is knitted of cocoa-colored silk with black stripes of clever designing, and the pockets are set at a rakish angle, thus stressing an assured style element.

A vast color scope is offered in this season's sleeveless modes. The gamut is run from exquisite pastels to bizarre Spanish and Italian colorings; also striking Chinese effects. Orchid, lettuce green, narcissus yellow, cameo pink, crab apple, often on white or in rainbow groupings on a delicate monotone background, typify the ravishing color loveliness expressed in the most recent sleeveless sweaters of summery aspect. Contrasting these are striking effects, mostly knitted of fiber silk, of Roman stripes on a scarlet background, plaids of gayest hue, also startling black-and-white combinations.

Quite the latest idea is the sleeveless knitted vest matched to a coatee-sleeved sweater. To be really up to the moment, the vestee must boast a monogram applique. Typical of the sleeveless mode is a sweater of white wool bound with bright red, trimmed with a monogram in same shade. Two shades of the same color are fashionably expressed as follows. A sweater of bright yellow finished in a yellow of paler tint; a lavender body with bindings and monogram of pansy purple and other combinations along this line.

Musical Tone Opens Lock

A newly invented lock for safes has just been exhibited at Birmingham, England, the peculiarity of which is that, instead of opening to a numerical combination, it does so to a musical tone. In other words, if the cracksman who attempts to open a safe door sings a G sharp when the lock has been attuned to G flat he will be thwarted. Safeblowers of the future, instead of carrying a kit of jimmies and "nitro," will have to have a set of tuning forks.—Musical America.

GLACIER NATIONAL PARK, up next to the Canadian line in Montana and a public playground of the first class, had its most successful season in 1923 and will doubtless set a new record this year. Glacier will come to its own in the matter of attendance with the completion of its Transmountain Road across the Continental Divide, over Logan Pass, now in the third year of construction by the national park service. Already the service is planning for substantial extensions to present accommodations for visitors, which will then be necessary. Says Stephen T. Mather, director of the national park service, in his 1923 annual report to the secretary of the interior:

In common with the majority of the other national parks, Glacier experienced her most successful season, enjoying more patronage than in any previous year, 33,988 visitors having registered in the park as compared with 23,935 visitors in 1922. This is only a forerunner of a tremendous increase in travel that is certain to take place on the completion of the Transmountain Road, now in its third year of construction. Motorists traveling the northern highways to Glacier never have had a direct route across the Continental Divide, this barrier requiring a detour of several hundred miles to the south. The Transmountain Road, crossing the Continental Divide through Logan Pass, will, aside from furnishing a direct means of traversing the mountains, attract thousands of motorists by its unsurpassed scenic qualities.

This is good as far as it goes, but the situation may be made plainer by a more detailed explanation of Glacier's hard luck in the matter of automobile highways. An attendance of only 33,988 for a first-class national park like Glacier is a joke—and a bad one. But the reasons for this comparatively small attendance are easily found.

A few years ago the bulk of the tourist travel to the national parks was by railroad. Now the bulk of it is by private car. The per cent varies. Contrasting examples: Rocky Mountain, in 1923, had 51,800 private cars in which probably more than 80 per cent of its 218,000 visitors traveled. Glacier had 5,599 private cars; not more than 50 per cent of its 33,988 visitors arrived by private car. This tells part of the story. Rocky Mountain is of no higher class than Glacier, and is only about one quarter as large—400 square miles in the one and 1,539 in the other—but Rocky Mountain is the most easily accessible by automobile from the geographical and population center of the country of all the 19 national parks.

Another factor in the attendance comparison between Rocky Mountain and Glacier is this: Each park has an independent east and west entrance on either side of the Continental Divide, each entrance taking care of separate and distinct lines of automobile tourist travel. In Rocky Mountain the east and west entrances are Estes Park and Grand Lake. In Glacier they are Glacier Park and Belton. In Rocky Mountain the Fall River Road crosses the Continental Divide, connects Estes Park and Grand Lake and makes possible through traffic, which otherwise would be impossible. In Glacier automobile tourist travel from both the east and west halts at the Continental Divide. The Great Northern, which serves Glacier and runs along the south line of the park, ameliorates the situation by maintaining daily shipments of motor cars between the two entrances. Unless motorists take advantage of this rail shipment they have to make a wide detour either through Montana—as far south as Helena—or through Canada.

What the Fall River Road does for Rocky Mountain the Transmountain Road will do for Glacier. Here is what the 1923 reports says of the progress of the work:

Work on the second section of the Transmountain Road on the west side was begun and about six miles, extending from the end of the first section at the head of Lake McDonald, up McDonald Creek to above Avalanche Creek, will be finished this fall (1923). Also a contract has been let for the construction of eight or nine miles, on the east side, including the construction of a bridge across the St. Mary River, extending from St. Mary Chalet along the north shore of St. Mary Lake toward Going-to-the-Sun Chalet. With construction under way on both sides of the Continental Divide, the Transmountain Road can be pushed with more speed to completion.

And here is a glimpse into the future that promises all kinds of things for Glacier: It will be only a short time before the Babb-International Boundary Road is improved. This road runs through the Blackfeet Indian reservation adjoining Glacier on the east and will connect with the Canadian National parks highway system. The National Park-to-Park Highway, which connects all the western national parks, is in full operation and getting better every season. The Banff-Windermere Highway across the Canadian Rockies, opened last year, makes direct connection with the National Park-to-Park Highway at Spokane, Wash.

With the Babb-International Boundary Road and the Transmountain Road completed, Glacier will offer much to automobile tourists. Any car owner in the United States or Canada can easily reach Glacier, either to stay or go on. The entire Scenic West, American and Canadian, will be open to him.

When Glacier comes to its own, its attendance will jump up amazingly. And what it gains it will keep, for its visitors have a habit of going back year after year. Glacier has its devotees, just as have Rocky Mountain in Colorado and Yosemite in California. Yellowstone, oldest, biggest and most famous of all our 19 national parks, has been lacking in this to date.

Take Mary Roberts Rinehart—nature lover, outdoor woman, novelist and nature writer—she's an example. She has been much in Glacier. And here is the way Glacier got her. Her enthusiasm induced her to write an "Appreciation of Glacier" for publicity purposes. And here's what she says, in part:

There are no "Keep Off the Grass" signs in Glacier National Park. It is the wildest part of America. . . . It is perhaps the most unique of all our parks, as it is undoubtedly the most magnificent. . . . Here the Rocky Mountains run northwest and southeast, and in the glacier-carved basins are great spaces; cool, shadowy depths in which lie blue lakes; mountain-sides threaded with white, where, from some hidden lake or glacier far above, the overflow falls a thousand feet or more, and over all the great silence of the Rockies. . . . Here is the last home of a vanishing race—the Blackfeet Indians. Here is the last stand of the Rocky Mountain sheep and the Rocky Mountain goat; here are elk, deer, black and grizzly bears, and mountain lions. Here are trails that follow the old game trails along the mountain side; here are meadows of June roses, forget-me-not, larkspur, and Indian paintbrush growing beside glaciers, snowfields and trails of a beauty to make you gasp. . . . But there is no voice in all the world so insistent to me as the wordless call of these mountains. I shall go back. Those who go once always hope to go back. The lure of the great free spaces is in their blood.

One can imagine without the slightest difficulty a throng of devotees of other national parks surrounding Mrs. Rinehart, bawling her out—in perfectly polite language, of course—and asking in unison: "How do you get that way, Mary?" And the babel, sifted out, interpreted and reduced to prosaic utterance, would contain these statements:

There's nothing in Glacier wilder than are areas in other parks. Glacier isn't "perhaps the most unique," nor is it "undoubtedly the most magnificent." Other parks have "glacier-carved basins," lakes, glaciers, falls, wild animals and flowers. Yellowstone beats all the parks—except possibly Mount McKinley—for wild animal life. Rocky Mountain probably has more mountain sheep than Glacier. Mount Rainier is the champion "Wild Flower Park." The Blackfeet are a liability rather than an asset, inasmuch as they slaughter relentlessly the park game that strays into their reservation; the big game on the east side of the Continental Divide is gradually being wiped out. Glacier's highest mountain, Mount Cleveland, is only 10,438 feet; Rocky Mountain has 43 between 10,000 and 14,255 feet.

Getting down to the really unique features of the National park system, this is what we find:

The Yellowstone contains more and greater geysers than all the rest of the world together.

Mount Rainier's single-peak system with 28 living glaciers has no equal.

Crater Lake occupies the hole left after a large volcano had slipped back into earth's interior through its own rim; it is the deepest and bluest accessible lake in the world.

The Sequoia contains more than a million "Big Trees," 12,000 of which are more than 10 feet in diameter; some are more than 30 feet in diameter and are the largest and oldest living things of earth.

Hawaii National Park contains the largest living volcano in the world, Mauna Loa; and Kilauea, continuously active for a century, with its Lake of Fire, which draws visitors from all the world.

Mount McKinley is scenically the world's loftiest mountain, since it rises more than 20,000 feet above sea level and 17,000 feet above its surrounding valleys.

Mesa Verde contains the most notable and best preserved prehistoric cliff dwellings in the United States, if not in the world.

Grand Canyon, earth's largest and noblest example of erosion, gorgeously carved and colored, is one of the natural wonders of the world.

Curiously enough, Mrs. Rinehart omitted mention of the one feature that, in the opinion of many, does entitle Glacier to a place among the unique national parks—its "Lewis Overthrust" and the gorgeous coloration of its mountains. Zion National Park in Utah, Bryce Canyon in Utah, likely to be made the Utah National Park, and Grand Canyon probably surpass Glacier in coloration, but their colors are down in the depths, while Glacier's are flung up into the sky.

Now, don't be scared by the Lewis Overthrust. Here's briefly what the geologists mean by the term: The rock nearest the center of the earth is called Archean and the geologists know very little about it. The next oldest strata are the Algonkian, which were laid as an ocean bottom sediment something like 80,000,000 years ago. It is this Algonkian group that are exposed in Glacier; nowhere in the world are they displayed in such area, profusion and variety and in such magnificence of coloring.

These Algonkian rocks lie in four differently-colored strata, all of which the Glacier visitor may see for himself. The lowest is the Altyn limestone, about 1,600 feet thick. It weathers a pale buff. There are whole yellow mountains of this on the eastern edge of Glacier. Next above lies a stratum of Appekunny argillite, or green shale, about 3,400 feet thick. It weathers every possible shade of dull green. Next above that lie about 2,200 feet of Grinnell argillite or red shale. It weathers every possible shade of deep red and purple. On top is about 4,000 feet of Siyeh limestone, gray and running in places to yellow. Horizontally through the middle of this limestone is a broad dark band called the diorite intrusion.

Now, when these brilliantly colored strata were thrust up from the bottom of the sea, they were practically level. Then there came a gigantic squeeze. The strata yielded in long irregular, wave-like folds. Finally they cracked and then broke. One broken edge, the western, was thrust upward and over the other. This western edge was thousands of feet thick. It overlapped the eastern edge ten to fifteen miles.

This is the Lewis (Range) Overthrust. It is this overthrust that accounts for the inconceivably tumbled character of the vast rocky masses. There is a sag where the park lies. A horizontal line drawn straight across Glacier would pass through the bottom of the Altyn limestone on the east and west boundaries and in the middle of the park through the top of the Siyeh limestone. It would cut diagonally through the green and red shales on both sides of the Continental Divide.

The uninformed tourist doubtless says to himself, as he heads the flivver west, "Three fine national parks in a row—Rocky Mountain, Yellowstone and Glacier. All three in the Rockies and on the Continental Divide. Probably all much alike. See one and I've seen them all."

That shows the necessity of the campaign of education that the federal government and the National Parks association and many out-of-door organizations are waging to get the American people to see their national parks with understanding, as well as emotionally.

For Rocky Mountain, Yellowstone and Glacier are essentially different. Rocky Mountain is solid granite, a most astonishing aggregation of lofty peaks and beautiful valleys perched on the top of the Continental Divide. Yellowstone is volcanic, with volcanic activities everywhere in evidence. Glacier is sedimentary rock, twisted and jumbled and gorgeously colored.

Congress has just passed an act authorizing the making of a budget for road building purposes in the national parks, carrying a total of $7,500,000 over three years. If funds are appropriated, Glacier's tentative allotment is $1,000,000. This would doubtless hurry the Transmountain Road to completion. Speed the day!

VETERAN JUDGE GIVES FACTS IN HIS CASE

Honorable A. P. Tarbox, distinguished lawyer and judge, residing at 217 West 23rd St., University Place, Neb., lends his name to further the cause of Tanlac, the famous treatment that has proved of such great benefit to him.

"If anybody knows what Tanlac will do," recently said Judge Tarbox, "it is me, for the medicine has kept me on my feet and able to work for the past two years."

Judge Tarbox has been a member of the bar since early manhood and has practiced law in Illinois, Nebraska and Oklahoma for more than a half century. He is a charter member of Farragut Post, Lincoln, G. A. R., and also prominent in fraternal order circles. Speaking further of his experience with Tanlac, Judge Tarbox said:

"Stomach trouble had been the bane of my existence even before the Civil War. Indigestion such as I had is about the worst enemy a person could have, and it kept getting worse all the time.

"I simply could not have kept going the past two years if it had not been for Tanlac. It made my weak stomach sound and wholesome, did away with all signs of indigestion and built me up in a way I had thought impossible.

"In fact, Tanlac has brought me health, strength and happiness when I was sick and suffering, so I have every reason to give it my unqualified endorsement and praise."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Family Reunion

Vincent, Alabama. May 26th.—A happy family reunion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Jones recently, the occasion being a birthday dinner for Mr. Jones planned as a surprise for him. Mr. Jones was 54 years old and his six daughters and one son, having made all preparations for the dinner, came home on that day.

There were 36 members of the family present, including 20 grand children. After the dinner, which was greatly enjoyed by everyone the afternoon was spent in pleasant conversation and sveral pictures of the family were made.

We love our father and mother and feel it is a grand thing that we can sometimes surprise them in this way. May the Lord bless them in their old days.

SHELBY COUNTY REPORTER

SHELBY COUNTY MAY DOUBLE HER QUOTA FOR MONTEVALLO

Leaders in the campaign for a Million Dollars for Montevallo are encouraged to believe Shelby county, by her contributions to the fund, will double the quota of $20,000 that has been assigned.

Four-fifths of the entire quota, $16,000, has been pledged in Montevallo; $6,000 by the faculty and students of the college and $10,000 by the citizens of Montevallo. One firm made a pledge of $200 a year for five years, a total of $1,000. Four firms pledged in the same manner, $500 each. A large number of pledges amounting to $250 each was received and there is hardly a man in the whole town who had not made a contribution to the fund, in keeping with his ability to pay.

On Thursday of last week a committee visited Siluria and without seeing all the people who are known to be interested in the success of the movement, received pledges to the amount of nearly $1,000. On Friday M. L. Orr, superintendent of the training school at Montevallo director of the Drive for Shelby county, and Miss Sellers of Ramer, president of the alumae association, accompanied by local members of the committee, spent a few hours at work in Columbiana and received pledges to the amount of $715. As at Siluria, a number who are counted upon for liberal pledges, either were not seen or had not decided just how much they will plegde.

It is the feeling of those directing the drive that the influence of the response from Shelby county to this call of Alabama College which in a peculiar sense belongs to Shelby county, will be felt throughout the state and will in a measure determine the success of the whole movement. They are much elated at the promise that this county will double its quota. Such liberality on the part of the home people will, they feel confident, inspire the people of the whole state, to make generous provision for the needs of this, their only state college for women.

WHICH WILL YOU CHOOSE?

THIS Or THIS!
PRESENT SYSTEM OF EGG MARKETING	FARM BUREAU SYSTEM OF MARKETING EGGS
1. Eggs are sold as such, "eggs are eggs." Small eggs bring just as much as large eggs. Poor quality eggs sell for same price as high quality. All are sold on low quality basis. The producer is the loser.	1. Eggs will be sold according to grade, as determined by size and quality.
2. No organization. Every person who handles eggs makes just as much as possible. The producer pays the bills.	2. By organization the overhead cost of handling will be reduced.
3. Eggs are perishable. Seventeen per cent of all the eggs produced are never consumed, because they are not handled properly.	3. Eggs will reach the market quicker, meaning that a higher quality is insured, thus a higher return to the producer.
4. Eggs generally pass through six or seven hands before reaching the consumer. Each causes a delay, which means lower quality Each handler must have a profit.	4. Eggs will be sold direct to large users of eggs and distributors, thus eliminating a large number of middlemen.
5. The egg market is spasmodic. When eggs are scarce they bring a good price. When eggs are plentiful the price is low.	5. It will furnish a regular market for eggs throughout the entire year.
6. "Dumping" is practiced. General "dumping" on the market during excess production, forces the prices of eggs downward. Each fellow competes with his neighbor. No orderly method of marketing is practiced.	6. The association will not practice "dumping". When season of excess production comes your Farm Bureau Association will guaranize eggs, put them in storage, and hold to season of low production and higher price. This will stabilize prices throughout the year.
7. If a high quality egg is produced it does not command the attention of the buyers because of the small volume produced.	7. By having a large volume of eggs your Association can command the attention of the buyers and get better prices for eggs.
8. In 1923 the poultry producers of the United States lost over $50,000,000 by faults of this system of marketing eggs. Are you satisfied with it?	8. The enormous loss of $50,000,000 suffered annually by the poultry producers of the United States because of the unsatisfactory method of handling and marketing of eggs will be saved.

MUCH ENTHUSIASM FOR HI SCHOOL EXTENSION

The movement to raise an Extension Fund for Shelby County High School, inaugurated at the recent meeting of the alumni of the school has met a most generous response from the people of Columbiana. Already the total of pledges made amounts to $1,400, and not all of the people interested in a greater high school have been seen.

At the meeting of the Exchange Club of Columbiana, Thursday of last week, Mr. Parker made a statement of what had been done at the meeting of the alumni of the high school a week previous and distributed pledge cards to the members of the club. He received pledges amounting to over $300, and other members seen after the meeting raised this amount to $575.

It is Mr. Parker's intention to give every citizen of the county an opportunity to contrinute to this fund for enlarging the high school and he anticipates that not less than $2,500 will be raised in this way.

Faithful Official Resigns

Montevallo, Alabama, June 2.—At the regular business meeting of the Montevallo Baptist church on yesterday, William Lyman, Treasurer, tendered his resignation to take effect immediately. This was rendered necessary on account of his health. He was first elected treasurer June 26, 1892 and has served continuously since then, practically thirty-two years.

His books were kept with a minuteness and accuracy of detail that are seldom found in any office. He has been patient and efficient, and the church with deep regrets accepted his resignation.

In the seventy-five million campaign that has been conducted by all Baptist churches for the past five years, he reports that the quota for this church was $7,500. He has collected and credited to this fund $7,677.14, and there are yet five more months for further collections.

J. R. Lewis was elected as his successor. A committee was appointed to draft suitable resolutions on the retirement of Mr. Lyman.

COTTON CONDITION LOWEST IN YEAR

In its first report of the season issued Monday, the U. S. department of agriculture placed the condition of the cotton crop on May 25 at 65.6% of normal. According to this report this year's crop begins the season with the lowest condition, with the exception of 1920, since the keeping of condition records was begun 53 years ago. In 1920 the condition May 25 was 62.4%. The condition this year is 7.6% below the average for the same date for the last 10 years.

The condition of the crop in other states follow:

Virginia, 62; North Carolina, South Carolina, 68; Georgia, Florida, 77; Alabama, 70; Mississippi, 69; Louisiana, 70; Texas 66; Arkansas, 58; Tennessee 54; Missouri, 52; Oklahoma, California, 91; Arizona, 90; New Mexico, 89.

The cotton area in foreign countries this year as compiled by the department of agriculture follows:

India, 23,088,000 acres; an increase of 1,296,000.

Egypt, 1,068,500; a decrease of 220,100.

Brazil, 1,956,800; an increase of 453,800.

Russian Turkestan, 705,000; an increase of 405,000.

Argentina, 154,800; an increase of 98,300.

Anglo-Egyptian Soudan, 101,000 acres.

Announcement of the acreage planted to cotton this year will be made by the department next month when a forecast of production will be issued. The area in cultivation at the end of June last year, the department announced, was 38,709,000 acres and revised by a final check, the area picked last year was 37,130,000 acres and the yield was 130 pounds

Condition in Alabama

The condition of cotton in Alabama shows the same as last year according to a statement by H. W. Gist, agricultural statistician. There are material differences in the various sections of the state but the average condition for the state as a whole, 70 per cent of normal, is the same as for the same date last year.

The present crop was planted about an average of six days later than [illegible] to the eleven

DRAINAGE LAW IS DECLARED INVALID

SUPREME COURT REVERSES CASE OF FAYETTE AND LAMAR COUNTIES AND DECLARES ACT UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

Montgomery.—Alabama's drainage law is invalid because it confers authority upon districts to issue bonds and charge owners of property drained their proportionate share of the principal and interest on the bonds when the constitution prohibits the levy of taxation by a subdivision of the state except municipalities.

This decision was handed down by the supreme court. The law was enacted in 1915, the intention being to provide a method whereby the state's swamps and overflowed lands could be drained and turned into productive acreage. J. M Moore, state commissioner of agriculture, is author of the bill, having introduced it while a member of the legislature from Fayette county.

The case in which the decision was rendered was that of J. H. Collins, judge of probate of Fayette county; J. T. Maddox, judge of probate of Lamar county, versus J. S. Hollis, appealed from the Fayette circuit court. The case originated when Hollis petitioned the two probate judges to appoint a drainage commissioner to fill a vacancy for draining district No. 2, Fayette and Lamar counties, a project involving reclamation of some 4,000 acres of land. The probate judges refused to make the appointment on the ground that the drainage act was unconstitutional. Hollis then carried the case into circuit court, which decided it in favor of the constitutionality of the law. The two probate judges appealed to the supreme court, which in its decision reversed and remanded the decision of the lower court and held the drainage law to be invalid.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Two Birmingham men were elected to high offices at the convention of the Bankhead Highway association in Albuquerque, N. M. Erskine Ramsay of Birmingham was elected treasurer of the association and J. Asa Rountree of Birmingham wa sre-elected director general. Another Alabama man, Leon J. The closing day of the semi-centennial and commencement at the Florence normal school was marked by the decision of the alumni association to erect a memorial to the soldiers of the World war. It will be in the form of a stone and concrete stage for the open air amphitheatre and will have a memorial tablet bearing the names of those who paid the supreme sacrifice.

Seeking an accounting of affairs of the Gulf Coast Produce Exchange, also the Horticultural Development company, each devoted to the citrus industry in Mobile county, a suit for $3,000 by a member of the two exchanges is under way in federal court. Attorneys are arguing the question of a separation of the two associations before the court prior to actual trial of the case. One of the members of the exchange in the suit charges that $3,000 is due him for oranges sold from his place. He charged extravagance in the opeeration on the exchanges and declares that a contract was made to handle oranges, but that he has never received any money or an accounting from the citrus exchange.

In order to find out just where the candidates for municipal offices at Gadsden stand on various and important issues, the League of Women Voters will give them a dinner within the next few days, the date not being set. Nearly 50 candidates for mayor, president of the council and the several aldermanic positions will attend. It is expected that a number of women interested in political matters will also be invited. Candidates will be called upon to pledge their efforts to behalf of parks, playgrounds, dry enforcement, sanitation and the general moral welfare of the city.

Recognition of the ability of the woman as office holders in Walker county is perhaps greater than in any other county in the state. The women have already captured two county offices in Walker and another one will fall to a woman before the end of the year. Miss Mary Amiss, democrat, holds the office of circuit clerk of Walker and Mrs. Lillian Davison, republican, is county auditor. On May 13 Miss Lunnie Swindle won the democratic nomination for county treasurer over five male opponents.

The 167th regiment band of Gadsden will go to the New York national democratic convention if a movement now on foot succeeds. It is said terms have been asked by the Alabama boosters who will go to the convention to fight for Senator Underwood's nomination. The band numbers 48 pieces and has frequently been pronounced the best national guard organization of its kind in the country.

Blueberry Pudding.

The canned berries may be used for this dish if the fresh are not obtainable. Spread slices of bread with butter and arrange in a baking dish, cover each layer of bread with berries well sweetened; repeat until the dish is full. Bake one-half hour in a moderate oven. Serve hot with sugar and cream.

Potato Doughnuts.

Take four and one-half cupfuls of pastry flour, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-third of a teaspoonful of grated nutmeg, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of soda, three eggs beaten light, one cupful of granulated sugar, one cupful of mashed potatoes, three tablespoonfuls of melted butter and three-fourths of a cupful of sour milk. Sift the dry ingredients, add sugar to the eggs, the butter to the potatoes and combine the two mixtures, add the sour milk and stir in the dry ingredients. Take a little of the dough at a time, roll and cut in rounds. Fry in deep fat. If the mixture is well chilled on ice before rolling there will be less flour needed and the cakes will be more tender.

Banana Pie.

Press through a ricer enough ripe bananas to make a cupful, add one-half cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of molasses, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one beaten egg, one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half cupful of milk, one-third cupful of cream. Mix and bake in a pastry-lined pie plate.

Don't think you have a corner on the trouble market. I could mention several varieties you've never even heard of. What you need is the philosophy of cheerful endurance. Then you will begin to accomplish.—Lloyd.

SUMMER DRINKS

There is nothing that is more satisfying on a warm day than a cold, tasty drink. The forehanded housewife provided for the hot days with a good supply of fruit juices of various kinds when they appeared in season. Grape juice, raspberry shrub and combinations of juices are all good. Of course, the lemon is the good old stand-by; we couldn't get along without it, as it adds zest to all drinks. Add a beaten egg to a pitcher of lemonade (two if it is a large pitcher) it adds food value to the drink and makes it different.

Orange and Raspberry Nectar.—Squeeze the juice from six oranges, mix with the pressed-out juice from a pint of fresh or canned raspberries. Add one cupful of sugar, dissolve over heat, but do not let the mixture become hot. Grate the yellow rind of three oranges and cook in a pint of boiling water for a few minutes. Strain, cool, and add the fruit juice. When cold set into the ice chest. Dilute with an equal volume of ice water. Fill tall glasses and add ginger ale to each. Garnish with a few fresh berries if at hand.

Fruit Shrub.—This is a recipe to save for the fruit season, so that next year there will be shrub on the shelves for warm days. Cover raspberries with half as much vinegar as berries, let stand for three days, then strain and add four quarts of fresh fruit to the juice and vinegar; again let stand three days, drain and put into a preserving kettle with a pound of sugar to each three cupfuls of fruit juice. Boil and seal in bottles. Any kind of berries—black, blue, or loganberries are both stimulating and refreshing.

Iced Tea.—Take two teaspoonfuls each of green and black tea, pour over a pint of boiling water and cover tightly; let stand five minutes to draw. Take a large piece of ice, place in a granite pan and pour over it the boiling tea. When well-chilled add water to taste, more ice, and fill glasses. Garnish each glass with a section of lemon and serve with loaf sugar.

Grape and Ginger Ale Jelly.—Heat a pint of grape juice with two tablespoonfuls of sugar; when hot pour over two tablespoonfuls of gelatin which has been softened in a tablespoonful of water. Add a pint of ginger ale. Mold and cool on ice until ready to serve.

BROWN HEN'S PRIDE

BROWN HEN was very much surprised one morning when she returned from her breakfast to find in her nest, which she had left with three eggs in it, five very large brown eggs.

Her eyes popped open with wonderment for a minute as she gazed at the handsome eggs, but her pride soon got the better of her surprise and she said to herself, "I must have been mistaken. That is all there is about it, for here are the eggs and this is the nest I have been sitting on.

"Anyway, why shouldn't the eggs be brown? My feathers are brown and I think it very good taste to lay brown eggs and such beauties, too.

"But, of course," and here Brown Hen tossed her head with pride, "of course, I have always laid large eggs, but somehow these seem to be the largest I ever remember; the chicks from this batch should make all the other hens very envious."

Brown Hen could not sit still. She had to hop off her nest every little while to look at those big eggs and once when she was admiring the eggs old Speckled Hen was passing and Brown Hen called to her to look at the handsomest eggs she ever saw.

"Clucked and Squawked in Vain"

Speckled Hen looked into Brown Hen's nest and then she looked at Brown Hen a second. "Don't you know what those eggs are?" she asked. "If you take my advice, and I am old enough to know, you will peck every one of them and get them out of your nest. Then make a nest in some place that cannot be found until you have hatched your chicks."

"Spoil those wonderful eggs?" said Brown Hen. "You are jealous, Speckled Hen, and you want me to destroy them. I shall do nothing of the kind," and Brown Hen jumped on her nest again and looked after Speckled Hen with angry eyes.

"You won't be so proud when you see those chicks," was Speckled Hen's parting shot.

One morning Brown Hen proudly showed herself with five little chicks in the barnyard. Brown Hen was the only one that did not notice that her children's feet were queer.

"Madam, I would see Dr. Drake if I were you," said old White Hen, "your children do not seem to walk as chickens should. They waddle a bit."

"Envious," said Brown Hen to herself. Then she said aloud, "My children are more graceful than most chicks, White Hen, that's all."

But when old Granny Duck spied Brown Hen and her family she began to quack. "What do you mean by strutting around here with my grandchildren?" she asked. "Can't you hatch out a brood of hen chickens instead of mixing into our family?"

"What do you mean?" inquired Brown Hen, so surprised she didn't know what else to say.

"I mean," said Granny Duck, "that those chicks you are so proudly showing around here are ducks."

"I don't believe it," said Brown Hen, "You are jealous because I have such handsome children. That is all."

"Wait and see," said Granny, waddling away.

A short time after this Brown Hen was walking around by the duck pond and away ran her children and into the pond they went while poor Brown Hen clucked and squawked in vain trying to call them back.

"What did I tell you?" said Granny Duck, swimming along beside the ducklings. "I knew our children the minute I saw them."

"I told you so," cackled White Hen. "You let the farmer fool you. I would just like to see him try that on me. I'd peck every big brown egg I found in my nest before I would be seen with a brood of ducklings."

Poor Brown Hen, there was no use saying anything now for there were her big children swimming out on the pond. She had been fooled and her tail feather drooping, she walked sadly away to hide under the currant bushes, feeling she could never again hold up her head in that barnyard.

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

MARE-BROWED MEN

"MARE-BROWED men are described as those whose eyebrows meet above the nose. In many sections of this country and Canada it is considered unlucky to meet such a man when starting on a journey, going hunting, or about to engage in any new enterprise. The superstition is patently a form of the superstition of the evil eye which, having come down to us through unnumbered centuries, is as potent now in some countries as it ever was. In Italy and in the Levant, for instance, the belief in the evil eye is taken as a matter of course and few there be in those lands who would question it. The superstition as a whole has already been dealt with in this series. That the mare-browed man superstition is a phase of it is evidenced by the fact that in some sections of Canada and this country such a man is supposed to be able to "cast spells." The uniting of the eyebrows gives a peculiar look to the eyes and offtimes a sinister one—it emphasizes the power of the glance, as it were, and thus naturally calls to mind the "evil-eye." The superstition regarding ill luck attached to cross-eyed persons and mare-browed persons are the two most common forms in which the evil eye superstition manifests itself in this country; except in cases where immigrants have brought with them across the Atlantic the superstition in its original form.

JOHN VAN TRIM, JR.

JOHN VAN TRIM, JR., was assistant business manager in the big office, and, when his chief learned that John's wife was expecting her first baby he asked the Van Trims to spend a week-end out of town with him and his sister. The night of their arrival was hot and breathless. Mrs. Van Trim appeared for dinner in a simple, fresh-looking dress, open becomingly at the neck, that set off her pretty fair hair. Her husband, who had arrived from the city on the same train, came in wearing his business suit, his collar wilted, his trousers needing pressing, his hair disheveled.

Afterward the chief spoke of charming Mrs. Van Trim, but when his sister suggested asking out the young couple again, he was silent. She answered his unspoken comment:

"It wasn't very worldly wise of the boy to come in so dragged-looking, my dear; but there wasn't much time, and he must have been hot and tired."

"That's just my objection," replied the chief. "If by this time Van Trim can't manage, in spite of obstacles, to be presentable on a visit to his boss, he hasn't the brains I'm looking for."

Nevertheless, the chief's sister kept in touch with the Van Trims. One day, five years later, when her brother asked her what she knew of their fortunes, she had to admit that John had gone down hill. For she was remembering his baggy knees, his unpolished shoes, his frayed cravat and soiled collar and neglected nails. What might have been explained as "mere" laziness five years before was actual slovenliness now.

Then the chief retired and he and his sister went abroad to live. Years later they returned for a visit. One day the new president of the old concern came out to see them. He was a distinguished, energetic, courteous gentleman of forty-five or fifty. They remembered him as a clerk working under John Van Trim, and they asked him what he knew of the Van Trims.

He hesitated. "A sad thing," he said, finally. "Van Trim simply didn't make good. We kept him on as long as we possibly could, but at last he became so seedy, mentally and physically, that people would stare at him when they came into the office. He looked like a tramp. We simply had to drop him."

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

FACTS about your name; it's history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

ELIZA

ELIZA is another of the Elizabeth cycle of feminine names. With the single exception of Mary, there is no other name in the language of any country which has so many full-grown, fully independent offsprings. Eliza, which at first glance would seem to be Elizabeth with one syllable removed, has really an interesting little history of her own.

The name means, of course, "God's oath." The Divine title known to man before especial revelation to Moses in the burning bush was the Hebrew word Eli, which corresponds to our term Deity. This word served as a prefix to many Biblical proper names. The first was Eliezer, the name of Abraham's steward who went to bring home Rebecca. Later the name changed to Eleazer and was applied to Aaron's eldest surviving son.

Following this bit of etymological history, Eliza would seem more likely the feminine of Eleazar than a mere contraction of Elizabeth. The latter explanation, however, is most generally adhered to, due, perhaps, to the influence of Elizabethan poetry and drama, which endeavored to improve on the name of the good queen, by terming her Eliza.

The popularity and prevalence of Eliza became widespread early in the Nineteenth century, and there are frequent instances of both names being given in baptism to different children in the same family.

The aquamarine is Eliza's talismanic gem. It promises her travel and change, and many friends. Saturday is her lucky day and 2 her lucky number.

GRIND TOUGH END OF PORTERHOUSE STEAK

Putting Tail-End Through Meat Hopper.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The flank end of the porterhouse is to be classed with the toughest of cuts and with those which, when cooked alone, are with difficulty made tender even by long heating, and yet people quite generally broil this part of the steak with the tenderloin and expect it to be eaten. The United States Department of Agriculture says the fact is that to broil this part of the porterhouse steak is not good management. It is much more profitable to put it into the soup kettle or to make it into a stew. In families where most of the members are away during the day the latter is a good plan, for the end of a steak makes a good stew for two or three people. This may be seasoned with vegetables left from dinner, or two or three olives cut up in gravy will give a very good flavor; or a few drops of some one of the bottled meat sauces, if the flavor is relished, or a little chili sauce may be added to the stew. But if the tough end of a porterhouse is needed with the rest, a good plan is to put it through a meat grinder, make it into balls, and broil it with the tender portions. Each member of the family can then be served with a piece of the tenderloin and a meat ball. If the chopped meat is seasoned with a little onion juice, grated lemon rind, or chopped parsley, a good flavor is imparted to the gravy.

TO MAKE CURRANT OR CINNAMON BUNS

May Be Baked Without Any Top Coating.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Take a portion of dough for light rolls; when it is ready for molding, place on a floured breadboard and roll into a rectangular sheet one-half inch in thickness. Pin down the corners to keep in shape. Spread lightly with softened butter, sprinkle with powdered (or soft) sugar and stew with currants or cinnamon. Roll up the sheet as for a jelly roll, cut into inch slices and place on a greased sheet about one inch apart. Let rise until about trebled in bulk; sprinkle the top with chopped nuts, or brush with a mixture of sugar and milk, and bake about twenty-five minutes in a fairly hot oven. If desired, these buns may be baked without any top coating and iced just a few minutes before taking from the oven, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture.

Vegetable Chowder Makes Most Substantial Dish

Here is a mixed vegetable chowder that is good. It makes a substantial dish. Rice and okra may be substituted for potatoes and carrots, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture, indeed almost any vegetables may be used with or in place of those mentioned.

4 potatoes
3 carrots
3 onions
1 pint canned tomatoes
2 teaspoonfuls salt
2 tablespoonfuls fat, or a piece of salt pork
3 level tablespoonfuls flour
2 cupfuls skim milk

Cut potatoes and carrots in small pieces, add enough water to cover, and cook for 20 minutes. Do not drain off the water. Brown the chopped onions in the fat for five minutes. Add this and the tomatoes to the vegetables. Heat to boiling, add two cups of skim milk, and thicken with flour. Celery tops or green peppers give a good flavor to the chowder if you happen to have them, so do finely chopped chives.

Creamed Peanuts and Rice

The United States Department of Agriculture recommends the following dish for a change. It can be easily and quickly made when boiled rice is on hand.

1 cupful rice (uncooked)
2 cupfuls chopped peanuts
½ teaspoonful paprika
2 teaspoonfuls salt
3 tablespoonfuls flour
3 tablespoonfuls fat
3 cupfuls milk (whole or skim)

Boil rice. Make white sauce by mixing flour in melted fat and mixing with milk. Stir over fire until it thickens. Mix rice, peanuts and seasoning with sauce, place in greased baking dish and bake for 20 minutes.

PRODUCE AND CARE FOR MILK PRODUCTS

Cleanliness Will Help Quality and Flavor.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Milk and cream are among the most perishable and easily contaminated of all foods, and since they are often served uncooked, they may be a menace to health unless produced and handled in a cleanly way. Milk produced for home use on the farm deserves as careful attention as it would receive in a first-class dairy. Cleanliness in milking, the use of sterilized utensils, prompt straining and cooling of the milk, and keeping it at a temperature of 50 degrees F. or less if possible, in a place free from odors, dust, and flies will bring large returns in quality and flavor and consequently in family well-being. The indifference or aversion of farm children to milk has been traced in many cases to the fact that milk smells and tastes of the cow, the stable, and of poorly washed utensils.

The proper care of milk, butter and cheese is very important. It is discussed in a new Farmers' Bulletin 1374, Care of Food in the Home, which may be obtained by applying to the United States Department of Agriculture.

Milk bought from a dairy is best kept until used in the bottles in which it is delivered. They should be brought indoors as soon as possible after delivery, washed, and placed in the refrigerator or other storage place where the temperature is 50 degrees F. or preferably less. In washing, special attention should be given to the mouth of the bottle and the cap. Even a temporary rise in the temperature of milk aids the development of bacteria.

Butter should be kept cold and in a covered container that excludes light and prevents the absorption of foreign flavors. Creamery print butter keeps well in the cartons in which it is marketed. Butter purchased in bulk should be rinsed off with cold water to remove any drops of buttermilk which may have come to the surface and may then be wrapped in several thicknesses of cheesecloth wet in weak brine.

Cheese of any kind is especially susceptible to mold, but it can be protected to some degree by keeping it cool and well wrapped in waxed paper. Soft cheeses should be left in their original containers until used. The odor of cheese is so penetrating that it should be kept in a tight container if stored near butter, eggs, or other foods likely to be flavored by it.

One Most Satisfactory Way for Coddling Eggs

Many means have been suggested for cooking eggs in such a way that the yolks will be cooked and the whites will not be overcooked. One of the most satisfactory is by coddling, which is done as follows: Allow a cupful of water to each egg, bring the water to the boiling point, remove it from the fire, put in the eggs, cover the dish closely and leave the eggs in the water for about seven minutes. There is some uncertainty about this method, for eggs differ in weight and also in temperature at the time the cooking begins. On the whole, the best results can be obtained by pouring hot water over eggs, if the same dish with the same amount of water is always used, but each cook must make her own rules.

Georgia Lady, Who Had Lost Too Much Weight, Was Advised to Take Cardui and Is Now Well.

Columbus, Ga. — Mrs. George S. Hunter, of 17 North Columbus, was relieved of great pain and suffering by following the advice of her mother, who knew, from her own experience, of the value of Cardui.

"After I married, thirteen months ago," writes Mrs. Hunter, "I suffered with dreadful pains in my sides during . . . My side hurt so bad it nearly killed me. I had to go to bed and stay sometimes two weeks at a time. I could not work and I just dragged around the house. . . .

"I got very thin—I went from 126 pounds down to less than 100. My mother had long been a user of Cardui and she knew what a good medicine it was for this trouble, so she told me to get some and take it. I sent to the store after it and before I had taken the first bottle I began to improve.

"My side hurt less, and I began to improve in health. . . . The Cardui acted as a fine tonic and I do not feel like the same person. I am so much better. I am well now. I have gained ten pounds and am still gaining. My sides do not trouble me at all. . . .

"I wish every suffering woman knew about Cardui."

Challenges Rio Grande.—

The First National Bank of Guntersville in an advertisement last week said "Marshall County Challenges Rio Grande."

The basis for the challenge was the fact that a Marshall county farmer had sold one day's packing of strawberries from five acres for $478.80, a net profit of over $80 an acre. "Come on, Rio Grande Hot Air Artist," says the bank, "and show us when any Rio Grande land has ever paid $80 per acre net profit daily." The farmers of Marshall county never tried growing strawberries before this year. They are wonderfully pleased with their success so far.

The Reporter believes that the lands of Shelby county can grow strawberries and various other crops just as well as they can be grown in Marshall, Cullman and other counties.

Blount County Banks Announce New Policy.—

For some time the three banks of Onconta, Blount county, have been running a joint advertisement calling attention to various methods that might be adopted on the farms that could tend to increase the prosperity of that county and make for greater prosperity for the individual farmer as well.

As unusual as that is, there is something still more unusual about this advertising by the banks of Blount county. In every advertisement occurs this statement, printed in bold type:

"To The Farmers of Blount County:

"Having the best interest of Blount county at heart and knowing that your interest is our interest, and that Blount county is not prospering as it should, we, the undersigned banks have decided that our policy in the future will be to refuse to loan money to farmers to buy feed after the year of our Lord 1924—

"Because we have learned that farmers who never buy feedstuff are out of debt and have money in the bank."

Automobile Facts—

The Montgomery Advertiser gives out some interesting information about automobiles in Alabama as obtained from a study of the state tax commission.

There are 135,339 automobiles in use in Alabama, the total value of which is given at $38,651,850, an average value of $250 per car.

It takes $20,000,000 to pay for the gasoline used by the cars in Alabama in one year. The average amount of gasoline used by each car in one year is 671 gallons at a cost of $169.

Counting gasoline costs, depreciation, repairs and tires, taxes and licenses the total cost of running automobiles in Alabama each year is $45,592,398, an average for each car of $344.

The average automobile in Alabama runs 8,042 miles in one year.

A BETTER PLAN FOR MARKETING EGGS

(By Mrs. J. F. Pope)

People who sell chickens and eggs must get some aid or they must get down and out. The price of feed continues to soar, yet chickens and eggs are a drug on the market at this season of the year. The price should be stabilized

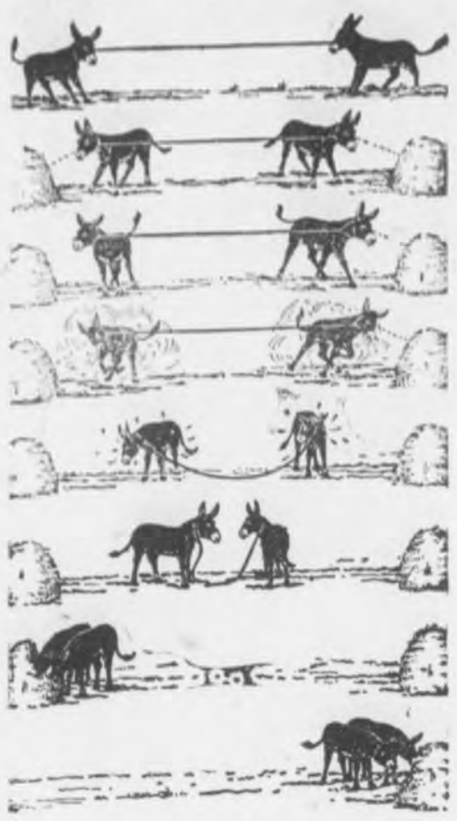
One or two working together cannot accomplish much in establishing the price, but a whole community organized in a business like way can make the buyer sit up and take notice.

Alabama is organizing a co-operative egg marketing association. This plan has been carried out very successfully in other states, why not in Alabama? Why not in Shelby county? We can if we work together. At present, we are not getting cost for eggs, why not try a different plan?

Everyone inerested should attend the Poultry Meeting at Wilsonville, Saturday, June 7, at 3:00 p. m. We want to have the first egg marketing center in Shelby county located in Wilsonville.

Come out and let us learn how to organize. Our chickens and eggs may bring in more money than cotton.

EVEN AS YOU AND I.



Two fool Jackasses say: Get this dope,
We're tied together with a piece of rope.
Said one to the other, "You may come my way
While I take a nibble at the new mown hay."

"I won't," said the other. "You come with me.
For I too, have some hay, you see."
So they got nowhere, just pawed the dirt.
And, oh, by golly! that rope did hurt.

Then they faced about, these stubborn mules,
And said, "We're just like human fools,
Let's pull together; I'll go your way,
Then you come with me, and we'll both eat hay.

Well, they ate their hay, and liked it, too,
And swore to be comrades, good and true.
As the sun went down they were heard to bray,
"Ah! This is the end of a perfect day."

Now, get this lesson, don't let it pass:
All men can copy from the poor jackass,
By pulling together, 'tis the only way
To put yourself on the map to stay.

—Of A "Fair Return"

The Transportation Act of 1920 permits a rate of return on the value of the railroads' properties of 5½%. However, in no year since the Act became effective, on September 1, 1920, have the railroads earned anything like the amount contemplated or permitted therein.

The following statement, compiled by the Bureau of Railway Economics, shows the amount of money the American railroads were entitled to earn under the Transportation Act; the amount and the rate they actually did earn; and the shortage of the so-called "fair return:"

Period	Permit'd to Earn	Did Earn	Shortage	Rate
4 mos. 1920	$ 426,417,120	$ 220,583,878	$ 205,833,242	3.10%
Year 1921	1,106,297,080	615,948,614	492,351,466	3.33%
Year 1922	1,084,806,293	776,665,960	308,140,333	4.14%
Year 1923	1,102,871,932	977,543,590	125,028,342	5.10%
40 Months	$3,723,092,425	$2,590,739,042	$1,131,353,383	4.08%

Note that during the 40 months in which the Transportation Act has been in effect, the railroads have earned only 4% on the value of their properties; and that there was a shortage under the so-called "fair return" of $1,131,353,383.

The reader's attention is called to the fact that the Transportation Act permits, but does not guarantee, the "fair return." If the real earnings of the railroads were guaranteed by the Government, the carriers would now have a sizeable bill of over one billion dollars to present to Uncle Sam.

Left alone and given the opportunity to work out their own destinies under the Transportation Act, the railroads will solve their problems; but further tinkering with railroad legislation is bound to be destructive to the unsurpassed service they are now giving.

Give the Transportation Act a chance to make good; give the railroads a chance to continue to make good—and the Nation will prosper accordingly.

Drinking Toast Dates Back to Pagan Times

Just as nutmeg, spices and so on are still—sometimes—put into such a drink as "punch," so in the olden days a common custom was to slip a mite of toasted bread into a glass of ale with the idea that the taste was thereby improved. And so it came about that a drink was called a toast.

The custom of drinking to someone really dates from the old pagan days when sacrifices used to be made to the gods. Later on an offering of wine was made instead, its red color typifying the actual blood of the real sacrifice. Later still men made their offerings not to the gods but in honor of a friend. So our ancestors would drink a glass or toast in honor of someone, and the person honored was as often as not called a toast for short.

Stone-Age Men in Africa

Sir Harry Johnston tells of a tribe in Venya, South Africa, who wander among dense forests and game-haunted wilderness. "The tribe, the Andoroboro, reproduces in a most striking manner the life which we may suppose to have been led by our far-away ancestors in the earliest Stone Ages," he says. "They lead, in fact, very much the life that the most primitive types of man led in Great Britain and France in the far back days of big animals, possibly before the coming of the glacial periods.

"They live entirely by the chase, often consuming the flesh of birds and beasts uncooked. Though they commit considerable devastation among the game of the province, they are a picturesque feature when encountered."—Detroit News.

Mystery in Turkey's Name

Tradition has it that the first turkey was brought to England by one of Sebastian Cabot's chief lieutenants. This is supported by the fact that William Strickland, who accompanied Cabot on several of his voyages, adopted a turkey rampant as his crest on being granted arms in 1551.

Exactly how the turkey got his name is a mystery. Some authorities suggest that the bird christened itself by constant reiteration of a sound that resembles "turk-turk-turk."

The bird's succulent meat was so highly esteemed by Sixteenth century churchmen, that by Archbishop Cranmer's order, only "one dish of turkey cocks" was permitted at feasts and banquets.—Detroit News.

For the Radio Fan

What has radio got to do with foreign trade? When you listen in for news or amusement, speeding from broadcasting stations, remember that you could not listen in, nor broadcasting be, but for six imported materials in radio instruments: mahogany from St. Jago, South America; rubber from Brazil or the Far East; platinum from the Ural mountains, Russia; glass derived from nitrates procured in Chile and Germany; silk from China and Japan; and mica from the mines of India.—National Foreign Trade Council Bulletin.

IN MEMORY OF "AUNT JANE" DAVIS

On the morning of May the 5th, the Death Angel visited the home of Mrs. Emma Farmer and claimed her beloved mother, Mrs. J. K. Davis, better known as "Aunt Jane." She was a few days over 81 years old. She was Miss Jane Rush before she was married to "Uncle Joe" in her early youth. Uncle Joe preceded her about 7 years ago.

Aunt Jane's home was with her son W. M. Davis, but she had been to visit her daughter Mrs. Farmer and was taken sick there. She was sick only a few days and her death was unexpected to many.

Aunt Jane was united to the Baptist church while in her youth, and lived a sweet devoted Christian all her life and set a good examples for all to follow. She had a kind and gentle word for every one, spoken with a smile.

When our community lost "Grandma" as she was often called, it lost its oldest and sweetest one in our midst. Aunt Jane will not be forgotten. No! no! her kind acts and deeds andlife will live on in the hearts and minds of those who loved and cherished her.

She isn't dead but only sleeping in the arms of Jesus, there to await the Resurrection morn.

Sleep on, dear, sainted friend. So long as we shall live we shall enjoy the sweet bright hope of meeting you again in the land where death and farewells are no more; where sin, sickness and sorrow are felt by no man.

I would say to to her bereaved ones, weep not as those who have no hope, but look to our Heavenly Father from whom all blessings come. Let us say O, Lord thy will be done and not ours. The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be His name.

I know it is sad to give our loved ones up who have been so dear to us, and comforted us in our sorrows and griefs; but God knows and does all things best. So her sweet spirit took its flight back to God who gave and to enjoy the rest that comes to those who do the will of God.

Let us all hope and pray that we may meet Aunt Jane beyond this vale of sorrow.

Esther Archer.

Mrs. Beulah Mahan

Wilton, Ala. May 19.

On April 29th, 1924, the death angel came over into our community and took from our midst our friend and loved one, Mrs. Beulah Mahan. She was a favorite among us all. She was a lover of home and a friend to all. Those who knew her best, loved her best. Her children and many friends miss her sadly.

The funeral was conducted from the Baptist church at Wilton, of which she was a member, by Rev. R. L. Durant, of Columbiana. The floral offerings were beautiful. She is survived by the following children: Mrs. V. L. Hubbard, Mrs Jim Splawn and Mr. Stanley Mahan of Wilton; Mr. Jesse Mahan, of ElPaso, Tex., Mr. Carey Mahan of British Honduras, and Mr. Allen Mahan, of Selma, Miss Kate Mahan of St. Louis, Miss Lucile Mahan of Philadelphia and Miss Ada Mahan of Birmingham. All were present at her funeral except three.

We love to speak of our friend and her greatness, and her goodness we like to recall, of a mind most resplendent and loyal of a heart filled with patience and love, of a soul set on fire with an innate desire to obey every call from above.

Not a call ever came from a friend to which she did not respond gladly, and then came the last call from the Father of all. She was ready for Heaven beyond.

A story of thrill and charm, dealing with a present-day section of the Canadian West that still retains a number of frontier characteristics. It brings us into intimate acquaintance with a typical, attractive daughter of the region. The principal male character is very unusual to western fiction—an easterner who brought some startling, but none the less interesting, ideas into a new country.

The story is strong and absorbing, and its people are living and endearing; a tale that will appeal straight to men and women today.

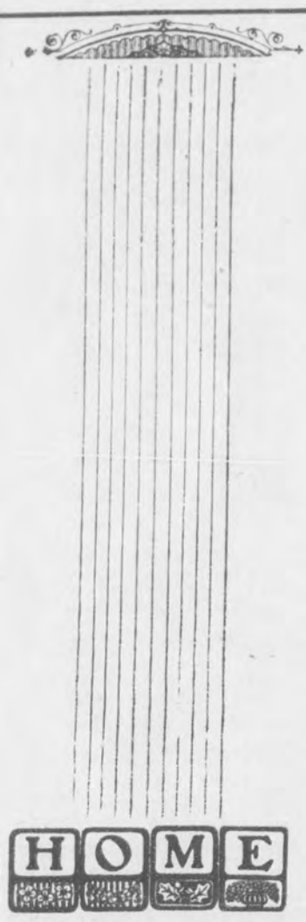
TRADE-AT-HOME CAMPAIGN!

THE SHELBY COUNTY REPORTER

Proposes to undertake, in co-operation with the business men of Shelby County, a County-Wide

Trade at Home Campaign

Every business man in Shelby County knows that thousands of dollars go out from the county every year for merchandise that could be bought just as cheap at the home Store.



The money that is sent away to distant stores never comes back. The mail order merchant pays no local taxes. None of the money that is sent away helps to build and maintain roads. Not a dollar of the money sent to the distant mail order store ever comes back to help support schools and churches for the people of Shelby county. On the other hand, the local merchant is our neighbor. He knows us and he knows the members of our families. The money we spend with him stays at home. He pays taxes. A part of every dollar we spend with the home merchant comes back to us in taxes that build and maintain our roads and help to run our schools. The Reporter believes that if the attention of our people is called to these things that more thought will be given to them. As a natural result our people gradually will come to appreciate the many advantages of

SICK WOMAN MADE HAPPY

Entirely Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mart, Texas.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to build me up as I was all run-down, nervous and sick. I ached and hurt all over so that I was often compelled to go to bed, and I had to have most of my work done. No medicine seemed to help me until one of my neighbors who was taking the Vegetable Compound insisted on me trying a bottle of it. The medicine helped me from the first, and the best of all is that I can even sew again without that awful, nervous feeling I was used to having. And I used to take crying spells, with such a blue feeling that I cannot explain. Now all that has left me. I feel so cheerful, and I have gained in weight, sleep well and eat hearty. Oh! I wish I had words to express what this medicine has done for me! I am a housekeeper and do everything from the sewing to the washing now and it doesn't hurt me. You may use my letter in any way you wish. I will be glad to help any suffering woman to the road of health and happiness."—Mrs. B. F. BRANNON, 404 Travis Ave., Mart, Texas.

A Similarity

"Well, sir, I was reading last night about a feller, over there in Europe, somers, that held his hand in the flame of a lamp until it was burnt off," related Tobe Sagg of Sandy Mush. "He didn't flinch nor change expression while it was burning, neither."

"H'm!" returned the acquaintance addressed. "That's just the way I do when my wife gives me a raking—hold still and don't flinch. If she seed it hurt she would go right on for half the night."

BIG ULCER ALL HEALED

"Here is another letter that makes me happy," says Peterson, of Buffalo. "One that I would rather have than a thousand dollars.

"Money isn't everything in this world. There is many a big-hearted, rich man who would give all he has on earth to be able to produce a remedy with such mighty healing power as Peterson's Ointment, to sell at all druggists for 60 cents a large box."

Dear Sirs:—

"I was an untold sufferer from old running sore and ulcers. I had tried most everything without any relief from pain. A friend told me of your wonderful ointment and the first box took away the pain that had not left me before in years, and after using just nine dollars' worth of the salve I am cured. The ulcer was 9 inches by 6½ inches, is all healed and I can walk. Never, never will I be without Peterson's again.

"You may use this to recommend your ointment, if you wish. I cannot say enough to praise it. Yours truly, Mrs. Albert Southcott, Lyndonville, N. Y." Mail orders filled by Peterson Ointment Co., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

"OLD MISS," PLANTATION MANAGER

Miss Effie Moncure and I, friends of a half hour, were lunching on shrimps and rice. It was a quaint little restaurant, not to be duplicated in any metropolis. Neither are shrimps and rice, cooked as these were cooked, to be duplicated outside of Dixieland—or of Shreveport, for all I know. Certainly Miss Moncure is unique in her "side line."

"I'll have to get back to work fairly early," she suddenly said. "My black folks come in for supplies this afternoon." Therein lay a romance of the feudal age. But the lord of the castle had become a lady! And the lady was the pretty young person who had introduced herself merely as "an average private secretary."

A leading lawyer of this Louisiana town is also, by inheritance, a planter. His acres are planted to cotton, cultivated on shares. Each of his fifteen negro families has 20 acres. The sharing scheme has become hereditary, a voluntary serfdom. The preacher, for instance, is son of five generations of negro preachers born on the same soil, illiterate and perpetually in debt to the current generation of owners. "Wildcat," a negro of recent literary fame, grew up, Miss Moncure says, on "her place."

When the owner had to go West for his health, she inherited his oversight of the place. Last year, despite floods, replanting and low prices, she managed to make the rent and a $3,000 profit as against no rent and a $2,000 deficit before she took charge. She has to advance supplies of every sort for the full year in the proportion these childlike negroes need, not want; see that enough corn and alfalfa are raised for stock and that all work steadily. She has to share all their joys and sorrows, yet retain their respect. Their nickname, "Old Miss," applied to her under-thirty self, is the final proof of their devotion and trust in her, Shreveport folk say.

That Miss Moncure has personality goes without saying. She is the first woman of her family to work outside her home. Her grandmother was "the earliest white woman settler on the last river bank along the Texas trail" and thus a founder of the oldest family of Shreveport. Miss Moncure, to become a stenographer, made sure she could "spell, translate French law, and look up authorities," and thus took herself outside the mediocre class before she started.

She believes that by staying in the smaller place a woman has "a better chance of becoming known in business, and retains the social position which means good times."

THE TOP OF THE POST OFFICE LADDER

The highest-paid woman in the United States postal service makes $6,000 a year. As a matter of fact only five men postmasters in the country receive more than Elizabeth Barnard, mistress of the Tampa (Fla.) office.

Married at eighteen, her soldier husband left her a widow six years later with two children, no income and no notion of what she could do. The first job she could find consisted of weighing nails and measuring rope. For this she received all of $4 a week. Mornings, noons and nights she served boarders in her mother's home, racing back and forth between jobs until every ounce of endurance was stretched to match the will that drove her. There wasn't much left over for mothering her babies.

Somehow she found between-while minutes both at shop and home. Into these scattered scraps of leisure she poked a correspondence course in shorthand. Stenographer Barnard more than tripled the income of Clerk Barnard; she went on Uncle Sam's pay roll at what seemed to her the princely sum of $600 per annum.

Sixteen years in the Tampa post office have found her moving up the ladder rung by rung. There isn't an assignment in the service that she hasn't held down and made good on, it is said. There is a tradition that she is the only woman entrusted with the "man's job" of assistant superintendent of mails.

"Perhaps willingness to serve, absolute loyalty and attending to my duties to the exclusion of outside influences, explain my promotion," she said recently in the Independent Woman. "Then I discovered a long time ago that when I can say 'Leave this to me—you needn't bother with it further,' the average 'boss' is gratified."

Politically, her appointment by Mr. Harding last January proved interesting to many people in both major parties. Florida is a Southern, and therefore normally Democratic, state, but recent population growth has come largely from Republican sections.

Knitted Jacquette Effects; Fashion's Neckwear Story

MILADY of fashion is growing very fastidious in regard to sweater modes. Just a mere knitted utility sweater does not suffice. There must be certain marks of distinction to accent the chic of her sweater, or knitted jacquette, if you please. It is the pleasure of her capricious ladyship to pick new and ingenious tyings, fastenings, collars, cuffs, bindings.

A model especially appealing to discriminating followers of fashion is the knitted jacquette with a long, graceful revers collar, which has rounded corners simulating the mannish tuxedo dinner jacket. The picture illustrates a charming version of this vogue. The original jacquette, photographed, exploited the new rust shade, fiber silk and mohair being interknitted. The irregular checked-front is in tones of canary, rose and black. Its long, modish collar gives it the prestige of the last word in style interpretation.

To the lace and lingerie jabot and frilled-front underblouse there is something irresistibly inviting about this knitted jacquette, with its almost waist-deep collar opening. This is one of the several reasons why this new sweater model is enjoying such widespread popularity.

A word about the color of our sweaters this season. Never in the annals of approved fashion has color been more spirited than now. There's the fascination in our sweaters and scarfs for this summer of flashy gypsy yellows, reds and blues, gay Roman stripes, handsome plaids and almost unbelievably bold intermingling of high tones. Nor does this suggest that conservative suit shades and pastels are not in vogue; indeed, they are, but there is undoubtedly an era ushered in for colors just as bright as one has the courage to wear them.

Illustrative of color vivacity is a slip-on with horizontal stripes traversing it from neck to hip edge, frankly bizarre in yellows, greens, reds and blues, climaxed with a plain knitted border of bright orange. The combination sounds impossible, but somehow the artistry of the designer achieves these effects in a manner thoroughly acceptable to even the hitherto color skeptic.

The idea of bordering fancifully patterned and gaily-colored sweaters and frocks, with plain knit in solid shades, is one that runs throughout the styling of knitted outerwear this season.

Fashion has written a brief but intensely interesting story of summer neckwear in which the scarf of figured silk, georgette, chiffon, silk fiber or wool has the grand role. But there is a fine little company with it—novelties in neckwear and revivals of old favorites in new guise.

Fox fur is important and seems to be established as a part of summer modes. It appears in the lighter tones of beige, gray, sand, brown, orange and in white. The light colors are worn with tailored suits, also in light colors. White scarfs are liked with black suits and will play their usual part with light summer dresses. The full, long ostrich feather boa is a revival in neckwear shown in many beautiful colors and is a new aspirant for favor. White fox and ermine furnish the collars for handsome coats of black crepe or satin.

Collar and cuff sets find themselves in demand for wear with one-piece frocks of silk crepe or wool. They include sets of white organdie with narrow borders of colored organdie hemstitched on, lace sets, collar and cuffs of cream-colored net with picot edges and bands of heavy lace beading that carry narrow black ribbon. There are also collar and bib sets of tucked net with filet lace insertions, and sets with bib at the front and very small short cape at the back. Ecru chiffon, trimmed with narrow val lace, appears in collars.

The vogue of tailored suits has brought in neckwear for wear with them and much attention is given to collar and vestee pieces to be worn under the coat instead of a blouse. These are shown in pongee or cotton broadcloth, with collars of colored linen in colors. Collars and jabots of lace attached to sleeveless waists of net are used for the same purpose. Strictly tailored blouses are mostly provided with round plain collars, but there are some models with high turnover collars. Four-in-hand and scarf ties come in the wake of these collars and even the stock collar finds some admirers.

EZEKIEL ENCOURAGES THE EXILES

LESSON TEXT—Ezek. 34:1-30.

GOLDEN TEXT—"I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away."—Ezek. 34:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Ezekiel Preaching to the Exiles.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Lord Seeking His Scattered People.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Ezekiel's Mission to the Exiles.

Ezekiel prophesied in the land of captivity. The latter part of Jeremiah's ministry was contemporaneous with that of Ezekiel. The purpose of his ministry was:

1. To Keep Before the Minds of the Captives That They Were In Captivity Because of the Sins of the Nation (Ezek. 14:23).

2. To Show That God Was Righteous in His Visitation of Judgment Upon Them (Ezek. 7:8, 9).

3. To Sustain Their Faith by Assuring Them of Their National Restoration, the Punishment of Their Enemies and the Final Exalted Place of Israel Among the Nations When Messiah Should Reign (Ezek. 34:20-31).

I. Indictment of the False Shepherds (vv. 1-19).

Israel's ruined condition resulted from the failure of the rulers to properly care for the people of Israel, God's sheep. Their sin was that:

1. They Exploited the People Instead of Shepherding Them (vv. 1-3). The shepherds were appointed to feed the flock but instead of that they fed themselves, even devouring the sheep and clothing themselves with the wool thereof.

2. They Failed to Minister to the Sick, the Diseased and Wounded (v. 4). It is not enough that the shepherds refrain from doing evil to the sheep. They are expected to strengthen the weak and bind up the wounds of those that have been injured.

3. They Did Not Search Out the Lost Sheep (vv. 5-9). Sheep left to themselves wander away. The sheep are not expected to look after themselves but to be cared for by the shepherd. In their scattered condition they became the prey of wild beasts. None sought after them though they had wandered through the mountains and over the hills.

4. The Lord Held the Priests and Rulers of Israel Responsible for This Condition (v. 10). The Lord always holds those responsible who have been set over his children.

II. Israel to Be Restored (vv. 11-22).

Though the rulers have so wretchedly failed, the almighty God will come to the rescue of His people.

1. He Will Search and Seek Them Out (vv. 11, 12). Though Israel be scattered throughout the nations, the divine shepherd will deliver them from every place where they have been scattered.

2. Will Bring Them Into Their Own Land (v. 13). This was partly fulfilled in the return of the remnant under Ezra and Nehemiah, but the real fulfillment awaits the future.

3. Will Feed Them (vv. 13, 14). He will not only satisfy them with food. He will cause them to lie down in perfect contentment and security (vv. 14, 15).

4. Shall No More Be a Prey (v. 22). Though God's chosen people have been scattered through the mountains and over the hills of the nations and have been a prey to the rapacious greed of the many nations, God will one day deliver his sheep and will judge the false shepherds.

III. The Coming Good Shepherd (vv. 23-31).

The instrument through which this great deliverance is to be wrought is the Messiah Himself.

1. He Will Make a Covenant of Peace (v. 25). This condition of peace will be brought about by the presence of the Lord among them. The world and Israel will only know actual peace when the Prince of Peace shall come and rule over the whole earth.

2. Evil Beasts Removed (v. 25). The redemption which awaits Israel and the world will not only affect God's children and their rulers but will bring about peace even among the animals, so that His children can sleep in peace and quiet even in the woods.

3. Showers of Blessing Come Down (v. 26).

God's chosen people shall be a blessing to the world, according to His original purpose for them. When these blessings are poured out, it shall be known that they flow from Jesus Christ, the good Shepherd. The purpose of Israel's choice was that the world might be blessed through them (Gen. 12:1-3).

Profit in "Waste"

France is putting to use the seeds and skins of grapes, converting them into seed oil and seed cakes, in which form they find a ready sale. It is asserted that it makes a satisfactory substitute for castor oil in the lubrication of high-speed internal combustion engines, and that the cakes and silage of wine, residue, including both skins and seeds, are useful as stock feed. Last year a seed-crushing plant at Perpignan, Pyrences-Orientales, carried on profitable operations, and it is said that at least one additional factory of this kind will be placed in operation in the wine region.

DESERT of the EXODUS

Jebel Sufsa, Mountain of the Law.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Of all the deserts of the earth the one most read about undoubtedly is the desert of the Hebrew Exodus, the Sinai peninsula that lies between Egypt and Palestine; but its modern aspect is little known. As the crow flies, the distance from the north end of the Red sea, where the Children of Israel are supposed to have crossed, to Jerusalem, is only 200 miles; but the narrative of the wanderings in the wilderness indicates that paths were doubled many times and that the wanderers passed far beyond their objective before turning south again. The most crooked route that has been suggested measures perhaps 1,200 miles. It seems almost absurd, if one has read Biblical story casually, that the wanderers could have consumed 40 years—an average of 30 miles a year—making this journey. But a closer reading of the narrative discloses that the actual travel was accomplished in about two years and that 38 years were spent in camps near Mount Hor and Kadesh.

The Bible record is complete as to the route of the Exodus, but many fail to realize this because the history of the journey is scattered through six of the Old Testament books, the record changing back and forth from one place to another nearly 100 times.

In general it may be said that the first section of the route from Raamses to Sinai is known perfectly and the recovery of most of the ancient names simply a matter of time. The fourth and last section of the route from Elath, on the Gulf of Akabah, to Jericho is also well known, and it is of enchanting interest to note that on this section all the most prominent towns mentioned in the books of Exodus and Numbers retain their ancient names till this time.

Loop Section Little Known.

The loop section of the route from Ezion-geber into the Wilderness of the Wandering and back to Elath is the least well-explored portion. It contains the well-known names of Kadesh Barnea and Mount Hor, where Aaron died and was buried. Thirty-eight years of the journey were spent about Kadesh, and it is here, if anywhere, the actual remains of the Exodus will some day be found. The site of Kadesh Barnea has been made the subject of dispute, but it is almost certain that the modern Ain Kadis, with its copious spring, several wells and pools, is really the ancient Kadesh. An equally vigorous dispute still continues concerning the identification of Mount Hor.

The Peninsula of Sinai, within which lies the first two sections of the route, is that triangular region between the two arms of the northern end of the Red sea. A line drawn from Suez to Akabah, a little town at the head of the gulf of that name, a distance of 150 miles through the desert, forms the northern side of the triangle. The other two sides are bounded by the Gulf of Suez and the Gulf of Akabah. The Gulf of Suez, the longer arm, sweeping toward the southeast for a distance of about 200 miles, lies in the troughlike depression which separates Africa from Asia, and together with the Suez canal forms one of the greatest waterways of the earth. The other arm, the Gulf of Akabah, extends north by west for 140 miles, being a continuation of the most remarkable rift upon our planet, that of the Dead sea and the Jordan valley.

The area of this triangle, the peninsula proper, is a little less than 10,000 square miles. It is one vast desert relieved by a few oases along the seacoast and deep among the network of rocky valleys. In the north and along both seacoasts are vast stretches of sand which forever shift before the winds from land and sea. Further inward are stony plateaus and great wastes of sand glistening with salt.

Sinai Range Is Impressive.

But just south of the center of the peninsula, like a great lighthouse between the continents, rises the huge granite range of Sinai to a height of over 8,500 feet. The triple peaks of Serbal (6,730 feet), Musa (7,363 feet), and Catharine (8,536 feet) all lie within a circle whose diameter is not more than 25 miles. Geologically this mass of primeval gneiss and granite, or in more precise terminology, of colorless quartz, flesh-colored feldspar, green horneblende, and black slate, is a most impressive sight. Since remotest times these crystalline masses have undergone no geological changes, but have reared their summits above the ocean unaffected by the transitions that have so completely changed the face of the planet elsewhere.

Only at their bases do these mountains show any traces of alteration where the waves and the winds of the ages have crushed and ground their fadeless elements into the colored sands which filled the geological gulfs and bays of the Jordan rift and made possible the beauties of Petra and all that region. Rising majestically from the encircling setting of desert and sea, the whole mass is cleft and shattered into a fascinating tangle of sublime valleys, towering cliffs, awful precipices, and magnificent peaks which roll like billows far up into the crystalline blue of the heavens.

From Suez to Sinai.

The route from Suez to Sinai is a nine days' journey on camels. Travelers usually make a short half day to the Wells of Moses, the first oasis four hours beyond Suez. Then follows a waterless tract of three days' journey to Elim, with its wells of water and its palm trees.

Two days beyond Elim are the famous turquoise mines of Meghara, where the Egyptians mined as early as the Fourth Dynasty (2500 B. C.), more than 4,500 years ago, and left a curious collection of rock carvings and tablets which have been of priceless value in their bearing upon Egyptian chronology.

Two days beyond the mines lies the oasis of Firan, rightly designated The Pearl of Sinai," the most fertile tract and one of the most interesting spots in the whole peninsula.

Past Firan the road crosses a watershed at 3,900 feet and makes a slight descent before the last climb over Nagb el-Hawa to the Plain of er-Rahah, which most scholars have regarded as the camping place of the Israelites while waiting for the giving of the law. Here is the mountain which, according to the Bible, was enveloped in clouds and lightning reverberating with thunder, a mountain that could be touched, while Moses tarried on its summit and the people waited below.

Just to the left of this peak, Jebel Sufsa, is the valley of the Deir, in which stands the monastery of St. Catharine. This picturesque monastery standing in a sublime valley of the Sinai group occupies the site of a fort built by Emperor Justinian in 527 A. D. It is a hoary pile of old buildings, entirely enclosed by a high wall, on one side of which toward the mountain a few old rusty cannon still do sentinel duty. A lower wall encloses the adjoining delightful gardens which have been wrung by incessant toil from the rocky mountain side below. The fortress-monastery has witnessed many a thrilling event in history, has withstood many an attack and siege, and bears the marks inside and out of its stormy history.

The great shrine is Jebel Musa itself, the Mountain of the Law, which rises 2,350 feet above and behind the monastery. The pilgrimage steps, said to be 3,000 in number, are broken at many points, but still form an impressive ascent to the noble mountain top. There is a shrine to the Virgin Mary and a chapel to the Prophet Elijah on the way up.

Beyond Sinai, the route of the Exodus, within the peninsula, is fixed beyond peradventure by the configuration of the valleys, the one or two well-known locations and the water supply.

Turning out of Wady esh-Sheikh through a side valley one reaches a divide beyond which the country changes instantly. A wide plateau shows signs of vegetation, where graze hundreds of camels and thousands of sheep, lambs and she asses. The whole skyline takes on a softer, smoother look, and the sides and bases of the mountains lose the sharp, forbidding aspect of Sinai. Farther on is the oasis of Ain Hudherah where Aaron and Miriam spoke against Moses because he had married a Cushite woman.

Between Hazeroth and Ezion-geber lie the still unsolved portions of the problem and route of the Exodus. After reaching the shore of the Red sea, they turned northward, and for 38 years roamed about the neighborhood of Kadesh. Into this Wilderness of the Wandering explorers are now penetrating, and a few years hence we shall have as good maps and details of it as we have of the other sections of the route.

Wash and Jeff

Senator Walsh of Montana said in New York the other day:

"Warlike states hate one another because they see their own faults reflected in one another. It's like the Washington-Jefferson story.

"'Look-a-yere,' said Washington, as he slammed his cards down on the table, 'dat's twice yo's called me, Jefferson! If yo' don't know no mo' dan to cornfuse me with dat bow-legged, flat-footed, hard-lipped no 'count colored man, Jefferson, why, we'll stop de game right now!'

"'Ah axes yere pardon, Washington,' said the other player. 'Ah sure axes yere pardon, sah. Don't go and draw yere shooter on me same as Jefferson done 'tother evenin' when Ah called him Washington by mistake. Yo' two fellers ain't alike nohow 'ceptin' in yere looks and gin'ral characterizations.'"—Detroit Free Press.

More Economical In Every Way

YOU'LL never know how many steps or how much time you can save by using self-rising flour until you try it. A heaping plate of delicious biscuits, a light wholesome cake, or a pan of golden muffins all ready to serve in the time it takes to prepare coffee!

"I use self-rising flour because it is much more economical in every way. It requires less lard and takes less time to bake with it---all the rising ingredients have already been mixed," writes Mrs. J. of Leland, Louisiana.

Self-rising flour provides a new way to make old familiar dishes wholesome and tempting. Baking experts recommend it heartily. For high food value it is excelled by no other flour. Try it---test it. Ask your grocer for self-rising flour that carries the Blue Shield on the bag. It complies fully with all pure food laws.

CONDITIONS AT ALABAMA COLLEGE CROWDED SAYS DEAN O. C. CARMICHAEL.

Montevallo, Ala.—No state in the United States has experienced the phenominal growth that Alabama has in high school education and the corresponding demand for higher education, according to figures recently compiled by the Alabama College Million Dollar drive committee at Montevallo. Dean O. C. Carmichael, chairman of the drive, estimated that the demand has increased within the last twelve years by at least one thousand per cent. He believes that it will continue to increase just as rapidly if facilities for its increase are provided during the next twelve years. Already the state has provided for a portion of this growth in the colleges for men and it will have provided similarly for the women when the million dollar drive is completed.

O. C. CARMICHAEL,
Dean of Alabama College, Montevallo, who is heading the Million Dollar Campaign. Dr. Carmichael has been temporarily relieved of his official duties to devote his entire time to this work.

The increase of students in accredited high schools in Alabama has been practically one thousand per cent according to Dean Carmichael, the number of schools operating having increased from a paltry twenty less than twenty years ago to two hundred and ten. In the last ten years the number of students attending the three state colleges, Alabama, Auburn and the University has increased three hundred per cent.

There were graduated from state high schools five thousand boys and girls in 1923. If the rate of increase keeps throughout the next four years there will be ten thousand graduates in 1927. Ten thousand graduates in 1927, of which more than half are girls, will have to depend largely on the educational opportunities provided by their state.

"Provision has been made for the boys, to an extent, but what of the girls?" said Dean Carmichael. "Alabama has only one college devoted to the interests of feminine education and that one has room for only 650 students if they are crowded in. The need is distressing. The demand in three years will be overwhelming.

Twelve years ago there were seventy-five young women doing college work in state colleges. This year there are one thousand, 650 of them in Alabama College at Montevallo, according to Dean Carmichael. Alabama College increased sixty-five per cent in the number of college students attending in one year. The dean believes that they could increase one hundred per cent next year if they had the facilities to house and teach the girls.

Last year the citizens of Montevallo built a temporary dormitory to house sixty girls. The teachers gave up their rooms in the dormitory and went to live in town in order that more girls might get in.

"Next year if the increase continues at least three hundred young women will be asking for admission and they must be turned down," said Dean Carmichael. "They must be denied entrance because the state has not made provision for their higher training. What will the people do about it?"

REPUBLICANS NAMING PRESIDENT COOLIDGE

The Republican National Convention is in session this week at Cleveland, Ohio, having been opened Tuesday. It was a foregone conclusian that President Coolidge would be given the nomination for president and that the platform would be just the kind of document he desires on which to go before the people to ask their votes in November.

The only element of uncertainty, and the only thing that seemed in any way to promise a contest, was the choice of a candidate for the vice-presidency. Former Governor Lowden of Illinois, who was one of the leading candidates for president four years ago, seemed to have been agreed upon by a majority of the delegates, but he gave out a statement refusing to authorize the use of his name and stating that he would not accept the nomination if it were given to him. The next favorite seemed to be Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce in the cabinet.

One notable difference between this convention and that of four years ago in that of the powerful group of United States Senators who dominated the 1920 convention and who brought about the nomination of Warren G. Harding, not one was having anything to say or to do with the plans for the present gathering.

ALABAMA GRADUATES GET GOOD POSITIONS

Montevallo, Ala., June 9,—News has just reached Montevallo of the election of Miss Janice Fuquay of Alexander City, a recent graduate of the Alabama College school of Music at Montevallo, to the position of teacher of Piano in the State Normal College at Hattiesburg, Mississippi. This institution is noted for its very strong music departmen. Miss Fuquay made one of the highest records in music at Alabama College. She is well qualified to fill a position in any institution. The recognition of her by a college in another state is a high compliment to her and to the music school at Montevallo.

Another graduate of the class of 1924 has secured high recognition. Miss Annie Carmichael of Hollins, Clay county, has been appointed to the position of teacher of Home Economics in the State Normal School at Livingston. Miss Carmichael made an unusually high record in all branches of Home Economics. While in Montevallo, she was a distinct leader in all movements for the upbuilding of the student body.

Miss Ernestine Bonner, of Camden, has recently been elected to the position of music teacher in the high sechool at Union Springs. This town has always maintained a high standard in music teaching. The faculty at Montevallo believes that Miss Bonner will continue to maintain that high standard.

BIG DEVELOPMENTS BY POWER COMPANY

Announcement was made Monday by the general manager of the Alabama Power Company that six hydro-electric dams will be built on the Tallapoosa river at a cost of $39,000,000. One of these dams, that at Cherokee Bluffs, is already under construction and the whole plan is to be completed within 3 years.

The six dams to be built, together with two smaller dams already owned by the company, will provide a total installation of 450,000 horse power on the Tallapoosa river alone.

Rev. I. P. O. Horton

Rev. I. P. O. Horton (Iro Polaski Olin Horton) died at his home in the Fourmile community Monday after an illness of several weeks. He was 69 years old. The funeral was held Tuesday at the Poindexter cemetery, where Mr. Horton's parents were buried many years ago. The services were conducted by Rev. T. K. Roberts assisted by Rev. W. A. Mays and Rev. C. M. Nolen.

Mr. Horton belonged to one of the oldest and most prominent faamilies in Shelby county and he was one of the county's best citizens. He was born and reared in the Lester's chapel community and spent his whole life in this and adjoining Fourmile community. At the age of 15 he was converted and joined the Methodist church. Later he was licensed as a local preacher at a quarterly conference held in Columbiana and for 36 years he had served his church and his neighbors in this capacity.

Mr. Horton is survived by his wife, who was Miss Lucetta Crenshaw, three children and two brothers.

CALERA TO CELEBRATE THE GLORIOUS FOURTH

Calera is making great preparation for a big celebration of the Glorious Fourth. The Chamber of Commerce of Calera is back of the plans and it is their plan to make it a big day in every sense of the word. Some of the attractions announced are a free barbecue, aeroplane demonstration, K. K. K demonstration, fireworks, baseball games and singing. A new Ford touring car will be given away. The committee says there will be plenty to eat and all the attractions will be free. All Calera extends a cordial invitation to everyone to visit their city on that day.

Mr. Durant's Last Service Next Sunday

There will be preaching at the Baptist church in Columbiana next Sunday, June 15, at both the morning and evening hours, by the pastor, Rev. R. L. Durant. This will be Mr. Durant's last services in Columbiana; he will leave soon to take up his work in Birmingham.

Riddle to fix the value of lands included in the right of way for the proposed new road from Calera to Montevallo held its final hearing at the court house Monday. The board was made up of W. H. Templin, R 1, Columbiana; T. M. Sorrell, Harpersville; and E. H. Payne, Wilsonville.

THREATENED SPLIT IN ALABAMA DELEGATION

Already there seems to have developed a considerable difference of opinion as to what the delegation that is to represest Alabama Democrats in their national convention, is expected to do.

After agreeing that the delegates should be appointed by Governor B. B. Comer and Hon. A. M. Tunstall, Senator Underwood, in a letter to Mr. Tunstall, stated that he wants each member of the delegation certified to him for appointment to agree to four things as follows: 1, To vote for Senator Underwood as long as his name is before the convention. 2. To accept Mr. Underwood's position as to the enforcement of the prohibition amendment. 3. To agree to be bound by a majority vote of the delegation on all questions coming before the convention. 4. To sustain Mr. Underwood in the effort that he proposes to make to have inserted in the platform a plank opposing the Ku Klux Klan.

Governer Comer refused outright to exact any such agreement of the delegates appointed by him and has written a letter to each one in which he says the only pledge that, under the agreement with Senator Underwood can be asked of them is, that they will "vote for Senator Underwood, first last and all the time; and that they will oppose any change in the prohibition laws except to make them better. He says the unit rule and the anti-klan plank are matters which the people did not vote on, and on these matters each delegate is free to vote as he chooses. Mr Comer adds in his letter that he is not in favor of these things and would vote against them.

ALABAMA DELEGATES TO NAT'L CONVENTION

Alabama's delegates to the Democratic National Convention were appointed and announced last week.

Under the law that provided for the presidential preference primary, the delegates were to be appointed by Senator Underwood but under an agreement made just before the primary was held the power of appointment was given to former governor B. The meeting between Governor Comer and Mr. Tunstall at which the appointments were made, was held Wednesday of last week and the the Comer appointments were announced at once. EGG MARKETING ASSN GIVEN A GOOD START

A good start has been made toward the organization of an egg marketing association in Shelby county. Because of the large number of farmers in Wilsonville community already interested in raising chickens, the work was started there with a meeting at the school house Saturday afternoon.

Only a small group attended this meeting but the plan of the organization was explained and a few signed the marketing contract. On Monday and Tuesday County Agent Lauderdale followed up the work seeing personally a number who were not at the meeting and signing them up as members of the association. Mr. Lauderdale hopes to get contracts for not less than 2,000 hens in the Wilsonville community and he feels confident that it can be done with little more effort on the part of those interested.

Following the completion of the first unit of the Farm Bureau Egg Marketing Association for Shelby county at Wilsonville, a second unit will be organized at Columbiana. A meeting will be held at the court house Saturday afternoon, June 14, at which time the plans and purpose of the organization will be given. It is hoped that there may be a good attendance of men and women who are interested in seeing this new industry developed in Shelby county.

It is the plan of Mr. Lauderdale to undertake the work in Calera community next and a meeting will be held in Calera Saturday afternoon, June 21, for the benefit of all those who may be interested.

The following signatures to the egg marketing contract had been obtained by Tuesday night. Mrs. J. F.Pope, 125 hens, Mrs. J. L. Baker, 100 hens; Melvin Archer, 100 hens; Mrs. J. A. Sims, 100 hens; R. F. Lyon, 75 hens, Mrs. J. D. Baker, 75 hens; Mrs. W. J. Jackson, 75 hens; Mrs. Tera Stone, 75 hens; E. J. Spearman, 75 hens; P. M. Henderson, 50 hens; J. S. Jackson, 50 hens; Mrs. E. B. Ray, 50 hens; Mrs. G. E. Smith, 40 hens; Mrs. G. R. Stone, 35 hens; Mrs. J. N. Ray, 25 hens; W. S. Henderson, 20 hens. A total of over 1000 hens.

BOARD OF REVIEW HEARS TAX PAYERS

The Board of Review was in session at the court house three days last week to hear objections to the valuation of property in Districts 1 and 4. The membership of the board for these districts was made up of J. F. McGraw, W. D. Bearden and J. W. Shaw, members of the Board of Revenue; W. E. Harrison, county tax assessor and E. A. Turner, county tax agent.

This week the board is in session for three days to hear objections from property owners in Districts 2 and 3 with J. M. Frost and H. C. Hurst, members of the Board of Revenue, serving in the place of Mr. Bearden and Mr. Shaw

There will be a singing at Chapel the Fifth Sunday afternoon, instead of the Third Sunday. Everybody come.

100,000 HENS MINIMUM GOAL SET BY ALABAMA FARM BUREAU. FEDERATION WILL LIKELY BE EXCEEDED.

Montgomery.—Encouraging reports regarding the cooperative egg marketing campaign now in progress throughout Alabama have been received by Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation.

From Baldwin County, where the campaign was launched in advance of the state campaign, farmers and poultrymen owning 11,000 hens, have signed the contract. The quota assigned to Baldwin was 8,000 hens. In one week 10,000 hens were signed in Mobile County, where the quota was only 8,000. At a demonstration organization meeting at Red Level, 3,030 hens were assigned by 88 farmers in one day. Every poultryman present signed the contract.

Information received from Auburn by President O'Neal is that the campaign is getting under way throughout Alabama. District Agents W. D. Barton, W. O. Winston, E. E. Binford, and J. T. High, of the extension service, are directing it in their respective districts, and the campaign is either now in progress or will be shortly in each of the 58 Alabama counties having a county demonstration agent. The county farm bureaus are in charge, with the assistance of the county agents.

The minimum goal for the state is 100,000 hens, and President O'Neal is certain that this number will be greatly exceeded before the close of the charter membership campaign, July 15. In two counties and one community in another county almost one-fourth of the minimum goal has been reached, and in each instance the campaign is incomplete.

The new marketing association will be known as the Alabama Farm Bureau Poultry Association. It will market eggs only. It will be the third marketing association organized by the farm bureau—the other two being cotton and hay, which are now in their second year.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Good roads development in Walker County is progressing satisfactorily so far as the state and federal aid highway is concerned. The highway has been completed between Jasper and the Jefferson County line, but has not yet been accepted by the state. A few little places along that link of the highway need repair. This link connects Jasper and Birmingham with an all-the-year-round good road.

The supreme court reversed the Montgomery circuit court in the case of the damage suit brought by E. O Hall against the Seaboard Air Line railroad and the Orange Crush Bottling company, which was decided against Hall in the lower court. The case now goes back to the circuit court for another trial. Hall's suit was for $25,000 for damages which were alleged to have been sustained in a peculiar manner. He claimed that he was walking along a public road at a point where it intersected the Seaboard Air Line track, when a collision took place between a train and a truck, the respective property of the two defendants, with a result that Hall was struck by the truck. The lower court decided for the defendants, but the supreme court held that the trial judge erred in sustaining the defendants' demurrers and reversed the case.

Scouting in Attalla got under way with a rush when a dinner was held at the Tea Kettle Inn by members of the district committee. It was decided to hold similar meetings the first Tuesday in each month. The troop organization committee reported plans for the organization of a new troop in Attalla within a few days. It will be sponsored by O. D. DuPre, Wiley Alford, R. M. Henderson and Dr. C. B. Forman, prominent business men of the city.

One hundred and thirty anti-rabies serum treatments were sent to all sections of the state during the month of May, which is more than twice the usual number distributed in a similar length of time, according to Dr. L. Of the 130 treatments sent out, 87 were for treatment of indigent persons who had been bitten by or exposed to infection from rabid animals.

With the construction of the projects, it was said, the fullest practicable utilization of the river's power resources will have been attained by a combined installed capacity of 114,000 horsepower.

Potato Dumplings.

Sift together one and one-half cupfuls of flour, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt, three teaspoonfuls of softened butter, one half cupful of riced potato, one egg beaten light and three-fourths cupful of milk. Mix all the ingredients, roll in a sheet and cut in rounds. Set close in a buttered steamer and cook over water or heat fifteen minutes. Do not open the steamer during the boiling.

Afternoon Tea Cakes.

Beat two eggs until light, add one cupful of sugar, one-fourth of a pound of blanched almonds and two ounces of citron chopped very fine; add the grated rind of a lemon, one-fourth teaspoonful each of cloves, nutmeg, cinnamon, mace and cream of tartar and one and one-half cupfuls of pastry flour. Cool slightly, add one egg white beaten stiff, then add the pineapple and orange bits, chill. Serve in sherbet cups with a garnish of cream and chopped maraschino cherries.

Few people, rich or poor, make the most of what they possess. In their anxiety to increase the amount of means for future enjoyment they are apt to lose sight of their capability for the present.—Leigh Hunt.

RHUBARB IS IN SEASON

Rhubarb, or pie plant, is so commonly grown everywhere that it hardly needs any comment. It is especially good for us in the springtime and forms a fine base to combine with strawberries, raspberries and other mild fruits when canning time comes. To can two quarts of rhubarb with one quart of berries use sugar as usual; if it is liked rich, plenty of sugar; the fruit will be hard to tell from the entire berries when canned, as the rhubarb has a way of being swallowed up in the flavor of the more delicate fruit.

As canned, or conserve, or preserves, the two combine equally well.

Those who enjoy greens tell us that the addition of a few leaves of rhubarb adds much to the kettle of spinach or mustard and beet greens.

Rhubarb Conserve. — Take two pounds each of sugar and rhubarb, two oranges, one lemon, one-half a box of raisins—the seedless variety—one small pineapple and a cupful or two of nut meats. Cut up the rhubarb, add the sugar and set it away over night. Cut the orange and lemon into bits, excluding the seeds; cook with the raisins and rhubarb until thick; add the nuts just before taking off. Pour into glasses and seal when cold with paraffin.

Rhubarb Pie.—Cut the rhubarb into small pieces; do not peel, if tender, as the beautiful color lies in the skin. Fill the lined pie tin with the fruit; add a tablespoonful of flour, well mixed with one-half cupful or more of sugar; add bits of butter and a grating of nutmeg or the juice of an orange and a bit of the rind, if liked. Cover with top crust and bake in a moderate oven.

Served as a sauce for a supper or luncheon dish, stewed rhubarb is most tasty. Add the sugar when the fruit is cooked, as it takes less to sweeten.

Honey Tea Cakes.—Take one cupful of honey, one-half cupful of sour cream, two eggs, one-half cupful of butter, two cupfuls of flour, a scant one-half teaspoonful of soda and one teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Bake thirty minutes in a moderate oven.

Dance and Party Frocks; Latest Knitted Jumper

EVERY little frill, the broad ribbon sash, and the flaunting flare of the diaphanous georgette frock shown in the picture herewith seems to say "I'm going to a party." It is typical of the evening gowns which youth is wearing this season.

Valenciennes lace traverses the skirt in two-by-two rows and then does the same around neck and sleeve edge. There is a front panel in the skirt, of shirred net, which looks as if it might be an inspiration drawn from an old French print of some beauteous lady of the Louis XVI period. The frock is a faint peach shade, with the same color in deeper tone for the wide sash.

Ornate and Picturesque Party Frock.

As if to atone for the uncompromising severity of the boyish tailored suit types for the day, frivolities and furbelows abound to the extreme of indulgence on dance and party frocks.

Lovely indeed are the airy, fairy tulle dresses, with their billowy skirts and bodices quaintly decked with applique flowers. Pastel shades register particularly in these ingenue tulle frocks, but none are of greater charm than the all-white creations, so exquisitely girlish in their simplicity.

Dance frocks of youthful conception have long capes of georgette to match. Such was the lovely ensemble displayed in a recent salon exposition of modes for the younger folks. The gown of deep apricot georgette was trimmed in sheer silk lace dyed to match, the entire enveloped in a long straight cape of the same transparent crepe. This is but a foretaste of what we may expect in the way of entrancing effects this summer when this fashion is fully launched.

The idea of trimming chiffon or thin crepe frocks with lace the exact shade, dominates throughout the mode.

That the sweater is a supreme requisite throughout sports costume, we all agree. Perhaps it is more accurate to say sweaters rather than sweater, for of such attractive persuasion and infinite character are they, the well-ordered wardrobe includes them in the plural. Indeed, one is almost justified in coining a slogan "a sweater for every occasion," since they range from the most exquisitely filmy lacelike affairs to sturdy man-styled designs defiant of wind or weather.

Once a sweater always a sweater, holds good even though it appear in the guise of a jacquette, golf or mandarin coat, slip-on, tuxedo, jumper, sleeveless or long sleeved, or any other form of knitted outerwear style classification.

The sweater in the accompanying picture, according to modern translation, is a jumper, although you never would guess it at first glance, for it has every appearance of a jacquette of latest approved fashion. Fact is, however, it slips over the head, the deep opening extending to the wide hip border. Combining, as it does, the simplicity of a slip-on with the more formal aspect of a jacquette, this model is of twofold popularity. Its coloring, too, makes appeal, knitted as it is now in the new powder blue with rainbow striped border.

Colors for this summer's sweaters bear such interesting titles as honeydew, terrapin, strawberry, orange, tangarine, orchid, narcissus and the smartest new shades are American Beauty and fuchsia. In all fashiondom, particular stress is placed on gray, and this is especially true throughout knitted outerwear. The mode calls for gray sweaters, or gray predominates with color vagaries in the designing, these gray-knitted blouses worn with gray plaited skirts.

Knitted Jumper Simulates Jacquette.

Shetlands and Orkneys

One of the Stones of Stenness.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Shetland ponies are sure to be thought by most persons the principal product of the Shetland islands, such is the power of a name. As a matter of fact the Shetlands and their sister isles, the Orkneys, just to the south, are the seats of a great fishing industry; and ponies and cattle are merely raised as a side issue, just as shawls and stockings are knitted.

There is much of mystery about these northern outposts of Great Britain. Relics of an ancient race—presumably Picts—that inhabited the islands are numerous, but practically nothing is known of that race. The Romans called the Shetlands "Ultima Thule," roughly "the end of the earth," but recorded nothing worth while about the people of this ultimate spot. Briton and Scot seem to have been equally in ignorance of their near neighbors to the north during the early centuries.

What became of these supposedly Pictish inhabitants is a mystery, for when the Vikings swarmed down to the islands before the Tenth century they found no one to challenge them. So they took possession and set up an independent regime under Scandinavian earls. In 1098 these rulers became subject to the king of Norway, and the islands therefore became Norwegian possessions. Not until 1468 did the isles pass to the Scottish crown.

Kirkwall, the largest town of the Orkneys, the base of the American navy's mine-sweeping squadron which operated in the North sea in 1919, is a quaint place, and in ordinary times is quiet enough. A very narrow lane, called Bridge street, leads back from the steamship landing. It is paved with flagstones, and when a team passes the pedestrians have to stand close to the walls or enter the doorways.

Facing a broad plaza stands the Cathedral of St. Magnus, distinctly the "show-place" of the Orkneys. It is not remarkable so much for its length and breadth and height as for its fine state of preservation, despite its age. It was founded in 1136.

Where Hakon Died.

Across the street from the cathedral are the remains of the bishop's palace, a building with a large hall and a great round tower. The latter was built in 1540, but the hall is much older, for here Hakon, the last of the great sea-kings of Norway, died in 1263. This event occurred just after the battle of Largs, on the coast of Scotland, which, though a mere skirmish, was fateful because it gave to Scotland her first claim to the islands, resulting two centuries later in their annexation. Hakon, sick and weary, came to Kirkwall hoping to be restored to health by St. Magnus; but the saint did not intervene and Hakon's body was temporarily interred in the choir of the cathedral.

Stromness, the second town in importance, lies on the opposite side of the island from Kirkwall and is distinctly more picturesque. It stands on the slope of a hill, overlooking a beautiful harbor, and its single street twists and turns through it for about a mile.

Stromness was the home of John Gow, the famous pirate, whose career suggested to Sir Walter Scott the character of Cleveland in "The Pirate." Here also lived Bessie Millie, an old hag who sold "favoring winds" to the mariners and from whom Scott developed the idea of Norna of the Fitful Head. From the hill back of Stromness one may have a fine view of the Island of Hoy, the highest land in the Orkneys.

Ring of Stenness.

A most interesting feature of the islands is their huge stones apparently used in religious services like those found in Britain at Stonehenge. Separating the Locks of Stenness and Harray is a narrow neck of land, known as the Bridge of Brogar, at the southern entrance to which is a huge stone, 18 feet high, popularly designated as the "Watch Stone," or "Sentinel." In a field at the right are the remains of a circle of similar stones, not quite so large as the Watch Stone, in the midst of which is a rude table, or altar, made of three short stones standing on end, and surmounted by a large flat stone or slab. This is the Ring of Stenness, or the Circle of the Moon.

Across the bridge, a quarter of a mile away, is a larger group, properly designated as the Ring of Brogar, but commonly known as the Circle of the Sun. It is about 120 yards in diameter and was surrounded by a fosse or trench at least six feet deep, the outlines of which are distinctly traceable. The stones of this large circle are from 8 to 16 feet high; one is from 5 to 6 feet wide, and all are crude and irregular in shape.

Fifteen remain standing, although the group originally contained 30 or 40. They have a strange, shaggy covering of unusually long lichens, like an ancient sheep whose coat has become scraggly with age and exposure to the weather.

North of the Ring of Stenness was the famous Stone of Odin, which differed from the others chiefly in having a hole through it. The Stone of Odin was visited by Sir Walter Scott in 1814, and he made a romantic use of it in "The Pirate." In the same year a neighboring farmer broke it up, with several other stones from the Ring of Stenness, to build a foundation for his cow-house for which act of vandalism he was boycotted and driven out of the country.

There is nothing about the stones themselves that is wonderful. Anybody could erect similar circles with modern appliances. But these monuments were here when the Norsemen landed and were probably at least three centuries old even then. They have stood for 1,400 years. They were doubtless quarried with stone implements and set in place by the exertion of sheer brute force. Their history is shrouded in obscurity, their very purpose a mere conjecture. They are a part of the mystery of the islands.

Lerwick, Shetland's Capital.

No mention has been made so far of the largest and most commercial city of the archipelago, because its importance is entirely modern and its place in history small. This is Lerwick, the capital of Shetland. It is far more picturesque, as well as more imposing, than its southern rival, Kirkwall. It is the center of a vast fishing industry, and from Saturday to Monday, in the season, its harbor is crowded with "steam-drifters" the modern style of fishing-boats which now control the herring industry.

Lerwick is on high ground, with a road running along the shore, as at Stromness. It is a narrow street, though wide enough for vehicles to pass, and much busier than the streets of Kirkwall. Narrow lanes, for pedestrians only, lead off the main thoroughfare up the slope of the hill, and these are curiously provided with ropes along the buildings to prevent slipping in icy weather.

The city has a large fish market, where the boats dispose of their catch by auction, a handsome town hall, and many substantially built churches and dwellings.

Shetland it must be remembered, lies north of the 60th parallel. Trace the line around the globe and it will be seen that it touches Greenland, passes above the northernmost extremity of Labrador, goes through the upper half of Hudson bay, skirts the shore of Alaska, and traverses the dreary wastes of Siberia.

But the climate of the islands is so modified by the sea that they are neither excessively cold in winter nor warm in summer. A strong wind blows across them most of the time, and this has interfered with vegetation to such an extent that few trees are to be found. The inland scenery is, therefore, not attractive, but the rugged outlines of the coast, cut up by the action of the sea into numerous inlets or voes, and carved into fantastic "stacks" and "castles," like the Old Man of Hoy, have a wild beauty of their own.

Wood in Matches

Tons of wood are consumed weekly in Europe and America in the manufacture of matches, which were originated in 1827. One firm alone uses 625 tons of timber a week in its match output. The logs used average about a foot in diameter and ten feet in length. The match sticks are usually immersed in a solution that will prevent their smouldering, as one of the safety requirements.

A CALL TO PATRIOTISM.

Under "A Call to Patriotism," the editor of the Baltimore Manufacturers Record has this to say about present day conditions in our country:

"There is today a call to patriotism greater than was the call to patriotism during the great war. Then the danger of our country was from outside enemies; today the danger is from enemies at home. These enemies are the men and women who violate the laws of our land and who are thus doing their utmost to pull down the American flag and trample it in the mire. They are despising the thing for which the American flag stands, obedience to law.

"True patriotism means, among other things, obedience to law and the upholding of all laws so long as they are on the statute books. It means also that the man who violates our laws must be regarded exactly as the slacker and the deserter were regarded in war times.

"Let us have a new call to patriotism, a new awakening to the dangers that face us as a nation through the breaking down of law.

DEVELOPING A RURAL SCHOOL SYSTEM

The article given below, taken from a recent issue of the Birmingham Age-Herald, tells briefly the story of the development of the rural schools of Talladega county during the last five years:

"Probably in no other line has Talladega county made so great progress as that of its rural schools Since 1919 Talladega county has wrought the change from no decent buildings to that of a number of the most modern buildings to be found in the country. Thirteen new buildings have been erected, having a total of 62 class rooms, four auditoriums and 22 work rooms or libraries. The total cost of this construction work is $124,530. In addition to this $17,295 has been spent for equipment.

"There are now 46 elementary schools and three state approved high schools with a total enrollment of 4,165. Of this number, Munford, Winterboro, Fayetteville, Childersburg and Eastaboga have been the outgrowth of consolidating 19 schools of the traditional type for most part the one-room variety. Three of these consolidated schools are now state approved high schools, Munford, Fayetteville and Childersburg. These five consolidated schools now have a total enrollment of 1,427, which is more than one-third of the total school enrollment. Thirteen motor-bus trucks are used to transport the pupils to and from these schools. Over 850 pupils are transported daily.

"In addition to the splendid building and consolidation program Talladega county schools rank with the best in the state in that it is one of the few counties where the rural schools have an eight and nine months term. This was made possible by the people of Talladega county levying the one mill tax. Talladega county was also one of the first to put on rural supervision. This work is a factor in co-ordinating the work of all the rural schools and in raising the standards of the class room work."

If one should undertake to find the explanation of this remarkable growth in the rural schools of our neighbor county it could be found easily enough and could be stated in a few words. Talladega county has and has had for the past four or five years, a thoroughly competent man in the office of county superintendent of education.

PLAY SAFE: PLANT FOOD AND FEED

The uncertain weather conditions together with lack of knowledge of the plans of Billy Boll Weevil, and the fact that no living man knows "what the market will do" should serve to emphasize the importance of planting a sufficient acreage in food and feed crops to meet all needs. A good many men say they would like to try keeping a few cows and selling cream the year round, but they haven't got the feed. Now is the time to plant feed if one intends to begin the dairy business next fall. It's a serious mistake to start dairying without feed and the only profitable way to get feed is to grow it.

CONNECTION BETWEEN NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING AND LOCAL BUSINESS.

"In comparing newspaper advertising by months with the volume of local business in thirty leading cities for a period of ten years, my associates find that there is a distinct connection between these two factors. An increase in newspaper advertising is paralleled in almost every case by an increase in local business beginning the same month. When the lineage of local newspaper advertising turns and begins to decline the momentum gained carries the general business in the community either from one to three months and then it turns definitely downward."—Roger W. Babson.

A man who was not very friendly to Extension Work was complaining at what he called the "waste of money," in carrying it on, and said there was nothing to it. Why," he said, "if the farmers had put to use one-tenth of the information and advice that has been given them in the last 15 years, they would today be the most prosperous set of men in the whole country." A county agent who had been on the job in one county continuously for 14 years said, "My hardest job is to get the farmers to do what they already know to do."

FUTURE OF AGRICULTURE IS IN EDUCATION

I am vitally interested in the proposed new building for the High School. I expect to call on a good number of people during the month of June. Meantime I would like for my farmer friends to read the following article.

R. E. Parker

HOW TO HELP THE FARMER

What can be done to help the farmers? The air at Washington is charged with this question and Congress can be expected to devote much talk to the subject. A most practical answer to the question has been given by the Arkansas Banker's Association. In substance it is to educate the coming generation.

This association distributed a pamphlet compiled by E. J. Rodman, vice-president of the Union Trust Co., of Little Rock from surveys in different states. These surveys are average conditions and, therefore, includes inefficient as well as the most highly efficient farmers of the different states. They all prove that farm education has a direct financial bearing upon the whole country.

In Arkansas in 1922 the average net farm income was $578. Comparing that with the returns made by 3,000 pupils taking farm training in rural schools of that state the compiler estimated that education would have increased the farm values of the state that year by $217,532,000.

Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, found earning capacity of the farmers of the state who had no schooling averaged $240. Where they had a common school education earning capacity was raised to $565. Graduates from high schools there averaged $664; those fho had a short agricultural course averaged $895; graduates of agricultural colleges earned $1,254. A good agricultural education increased the farmer's earning capacity 500 per cent.

Cornell University showed that New York state high school educated farmers made twice as much as those from district schools and better-educated ones made three times as much. They also made considerably more in proportion to the capital invested than those with a district education. Those who started as hired men became farm owners quickly if they had a high school education.

Agricultural college graduates raised a larger acreage of crops showed greater efficiency in use of labor, horse, machinery and capital Their greater knowledge enabled them to get larger yields from their cows, orchards and fields, and as the report says: "They grew better crops, had better labor efficiency and better farm business management.

Economics teach us that in great measure poverty is caused by inefficiency. Legislative programs cannot overcome this. The fact so cogently stated in this little study shows that the hope of agriculture in the future lies entirely along the lines of agricultural education.—Wall Street Journal, Friday, November, 16th, 1923.

It's hard to tell now what Alabama's double-barreled delegation will do when it gets to the national Democratic convention in New York. Already in just getting the members appointed and instructed we are reminded of the saying: "It is mighty hard to get oil and water to mix."

Governor Lowden gave as his reason for not accepting the nomination of his party for vice-president, that he can be of greater service by continuing his work for the development of co-operative marketing of farm products, than he could be in the office of vice-president.

JUST A FEW WORDS ABOUT OUR PAPER

I am checking through the mailing list now to find out the names of subscribers who failed to renew their subscriptions during the recent circulation campaign. It has taken some little time to do this and until that work could be completed I have continued sending the paper to every subscriber whose name was on the list when the circulation campaign started. This week we are again sending the paper to all subscribers, WITH A RED PENCIL MARK AROUND THE LABEL OF EVEY ONE WHO, ACCORDING TO OUR RECORDS, failed to renew. If we mark your paper and you have renewed, please understand that it is done through error and that WE SHALL BE GLAD TO CORRECT EVERY SUCH MISTAKE as soon as our attention has been called to it. We hope too that you will call the mistake to our attention at once.

In order to succeed it is as necessary for a news paper to use business-like methods as it is for a bank to use such methods. The business-like way for a newspaper to handle its subscription list it to stop sending the paper whenever a subscription runs out. A good many subscribers ask that this be done. Your grocer will not send you a dollar's worth of sugar this morning just because you happened to give him such an order on last Thursday morning. Neither will your dealer send you a new straw hat this season just because you bought one and paid for it last year. The same principle applies to a newspaper. Just because you subscribed last year is no evidence to us that you want the paper again this year; though we hope very much that you do. The way to prove that you want the paper is to come in, or send in, and renew your subscription just as soon as you find it has expired. That clears up all doubt about the matter and it makes the newspaper man feel mighty good besides; makes him feel like working just a little harder this week so as to make the paper better than it was last week. Friends, we have got a fine chance here to build a weekly newspaper that will be a credit to Shelby county. Why shouldn't Shelby county have as good a paper as any other county in Alabama? We can have just that, if every one will do his part. Let the editor do his best and you subscribers and friends do your part. Keep your subscriptions always paid in advance, and if you can do so, say a good word for the paper to your neighbor. Do the one every year, do the other every day.

A Ton of Freight Moved A Mile for Less Than a Postage Stamp

Large figures are, as a rule, bewildering to the public, but the statistics recently issued by the Interstate Commerce Commission on the freight operations of the American railroads during 1923, present some easy-to-understand and very significant comparisons.

These figures show that the average revenue received by the American railroads for hauling one ton of freight one mile during 1923, was 1.116c, as compared with 1.176c in 1922 and 1.253c in 1921. The average for 1921 was the highest in recent years; but since then there have been substantial reductions in rates. As compared with 1921, the average rate paid in 1922 represented a reduction of 5%; and that paid in 1923, a reduction of about 11.6%.

These are small figures when applied to one ton of freight, but when multiplied by 413,562,132,100 ton-miles of freight handled by the railroads last year, the slight reduction per ton-mile makes an appreciable showing.

In fact, the aggregate saving in the freight bill of the shipping public since January 1922 has been more than $1,000,000,000.

Think of the figures quoted above—one ton of freight was hauled during 1923 by the American railroads for one mile at a cost of a little over 1c. Figured in terms of an every-day commodity, this represents the movement of 800 pairs of shoes one mile; the actual carrying charges per pair being so ridiculously small as to have no effect whatever on the retail selling price.

Does this indicate that freight rates are too high?

How Human Skill Energizes Alabama's Telephone Plant

THE $11,117,526 now invested in the Bell Telephone System in Alabama would be useless, the switchboards would be idle and the poles would fall except for the 1,569 loyal, efficient telephone workers who are devoting their lives to this essential public service.

The 130,520 poles, the 189,925 miles of wire and the millions of dollars' worth of switchboard are energized into a complete, living system of communication by the skill of this human regiment.

Last year they built more than $906,000 worth of additions to the telephone system and added 5,338 new telephones by handling more than 26,500 stations.

The operators handled more than 206,550,000 local and long distance calls at a speed and with an accuracy which makes your telephone service the equal of that anywhere.

Most of the telephone people are your neighbors and friends. They are proud of their State and of their company. Your friendly encouragement inspires them to greater accomplishment.

WITCH TEG'S SON

YACO, the son of old Witch Teg, who lived on the mountain side, wanted to be rich. He did not want to live in a cave with his Witch Mother, though she did everything within the power of her magic arm to make him happy.

It was not, however, in the power of Witch Teg to give gold to her son, or to any one else.

Stones she could change into animals or mountains into rocks and trees, and it was whispered she had changed more than one into the shape of a wild animal.

So when her son asked for gold that he might become rich and live in a palace Witch Teg knew she could not grant his wish.

"Soon I'll Be a Rich Man, Mother," He Said.

There was one thing she could do, and that was to help him get money, and this she did by changing the big rocks around her mountain cave into fat pigs which Yaco drove to the market and sold for gold.

Soon the gold began to pile up in the corner of the cave, for Yaco's pigs were the finest in the market and brought the highest prices.

"Soon I will be a rich man, mother," said Yaco one day, "and I shall live in a palace, and when you see me riding in my coach with four prancing horses you will be proud of your son."

Witch Teg listened with downcast eyes, for she began to understand that this selfish son had no thought of her, but would leave her as soon as he was rich enough to satisfy his greed.

If Yaco had seen his mother's eyes his answer to her question would perhaps have been more guarded, but he didn't, and so when Witch Teg asked, "And how shall I be able to see so fine a person as you will be when you drive out in such style? You cannot drive up the side of the mountain."

"Oh, you can sit at the foot of the mountain some day and I will drive past," replied the ungrateful Yaco. "You will not expect me to notice you, of course, for I could not have a witch for my mother, you know, and live in a palace."

"No, no," answered the witch, "that would never do." But she did not intend that her selfish son should leave her to live in a cave while he rode about in a beautiful coach ashamed to own her for his mother.

One morning when Yaco started for market the pigs he drove before him were the plumpest and finest he had ever driven down the mountain and Yaco thought of the gold he would bring back to add to his store.

Yaco did not know that his mother, before the sun was up and while the mountain was yet misty in the early morning, had gone part way down the mountain and, stretching out her bony arms and hands, had caused water to run over the rocks and form a brook.

If he had he would not have guessed the reason, but his witch mother was making sure her son could not leave her. She knew that all charms are broken when the one upon whom the spell is cast steps into running water.

Yaco she had formed from an ugly black rock that stood by her doorway, and now she would let him take his form again.

Slowly down the mountainside Witch Teg watched her son driving his pigs. For a minute Yaco stopped when he saw the water. Then, seeing it was not deep, he drove the pigs in. Before his astonished eyes they resumed their former shape—a heap of stones.

Yaco stepped in to touch the stones and instantly he became one of them, only big, black and ugly—just the shape he had been when Witch Teg changed him into the son of a witch.

The village folks at the foot of the mountain point out the black rock and call it the Witch's Son because it is shaped like the head of a man, but they do not know that once it was Yaco, the son of Witch Teg, who was ashamed of his witch mother.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

FACTS about your name; it's history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

ELLA

ELLA is an elfin name. Its source lies in Fairyland, where the elves, or white spirits, were supposed to be gifted shadowy beings given to influencing strangely the lives of mortals. Ella means "elf's friend."

The elf king was called Elberich. His fairy kindred and their popularity in England and Ireland, established the use of elf names early in history. Everyone remembers Aelfgifu, the unfortunate Elgiva, whose beauty was like the fairy gift which her name signifies, and brought ruin upon herself and her husband.

Aelfwine (elf darling), daughter of the earl of Southampton, was Knut's first wife. A bishop of Lichfield was called Aelfwine, but he preferred to be addressed as Aelia. This is the first appearance of Ella, and it seems curious that it should have been of a masculine name.

Aella, as it was then spelled, named the sponsor for the execution of Ragnar Lodbrog, and it was Aelle of Deira whose name caused Gregory the Great to say that "Alleluja" should be sung in those regions.

Ella is much used in this country, but her significance is so little known, that her popularity must be attributed to harmony of sound.

The opal is Ella's talismanic gem, but the fairy, which popular superstition declares is imprisoned within the stone, must be a good fairy, for Ella is promised many friends, success and much happiness. Friday is her lucky day and 2 her lucky number.

Reflections of a Bachelor Girl

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE same woman may be a goddess to a boy, a temptation to a married man and a menace to a bachelor.

No man is ripe for matrimony until his heart has been broken at least once; and the first girl who threw him over is an angel in disguise.

Every man believes that woman's "sphere" is marriage; but that a girl should never, never think about it, except in the beautiful abstract, until some man mentions it to her.

True love says, "Love me—or I suffer!" Infatuation says, "Love me—or I'll make YOU suffer!"

Youth's idea of "success" consists in covering the course (of life) with the fewest possible strokes (of effort).

Forty-five is the magic age at which a man has just begun to LIVE—when he still retains all his teeth, some of his hair, the outlines of his youthful figure, and most of his really worthwhile illusions, but has shed most of his egoism, his cynicism, his foolish dreams, and all his impossible expectations of life.

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

CABBAGES AND LOVE

IN MANY parts of the country a girl who is becoming anxious about her prospects of matrimony goes out to a neighbor's cabbage patch at night, steals a cabbage and places it over the house door. The man upon whom the cabbage falls when the door is opened is the man she is destined to marry. It is held by most authorities that this charm can only be worked with success upon Allhallowe'en and that the girl should go through a graveyard on her way to steal the cabbage. In some sections it is believed that something of the physical characteristics of the girl's future husband can be divined by the shape and size of the cabbage stolen. In no case can she select the cabbage but must take the first that comes to hand—some say pull it with her eyes shut.

In Scotland the same superstition is a common Hallowe'en custom, handed down from time immemoral, and was glorified in poetry by Robert Burns. Only in Scotland they do not put the whole cabbage but only the stalk over the door and say that the amount of earth clinging to the cabbage root indicates the size of the fortune the girl's husband will have. This superstition is inherited from our barbarous ancestors of northern Europe to whom cabbage and kale were nearly what onions and garlic were to the Egyptians. Egyptians even deified the onion and if the Teuton and the Celt did not exactly deify the cabbage they held it in high respect as possessing many mystic qualities and gave it a place only a little lower than the grain god. Most appropriate vegetable to divine by.

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

By LAURA MILLER

HARKEN YE, AMBITIOUS WIVES!

A husband's advice to his wife on how to succeed is often startling to the wife. Sometimes it betrays astonishing ignorance. In which case, may it be that husband is blind in the near eye? Or that wife's methods, like those of high-powered machinery, are unusually quiet in action? Judge for yourself in the case of Helen S. Wright of Pittsfield, Mass.

Charles Wright, Republican district attorney, was up for re-election last November. Democratic sentiment was running, to the mind of the Republican fathers, dangerously strong. Many conservative women, nominally Republican, had never voted. An invitation came—never mind how—to Mrs. Wright to speak to, and perhaps organize these women.

"You'd better write out your talk, let me criticize it, and then help you learn to deliver it," the husband volunteered. "You know even a few women's votes may count this time!"

"I'll speak better extemporaneously," was the reply which sent a worried gentleman to this meeting and a less worried but much puzzled one to many others.

The 5,000 majority given Mr. Wright was conceded to be the woman's vote! A scant 500 in this district saved Senator Lodge, whom Mrs. Wright did not campaign for. Years ago when her son was well started in school, a civic movement needing money interested her. She was well educated, accurate and a successful housekeeper. Out of just those moderate gifts, if one is to believe her, grew her attempt at a cookbook of the best recipes of the best housewives of Pittsfield. The book was published. It was well done. It made money. She could—after a fashion, at least—write.

Next came a collection of dolls quaintly and accurately dressed in costumes of past ages. The collection, presented to women's clubs, taught her to meet audiences. All this so without fuss or feathers, she has told me, that her busy husband never missed her. At present many women's organizations seek Mrs. Wright for lectures. The great publishing house of MacMillan asks for the manuscripts of her books, "Who's Who" lists her among the famous, and politicians high in office seek her advice on party plans.

THE PICK OF 70,000 JOBS

When the engineer corps was demobilized with thousands of young engineers and engineering jobs needing to be brought together, they devised a unique employment service. Jobless men were asked whether they would be willing to investigate positions for others while they waited for their own to turn up. They went heads up, shoulders squared, to interview building contractors, personnel directors and bosses. Near-hungry though they might be, they were representatives of the service on legitimate business, not beggars hunting meal tickets for themselves. They seldom went jobless long. Some man was sure to say: "Engineer yourself? Thought so. Why couldn't you tackle this job instead of Brown?"

Out in Fargo there is a young woman who knows all the jobs in North Dakota—and sticks to her own. In 1919 she went to Washington, D. C., to a government training school in public employment office technique. At that time it was easy to overhear something like this: "Oh, Mary Jones has technique, but you know no woman is ever trusted with the direction of an office handling men and women." Mintie Bowe of Fargo took no part in these "sore-head" discussions. She was remembered after she had gone back home chiefly because she seemed to possess the old-fashioned faculty of attending to her own business and doing it well.

A year or so ago a visitor to North Dakota came home praising a summer clubhouse outside of Fargo which the Business Women's club had opened. "There was a quiet little woman called Mrs. Bowe who seemed to be largely responsible for its success," the visitor remembered.

A recent letter from Fargo brought fresh news of Mrs. Bowe. Though most of the public employment offices were closed soon after the war, Mintie Bowe's managed to keep on rendering service. Now, the only one in the state open the year round, it maintains supervision over the others. She interviews personally most of the 70,000 people who pass through the office annually. Ninety per cent of them are men—and outdoor men at that.

"Find work in your home town Grow with it. If you can outgrow it a bigger opportunity in a bigger place will always find you," she says to the women who come to her for advice.

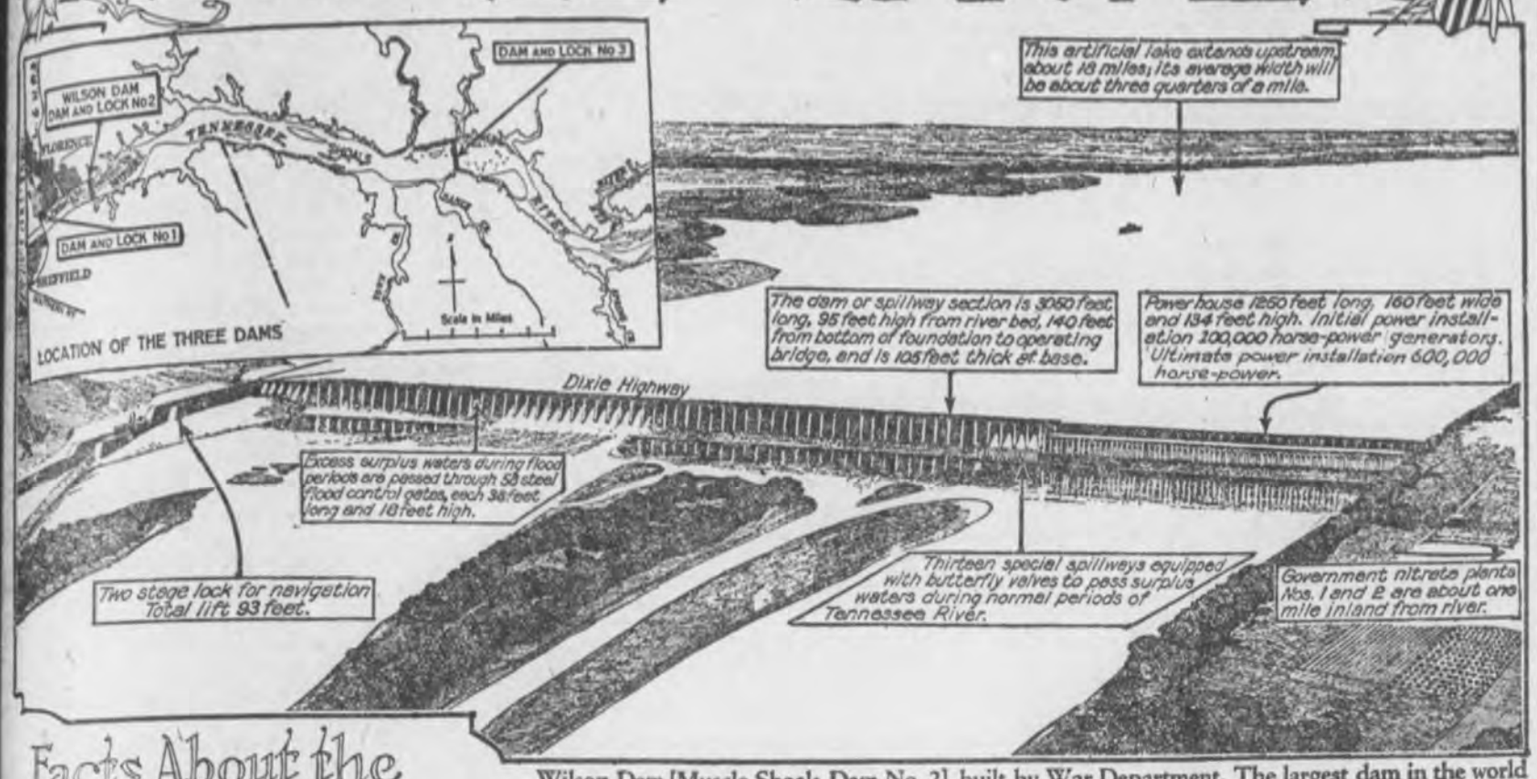
MUSCLE SHOALS



Wilson Dam [Muscle Shoals Dam No. 2], built by War Department. The largest dam in the world as it will appear when completed in 1925. Insert: Map shows relative location of dams and locks.

Facts About the World's Greatest Hydraulic Development

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

MUSCLE SHOALS, an enormous hydraulic power and navigation development in process of construction by the United States government on the Tennessee river in northern Alabama, is a subject of nation-wide discussion by the American people. Various circumstances have combined to fix popular attention upon these government-owned properties, the world's largest hydraulic development.

America's entrance into the World war in 1917 found us dependent upon Chile for nitrates with which to manufacture explosives. Nitrates can be taken from the nitrogen in the air. The power and the facilities for the manufacture of an adequate supply were not available. Hence the federal government decided to construct a nitrate plant of its own. Muscle Shoals was selected as the site because it had ample water power, was convenient to the raw materials, coal and limestone, and was secure from a military viewpoint.

Work was begun at Muscle Shoals in July of 1918. At the signing of the armistice in November of 1918 a steam-power nitrate plant had been practically completed. Wilson Dam, however, had been barely begun. Congress decided to complete Wilson Dam and it will be ready to deliver its power some time in 1925.

Muscle Shoals did not become useless at the signing of the armistice. On the contrary it possesses great peace-time possibilities. It can be made a source of two of the most important factors in our industrial development—electricity and nitrogen compounds. The uses of electrical power are almost limitless. Nitrogen compounds can be made into either explosives or fertilizer, the preliminary stages of manufacture being the same. Completion of the Muscle Shoals project will also greatly increase the navigability of the Tennessee river.

During the last two years several offers have been made to the War department for part or all of the Muscle Shoals properties. The secretary of war referred these offers to congress with the request for legislation covering the situation.

Muscle Shoals Project in Detail.

President Coolidge, in a message to congress December 6, 1923, recommended that the properties be sold, subject to the right of the government to retake them in time of war and with a covenant that experimentation for the manufacture of fertilizers be carried on to success. He recommended that congress consider offers, conduct negotiations and report definite recommendations.

This article, however, is solely for the purpose of giving the outstanding facts in connection with the physical aspects of the Muscle Shoals development. Other phases of the complicated situation are purposely ignored.

The strictly war-time works at Muscle Shoals are far from representing all of the present undertakings, existing and proposed. If present plans are carried out, the complete development comprises the following:

Dam No. 1—This is a small navigation dam to be erected at Florence, two miles below the Wilson Dam. Its estimated cost is $1,400,000. Its construction is not yet approved. It is to contain a navigation lock and will provide sufficient depth of water up-stream to the Wilson Dam. From Florence to the Ohio, a distance of 257 miles, there is to be a six-foot channel.

Dam No. 2—This is the Wilson Dam, elsewhere described in detail. It will develop power and is provided with navigation locks. Its final cost is estimated at $51,000,000.

Dam No. 3—This is a proposed power and navigation dam, located 18 miles above Wilson Dam. Its construction is not yet approved. It would raise the water in the river 40 feet and permit navigation a further distance up stream for about 65 miles. It would supply power to a maximum of 250,000 horsepower. This dam would be even longer than the Wilson Dam, but not so high. Its estimated cost is $25,000,000.

Nitrate Plant No. 1—This is a relatively small nitrate plant built in 1917 for experimental purposes at a cost of $10,000,000.

Nitrate Plant No. 2—This is a large nitrate plant built to supply nitrates for explosives during the war. Its total cost, including a 100,000-horsepower steam plant and a limestone quarry at Waco, was about $66,000,000.

Villages—In connection with Nitrate Plants Nos. 1 and 2 complete villages for workers were built. Plant No. 2 covers a site consisting of 2,300 acres of land. It consists of six separate plants for the various chemical processes and there are in addition 186 permanent houses, with electric lights, sewers and water supply; one hotel with 100 rooms, furnished with all modern improvements; 22 miles of improved roads; 37 miles of standard-gauge railroad; 20 miles of sewers; 16 miles of domestic and fire water supply; a 60,000,000-gallon reservoir with pumping plant and filter, and an ice plant.

Gorgas Steam Power Plant—In order to obtain power for construction work and for operation of the nitrate plant while its main power supply was still unavailable, a 40,000-horsepower generating plant was erected on the property of the Alabama Power company at Gorgas, Ala., 88 miles away, and connected with Muscle Shoals by a long transmission line. This plant is not an integral portion of the Muscle Shoals development. It was, therefore, sold to the Alabama Power company under an agreement made with that company at the time it was erected.

Largest Dam in the World.

The illustration given herewith suggests outstanding features of Wilson Dam. The inserted map shows the relative positions of the three dams.

The navigation part of the Muscle Shoals project is too extensive and complicated to be described in detail here. In general it may be said that the Tennessee river rises in northeastern Tennessee, flows southwest, makes an east to west loop through northern Alabama and then flows north through Tennessee and Kentucky, joining the Ohio near its juncture with the Mississippi at Cairo, Ill. The Tennessee is 652 miles long from Knoxville, Tenn., to Paducah, Ky. At Muscle Shoals, in northern Alabama, the river falls 134 feet in 37 miles. Here is the main obstruction to the through navigation of the river. With the three dams and the supplemental locks in operation, the Muscle Shoals obstacle would be removed.

The Wilson Dam, as the illustration suggests, is an impressive structure and pleasing to the eye. There are longer dams and dams that are higher, but none that is larger. Ministerial golfers in moments of stress requiring adequate expression will soon be expected to change over from Gatun or Assuan to Wilson, or at least to cap the climax with Wilson. It should be remembered that the stream here runs from east to west and that in the illustration the north bank is at the left of the picture.

Wilson Dam was built primarily for the purpose of furnishing electric power, but the navigation phase had to be considered. This accounts for the lock on the north bank. Then comes the main dam and next the power house extending from the main dam to the south shore. The switch and control buildings will be located on the bluff on the south shore. If a drydock is needed in the future, it will be located upstream from the lock. Hugh L. Cooper, designing and supervising engineer of the Wilson Dam, says the entire structure will contain 36,500,000 solid cubic feet of masonry and cover 20 acres of ground. He visualizes this mass of masonry by saying it is equivalent to a concrete road from New York to Chicago, 16 feet wide and six inches thick. The project is being constructed by the War department, corps of engineers, U. S. A., under Maj. Gen. Lansing H. Beach, chief of engineers, and Brig. Gen. Harry Taylor, assistant chief, immediately in charge. The construction forces are under the direction of Lieut. Col. George R. Spalding. Mr. Cooper says of the dam proper:

The dam proper rises to a height of 137 feet above foundations and backs up the water to a depth of 98 feet, from the bedrock to the new water surface. The spillway section of the dam is of the overfall gravity type of dam. Normal pool level above the dam is at elevation 501, normal tailwater is at elevation 409, thus making the normal head available 92 feet. The crest of the spillway is at elevation 483, and each spillway opening is 38 feet wide in the clear, with an 8-foot pier between. Supported on these piers and arching over each spillway opening is an arch bridge, serving as an operating deck for the spillway control gates and providing a double track bridge and roadway across the river. In all, there are 58 spillway openings, each with a control gate of structural steel, 18 feet high and 40 feet long.

"The last five sections of the dam, adjoining and connecting to the power house forebay structure, are not spillway sections," says Mr. Cooper. "In these five sections there are located thirteen sluices. Each sluice is simply a 9-foot diameter conduit extending through the dam, protected at the upstream end by a massive concrete screen, and controlled at the downstream or discharge by a 108-inch butterfly valve. These valves are operated by a small compressed air engine, mounted on a car which travels on a track above valves. When one of the sluices is opened under full head it discharges a stream eight feet or more in diameter at a velocity at about 45 feet per second or thirty miles an hour.

Enormous Power to Be Generated.

"The power house structure can be divided into two parts: the forebay structure and the power house building. The forebay structure is that portion of the structure which retains the water and serves as a part of the water barrier. It is designed to withstand the entire water pressure without the aid of the power house building. The arch bridge and roadway continue without change of grade over the forebay structure to the south shore. The power house is approximately 1,250 feet long, 160 feet wide and 134 feet high, and when completed will contain eighteen main units, two auxiliary apparatus sections and a shore section.

"Ultimate installation calls for eighteen main power units, four of which are 30,000 horsepower each, and fourteen of 35,000 horsepower each. Four of the latter fourteen and the four 30,000 horsepower units are being installed at the present time, making an initial installation of 260,000 horsepower. Each power unit consists of a water turbine of the Francis type, in a vertical setting, with electrical generator above on the same shaft.

The four 30,000 horsepower turbines were manufactured by the William Cramp & Sons Ship & Engine Building company, and the generators for same were made by the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing company.

"Five thousand men are employed on the construction of this project. They work in three shifts, each shift working eight hours. This construction camp is in reality a fair-sized town. The main concrete mixing plant is located on an island in the middle of the river. From here the concrete is hauled in large buckets on railroad cars to any part of the job where it may be needed. Railroad tracks serve every available part of the work. In all more than twenty miles of track have been laid for construction purposes. A construction bridge carrying railroad tracks as well as tracks for huge traveling derricks had to be constructed. In order to build the formwork for the concrete, a lumber yard, sawmill and layout platform had to be erected. The lumber used on the job will run to millions of feet board measure."

The manufacture of destructive explosives from nitrates taken from the air is a fascinating subject, especially in connection with the fact that the same nitrates can easily be turned into harmless and beneficent fertilizer. As it stands today, Nitrate Plant No. 2 can fix from the atmosphere the nitrates required for the continuous supply of ammunition for an army of 1,250,000 men. In war time the cost of ammunition is not an essential feature.

But can fertilizer be manufactured at Muscle Shoals at peace-time prices? This seems to be an unsettled question. Maj. J. K. Crain, ordnance department, U. S. A., says on this much-vexed question in connection with the Muscle Shoals project.

There is some doubt that fertilizer can be produced by the process for which Muscle Shoals properties are now equipped at a price low enough to compete with the products from other sources. However, this subject is engaging the attention of scientists in both private and governmental employ. Promising results have been attained at the fixed nitrogen laboratory in Washington, D. C., which laboratory was established by the War department, but turned over to the control of the Department of Agriculture in 1921. The doubtful outcome of experiments in this field has caused the War department to oppose relinquishment of the title to these properties without adequate guarantees that the plants must be returned to the control of the government in an effective condition to be utilized in the manufacture of explosives, should they pass to the control of persons who did not continue their use of the manufacture of fertilizers.

Taking Nitrogen From Air.

"The raw materials employed in the manufacturing process are nitrogen, obtained from the air, limestone, and coal, which is used in the form of coke," says Major Crain. "The first step is to burn the limestone to lime, which is an oxide of calcium (CaO). This is then mixed with coke (carbon) and the mixture is heated to a very high temperature in electric furnaces. The product thus formed is a combination of calcium and carbon, the familiar 'calcium carbide' (CaC-2) which generates acetylene when placed in water. The carbide is run out of the furnaces in a liquid state, and after cooling and solidifying, is ground to a fine powder.

"The next step is to add nitrogen to the carbide. For this purpose practically pure nitrogen is needed. There are several different methods of separating nitrogen from the oxygen of the air, but the one used at Muscle Shoals, because of its simplicity and cheapness, is first to liquify air and then to separate the two gases by taking advantage of the fact that the boiling points of the two liquid gases are slightly different. (Oxygen boils at —182.5 degrees Centigrade and nitrogen at —195.5 degress Centigrade.) The process is very similar to that used in separating mixtures of alcohol and water.

"The actual fixation of the nitrogen is now accomplished by passing it over the finely ground carbide heated to a temperature of about 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit. A reaction takes place under these conditions and a complex compound of calcium, carbon, and nitrogen, called cyanamide (CaCN-2) is the result.

"The next step in the production of both explosives and fertilizer is to heat the cyanamide in large steel tanks with steam and water, which results in the formation of ordinary ammonia.

"Ammonia can be readily changed into nitric acid (HNO-3), and from this acid any desired nitrogen compound for either agricultural or military purposes can be made. For fertilizers, ammonium phosphate and ammonium sulphate are the preferred forms; while for explosives, there is a host of nitrogen products, dynamite, T. N. T., and many others."

Extenuation

Tom C. Spencer, Houston lumber man, recently visited a sick Rotarian in the hospital. In the next room was a patient swathed in bandages. A visitor dropped into this room, and through the open door Mr. Spencer heard him exclaim:

"But surely you weren't simple enough to hunt for a gas leak with a match!"

"Well, you see," replied the patient weakly, "it said on the box they were safety matches."—Houston Post.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness are oftentimes symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

QUIT HAVING BILIOUS COLIC

Texas Lady Says Her Suffering Was Terrible Until She Began Using Black-Draught.

Naples, Tex.—Mrs. G. W. Carlisle, who resides on Route 3, near here, says: "I used to have very severe spells of bilious colic. My suffering was terrible. I took different remedies; still I would have these spells.

"I heard of Thedford's Black-Draught and began to use it. After taking it for some time I quit having colic and haven't had a spell in years. It is about the only medicine I ever take. We certainly can recommend it to anyone. I take the dry powder and it keeps my liver in good shape. I have excellent health."

Colic is often due to a torpid condition of the liver. Other disagreeable symptoms of inactive liver are bilious headache, dizziness, indigestion, coated tongue, bitter taste, offensive breath, and constipation. Black-Draught acts in a natural way upon the liver, and helps to put it in working order again.

Black-Draught has been in successful use for more than eighty years, and thousands of people have written of the benefit they have derived from the use of Black-Draught in the treatment of torpid liver. Black-Draught is free from calomel and harmful drugs, as it is prepared only from powdered medicinal roots and herbs.

Remember—If it's not Thedford's it's not Black-Draught liver medicine. Insist upon the genuine!

Seek Fossils in Africa

East Africa, which has already yielded up some most important fossils of dinosaurs, is now regarded with much expectancy as a field of research in natural history, and for several years the trustees of the British museum have been hoping to send out an expedition to this territory. The difficulty, however, had been lack of funds; and the hopes of securing cooperation with museums overseas also failed to be realized. It has at last been possible to arrange for Mr. W. E. Cutler of the University of Manitoba to sail for West Africa to explore a number of the promising sites of former discoveries.

ADVERTISING PAYS

Mr. John T. Ellis tells us that his sales of Woco Pep during May increased 7,200 gallons over his sales the previous month. To what do you attribute this stupendous increase? If you allow us to answer this question we will say 'advertising." Mr. Ellis and his boys are continually talking "Woco-Pep every where they go, and besides talking it they put it before the public in the form of printers ink Mr. Ellis uses newspaper space and he distributes circulars as well, telling the world of the advantages of Woco-Pep. He does not do this one day in the year and then quit, but he continues to keep it before the public, and he is perfectly satisfied with the money he spends in advertising. Why? Because it pays him to do it. Yes, indeed, advertising in the right way certainly pays every time.—Clanton Union Banner.

Extension Short Course For Girls and Women Is Very Successful

Auburn, Alabama, June 9th—Sixty-eight girls representing 32 counties and 24 women representing 15 counties attended the annual short course for club girls and home demonstration women, at Auburn last week.

The girls were divided into four groups, studying clothing, foods, artcraft and basketry. The women studied dairying, nutrition and poultry. They also heard several lectures on topics vital to rural home life. A lecture on "feeding babies by Dr. J. Ross Snider of Birmingham and another by Miss Frances Montgomery of the state health service brought out many important facts.

Social life had a place on the program along with the serious side of the week. Those who attended were unanimous in a decision that the course was very successful, and that, in the end, it will be beneficial to thousands of rural homes in Alabama. The girls present represent 7,000 club girls back at home, while the women represent 4,000 club women.

Cupid's Darts Beat Yankee Bullets

Memphis, Tennnessee, June 5.—All the bullets from Yankee guns in days of the Civil War failed to do what one little well placed dart from Cupid's bow did to the heart of Maj. A. B. The couple were married at Linden Ave. Christian church at Memphis, Tenn., on June 4th. Maj. Hendrix is 77 years old and his wife is 64 years of age.

Immediately after becoming man and wife the couple set out with youthful hearts to mingle with the great reunion throng.

Mr. and Mrs. Hendrix will be entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Thayer, daughter of the bride, during their stay in Memphis.

Egg Selling Association Is Being Organized

Auburn, Ala., June 9.—Organization work for the formation of a State egg marketing association in Alabama is meeting with great success, according to reports reaching Auburn. The membership campaign was launched June 2, and in every section of the state satisfactory progress is being made.

Leaders in Mobile and Baldwin counties preferred to conduct their membership campaign before the state campaign. Ten thousand hens were signed in a few days in Mobile county, and 11,000 in Baldwin. The quota for each of these counties was 8, 000. Despite the fact that this quota has been exceeded mebership work will be continued, with indications that Mobile and Baldwin will sign 40,- hens.

A unique organization meeting was held at Red Level in Covington county, and every one of the 88 farmers and poultrymen present signed the costract for a total of 3, 030 hens.

With the county farm bureaus in charge, the charter membership campaign will continue until July 15. The minimum goal for the state is 100,000 hens, but in two counties, and one community in another county, one-fourth of this number was signed. The county farm and home demonstration agents are co-operating with the farmers in organizing this association, which will market eggs only. It is being organized and will be operated along lines very to the Farm Bureau Cotton ciation which has made a nous success in marketing co-operatively.

RESOLUTIONS

Resolutions adopted by the Columbiana Baptist Church, Sunday Junne 15th, 1924, at regular conference of the church

Whereas, Rev. R. L. Durant, Pastor of the Columbiana Baptist church, has resigned its pastorate, effective July 1st. 1924: and

Whereas, we, as a church, realize that in his pastorate for more than two years he has proven to be a man of sterling worth, a devout Christian, a man with deep and well wrought convictions, asserted at all times on the side of morality, Christianity and good government, courageous and outspoken on all matters that effect the church and state, and realizing as we do that his work in Columbiana and Shelby county has done more for righteousness sake and good government, and the uplift of humanity than any other one man has been able to do, who has lived in our midst, during the last half century.

Therefore, Be it Resolved by this church in Conference:

First: That the resignation of Brother Durant that the church has lost a strong, courageous and efficient Pastor, the community and Shelby county as a whole a loyal, conscientous, Christian citizen, and we do here express in him our abiding confidence, love and appreciation for the great work he has done in our midst and as a church we feel with profound keenness our loss in his going. No man ever found a truer friend in righteous living, or a stronger foe in assaying as a wolf in sheep's clothing.

Second. That we express our gratitude to him for his firm stand on all occasions for civic righteousness and his bold exposure of nighhandedness and corruption in high places, and that his stand, bold and determined as it was, has caused men everywhere who have come in contact with him to take courage and strength, and that eternity alone will and can reveal the blessing that Brother Durant has been to us as a Baptist Church, and to Shelby county as a whole.

Third. That we realize in his leaving us that he leaves our church in a 100% better condition for usefulness and efficient service in the Master's Kingdom than he found us when he came to us two and one-half years ago.

Fourth: That we as a Church shall do all within our power to remember his example and to emulate as best we can his unselfish life, and make his coming to us a continued blessing.

Fifth: That a copy of these resolutions be furnished to Brother Durant, the Alabama Baptist, and the Shelby County Reporter for publication, and a copy of the same be spread upon the Minutes of this church.

The above resolutions were adopted by unanimous rising vote of the church.

EXCHANGE CLUB REPRESENTED IN STATE MEETING

The State meeting of Exchange Clubs was held in Selma last week, beginning Thursday, with representatives from 16 clubs in attendance.

The Exchange Club of Columbiana was represented in the meeting by its president, Judge L. B. Riddle, E. M. Jones and A. P. McGhee. The Selma Exchangeites were lavish in their plans for entertaining their visitors and a pleasant and profitable meeting was held. Feculiar honor was given the Columbiana club, one of the youngest in the whole state, by the election of Mr. Jones as one of the state officers for the coming year.

One of the principal speakers at the meeting was Thos. L. Bailey, of Meridian, Miss vice-president of the national organization of Exchange Clubs who told of the opportunity of civic clubs for community service and indicated the ways in which such service can be given. He said: "The influence and example of civic clubs in a community may be made to mean more to the community than the average person realizes. "We want to get back," said Mr. Bailey, to the old pioneer way of doing things. All men brothers, each helping others as when in the days of long ago a man cleared up the new ground for his little home and called in the neighbors to a 'log rolling, and when all hands 'turned in' and helped him put up the little home where he was to be happy with a wife and children. We want to get back to those fundamental principles of 'brotherhood,' or 'things will go to smash I fear. Fundamentals never change, fashions do, but fundamentals, never!

"We are still building cities, communities, families, society on the same fundamental is established hundreds of years ago and the future of these same units will be founded on the standard that we stand up for today. If the love of country, community and all that is good, is in us, then we must live it and prove it. It is my hope that Exchange shall give a new and glorious conception of these fundamental principless on which in founded true, pure citizenship and establish anew that old, but proven maxim, 'In unity there is strength.'"

COOLIDGE AND DAWES NAMED

Standard Bearers Chosen by the National Republican Convention at Cleveland.

IT IS ALL COOLIDGE

President's Wishes Are Followed to the Letter—Wisconsin Alone Is Dissenting Voice.

THE REPUBLICAN TICKET

For President,

CALVIN COOLIDGE OF MASSACHUSETTS.

For Vice President,

CHARLES G. DAWES OF ILLINOIS.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Cleveland, Ohio.—Calvin Coolidge's national convention has been held, and it will go down in political history as the quietest, smoothest, most peaceful affair of the kind ever pulled off in this country, unless one excepts Woodrow Wilson's convention in St. Louis eight years ago. And this gathering of the Republican party really was Mr. Coolidge's convention, here to do just what he wanted done and not to do the things he did not want done.

Mr. Coolidge wished to be nominated for President to succeed himself. He was nominated. He wished to have for a running mate a man who could be relied on to hold for the ticket the support of certain elements of the party whose allegiance it was feared was weakening. The name below Coolidge's at the head of this column shows that this wish was complied with so far as the possibilities permitted.

Mr. Coolidge selected for temporary chairman of the convention Congressman Theodore E. Burton of Ohio and told that gentleman what his views were on all the mooted public questions of the day—if he did not already know them—and Mr. Burton in his keynote speech faithfully reproduced all those views. Mr. Coolidge chose for permanent chairman Frank W. Mondell of Wyoming, because as vice chairman of the War Finance corporation which has loaned much money to agricultural interests Mr. Mondell might be considered acceptable to the rather disgruntled farmers. So Mr. Mondell presided over the convention after the opening of the second session.

Mr. Coolidge had positive opinions concerning the platform on which he would have to stand during the campaign, so out of all the planks fashioned by the numerous interests that sought to have a hand in the building of that platform, were carefully picked the ones that conformed strictly with these opinions, and all the rest were thrown into the discard by the resolutions committee headed by Ambassador Warren, who was Mr. Coolidge's selection for the place of chairman.

No reflection on President Coolidge nor on the Republican party is intended in recording this seeming dictation by the Chief Executive. The conditions not only justified it but made it inevitable. The rank and file of the party had, in the selection of instructed delegates, made known its firm intention to nominate Mr. Coolidge, and the political and legislative events of recent months made it evident that his preferences and opinions must be put above all else. Temporary Chairman Burton gave expression to this when he said in his address: "With some disappointment, as one whose public service has been in a legislative position, truth compels me to say that by far the greater share of our citizenship looks to President Coolidge rather than to congress for leadership." The outburst of cheering that greeted this, the first spontaneous applause of the convention, proved that the great mass of the delegates agreed with it.

Significant Changes

Outside the convention hall, in the rooms where the various state delegations met to organize and name their representatives on the committees, another mandate of the mass of the party was carried out. The old line leaders were relegated to the rear and the management put into new hands. Thus the Massachusetts delegation took its chairmanship away from Senator Lodge and gave it to Governor Cox, and the man who had for so long dictated to the Bay state Republicans was not even put on the platform committee. The efforts of Harry Daugherty's friends in the Ohio delegation to rehabilitate him came to naught when Maurice Maschke was chosen as national committeeman, Senator Willis as chairman of the delegation and Simeon D. Fess was put on the committee on resolutions. So it went, not in all the delegations, but in enough to show that a revolution in party management was under way. Senator Lodge was as suave and smiling as ever, and as tired looking, but his smile had a touch of bitterness, and many another former leader was in the dumps as he saw his power fading away.

There was but one discordant element in the convention—the LaFollette delegation from Wisconsin. All but one of its members were selected to vote for the Badger senator and to present to the platform committee the planks representing his views. Their action of course was known far in advance and so was discounted, but to some of the members of the party it was no less ominous. They got into action early with a set of resolutions of which the following is a synopsis:

Housecleaning pledged.
Monopoly—crush, not foster.
Recover oil preserves.
Vigorous prosecution of grafters.
Revise public domain legislation.
Public ownership of water power.
Super water power systems.
Public control and conservation of natural resources.
Repeal Esch-Cummins law.
Make rates on prudent investment and cost of service.
Railroads—public ownership, final solution.
Reduce federal taxes.
Curtail the 800 millions now spent annually for the army and navy.
Recover war stealings.
Collect foreign loan interest.
Oppose Mellon tax plan.
Amend Constitution to permit a reenactment to supersede a judicial veto.
Reduce tariff.
Promote co-operation between producers and consumers.
Reduce freight rates for farmers.
Abolish injunctions in labor disputes.
Grant cash bonus to ex-soldiers.
Provide Great Lakes waterway.
Amend Constitution to provide for direct nomination and election of President, federal initiative and referendum and referendum on war.
Revise Versailles treaty to comply with terms of armistice, promote treaties to outlaw war, abolish conscription, reduce armaments and guarantee referendums on peace and war.

There were some other planks, but these are enough to indicate the kind of a platform Senator LaFollette demanded. He and everyone else knew they would be turned down by the committee and rejected by the convention, so no one was surprised or shocked when that was done. But upon such a platform, it was assumed, LaFollette would stand as an independent candidate for the Presidency. What would be the effect of his candidacy was naturally a fruitful topic of discussion among the delegates and other visitors.

Many Women Delegates

Women were prepared to play a conspicuous part in the convention. There were more than 600 delegates and alternates of the gentler sex, nearly every state giving them place in its delegation. Even far away Hawaii sent one—Princess David Kawanankoa—and she was made an associate member of the national committee. In social usage she retains her title, but she is said to be thoroughly one of the people and a power among the Republican voters of the islands.

Temporary Chairman Burton overlooked the women when he wrote his address and had the advance copies printed, but he noticed the omission and interpolated a graceful paragraph warmly welcoming them to the party's councils. They were ready to do their share of the work, but really there was nothing much for them to do. It had all been arranged beforehand, and some of them were a bit peeved. They had a lot of pet ideas, but only a few of them, notably Mrs. A. T. Hert of Kentucky, were seriously consulted by the men who formulated the program. Mrs. Medill McCormick, wife of the senator from Chicago, said: "They have steam rollered the whole thing nicely. Those who are going to be elected have everything to say about the convention and the appointments and activities, and those who are elected and hold party office have nothing to say and can only go back home and work for the campaign."

This was largely true at the time it was said, but a few hours later the men gave their sense of fair play a chance and accorded to the women equal participation in party management by giving them full membership on the national committee. Five of the most prominent of the ladies went before the committee on rules and order of business and pleaded that the example set by the Democrats four years ago should be followed. Two or three of the men were obstinate, but the majority of the committee yielded and their report on this matter was adopted by the convention with nearly every woman in the hall standing and shouting as loud as she could.

Another thing this committee did, which also was approved by the convention, was to reduce the delegate representation of the southern states which always go Democratic. The convention of 1920 directed the national committee to work this reform, but it had refused to obey. In this convention there was no outspoken opposition to the change. To make it more binding, an additional member of the national committee was given to each states that exceeds a given Republican vote in the last preceding national election.

Genuine Enthusiasm

To tell in detail the story of the convention would be superfluous; to read it would be tedious. But it had its high lights and interesting phases. Regular attendants on such gatherings always are on the lookout for "ovations" and outbursts of enthusiasm frequently are suspicious of the genuineness of such demonstrations. The first session, however, witnessed several that were undoubtedly genuine. The first came toward the close of Temporary Chairman Burton's speech when he first mentioned President Coolidge by name. And it really wasn't so much the mention of the name that evoked loud and long cheering as what Mr. Burton said. This was it:

"With some disappointment, as one whose public service has been in a legislative position, truth compels me to say that by far the greater share of our citizenship looks to President Coolidge rather than to congress for leadership."

All over the great public hall delegates and spectators rose to their feet to applaud this statement, and even many of the senators and representatives who have set themselves in opposition to the President over and over again joined in the hand-clapping.

Another demonstration that seemed real was the ovation given Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon. During the formalities of completing the temporary organization he rose from the midst of the Pennsylvania delegation to make a trifling motion. At once the convention burst into almost wild cheering and the secretary was compelled to mount to the platform and acknowledge it. The man who runs the country's finances might well feel flattered by the reception given him.

Just after this incident a bit of real sentiment was injected into the proceedings. The chair announced that there was present the sole surviving member of the Republican convention that nominated Abraham Lincoln for the Presidency—Addison G. Proctor of St. Joseph, Mich. The venerable gentleman was led to the front and the cheering host arose to greet him, and listened with respect to his brief response.

That Congressman Burton in his keynote speech accomplished with great skill a difficult task was admitted by all. He could not entirely overlook the breach that has existed between the administration and congress, nor could he be too emphatic in placing the blame for it. But he recognized the change that was coming over the party management and gave the President full measure of praise. At the same time he said little that could offend the most sensitive of those Republican members of congress who have been in opposition to the administration's policies.

Nominating Coolidge

An easier task and no less admirably performed was that which fell to the lot of the other Burton—Marion Leroy, president of the University of Michigan. As his friends of many years' standing he was chosen by Mr. Coolidge to make the nominating speech on Thursday, and no more eloquent and sincere speech has been heard in a national convention. It was not flowery nor was it political. It was a sympathetic setting forth of the qualities of Mr. Coolidge as the speaker conceived them, a heartfelt tribute to his character, his stern uprightness and honesty, his unfaltering courage and his capacity for the leadership of his party and his country. "My function is to present the man," said Dr. Burton. "The emphasis must be just there. My primary task does not concern politics nor platforms as such. Anyone will tell you he is 'one of us' and he is. In keeping with his real qualities I shall make no effort to exalt him for he does not need it. He is not a superman and would be the last to think so. There is not a trace of show or ostentation about him for he does nothing merely for appearance. He may be an example but he would never set one."

A little later Dr. Burton said: "He has moral fibre. To me it is his distinguishing characteristic. There is a moral grandeur about him which does credit to American life. You simply cannot think of him as soft or flabby. He aims actually to do what he knows he ought to do." And again: "In the largest sense of the term he is a patient man. He knows that time will do its perfect work. He instinctively takes the long look. He makes a calm, unhurried, steady approach to the tasks of life. No one can throw him into a panic, for he sees steadily and sees it as a whole. He cannot please every one. Therefore some, for the time, become hostile and critical. This man, in a very remarkable way, takes his punishment quietly and silently."

Guards the Future

Continuing, Doctor Burton said, in part:

"At times he must oppose what appears to some as an unqualified good, because he recognizes its temporary benefits and sees in the distant future that it must work an evil to society. Through all such experiences he walks with the spirit of human understanding. He knows that time will heal the hurt. His sense of time explains the thoroughness of his work and his intolerance for superficiality. He must have the facts as first hand and will not base decisions on a partial knowledge of the situation. He will not be hurried. He avoids extremes and loves proportion. Life does not consist of detached unrelated events. It is a unity welded together by the alchemy of time. He knows how to wait and not be tired by waiting. When he acts you know he will not be impetuous, because he takes time to think to the soul of things. Democracy, in her careless blundering confidence, is in dire need of such leadership.

"Has he a sense of humor? Emphatically yes. It is not the type that wastes time in recounting incidents of ever increasing triteness. There is an alertness about his mind and a nimblenes of his spirit which are very attractive. These qualities do not express themselves in just the ordinary forms. At times you might imagine he had not even heard what was being said. Then he drops a remark which makes you realize that he has taken several steps in advance and has put his finger on the real point. He is not given to hilarity. His humor is dry and delightful and its expression as a rule is just as sententious as his more serious utterances.

"Beneath the characteristics we have mentioned lies something which one naturally hesitates to drag out into the light. There are some things too sacred for public parade, even though a man belongs to the people. When you find a man, however, with qualities such as we have sketched, you inevitably ask for the secret. What is the dynamic back of this moral fiber, this bitter self control, this sense of the value of things, this instructive understanding of work, this quiet patience with the ages?

"It is his sense of the spiritual. No one can read his speeches without realizing that to him religion is essential to life. I am speaking in the broadest and most comprehensive terms. I am not discussing theology but religion. There are at least a few fundamental spiritual realities which are the common possession of men. He firmly believes religion to be necessary to the ideals of America.

"He asserts that 'most of all there is need of religion. From that source alone came freedom. Nothing else touches the soul of man. Nothing else justifies faith in the people.' Toleration in religion is among our most notable achievements in this country. The vital realities of religion alone can satisfy the deepest needs of the human spirit. It is reassuring to know that this man believes in a personal power greater than man; in emergencies, with Washington and Lincoln, he will know that the issue lies in another hand.

"Here, then, is the man. He follows 'right and truth to their logical conclusions.' He gathered it all up in an address he delivered a year ago at a college commencement. He said, 'We do not need more national development, we need more spiritual development. We do not need more intellectual power, we need more moral power. We de not need more knowledge, we need more character. We do not need more government, we need more culture. We do not need more law, we need more religion. We do not need more of the things that are seen, we need more of the things that are unseen.'

"What America must learn is precisely what this man is saying so clearly and forcefully. It has a ring to it which will permeate the world. He has been successful in politics, because he has been simply and unanswerably honest. The hardest thing in the world to defeat is sheer character. Some American politicians still have a great lesson to learn. The first mark of a public servant is not solely the desire to know what the people want, but the purpose to help the people want what they ought to have.

"It is not too much to affirm that the people of the United States have intense longings which they do not entirely understand and which by the very terms of the problem they cannot focus and express. I believe this man does comprehend these intense yearnings of the people and that quietly and persistently he is putting them forth in sharp, incisive utterances.

Rated as "Conservative"

"In America we have the curious practice of classifying men. We attempt to put labels on them and imagine that thereby we have settled something. We have unusual facility in this method because we rarely pause to agree on any definition of the terms.

"As a matter of fact it is not the meaning of the term that gives us concern. It is the implication it carries, its flavor or its color. We say a man is a conservative, a liberal or a radical and for us the term carries praise or approbrium, depending entirely upon our own point of view. Now, this man's Americanism comes to lofty expression in what some have praised and others have criticized as his 'conservatism.' Let us examine the actual facts.

"He uses the past for the future. He is no mere worshiper of the past as the past. It has meaning chiefly as a guide for the future. He recognizes clearly the evils of dead, congealed, conservatisms. His emphasis is on the days to come. He is concerned chiefly about our tendencies. Therefore, he says, 'We review the past, not in order that we may return to it, but that we may find in what direction, straight and clear, it points in the future. His is a sane forward-looking conservatism.

"He does not concede that the present clamor for change proves that our national principles are false or that our governmental organization is weak. Changes must come. Every sane person recognizes that. The real question concerns the causes of our discontent and the sources of our evil. Immediately to destroy existing institutions, because human frailties continue to exist and human nature is not speedily reformed, is scarcely to be called wise leadership. To destroy is easy, but to achieve freedom is hard.

"In fact, he holds that there are genuine grounds for optimism. It is easy to complain and to overlook the great blessings of life. After all is said and done, America, more than any other country in the world today, offers real privileges and opportunities.

He knows that progress will require hard unrelenting toil. To him a better future means continuous struggle and presents a constant challenge. He is no day dreamer, for he knows the stern realities of a work-a-day world. We cannot legislate mankind into a state of perfection.

Here is Dr. Burton's closing paragraph, which was the signal for a mighty outburst of cheering that lasted for many minutes:

"As self-respecting individuals, we can trust this man. As lovers of America we can follow one who is supremely American. As citizens with interests as broad as humanity we can accept his guidance into a new and larger world leadership because he is at heart a human being. To the national convention of the greatest party in American history, I have the distinction to present as candidate to succeed himself as President of the United States of America, the virile man—the staunch American—the real human being—Calvin Coolidge."

The first ballot for vice president showed Lowden in the lead, with Burton, Dawes, Hoover and Kenyon following closely. On the second ballot the convention turned to Lowden and he was unanimously nominated. In a telegram to the convention the former governor of Illinois absolutely refused to accept the nomination.

After a three-hour recess another ballot was taken and before it was finished Dawes was so far in the lead over Hoover that the nomination was made unanimous amid the wildest enthusiasm.

So, with the swift nomination of Coolidge on the first ballot and the naming of his running mate, after a few remaining formalities the national Republican convention of 1924 passed into history.

The Convention City

Too much cannot be said in praise of the way in which the city of Cleveland did its part in making the convention pleasant and successful. First and most important, it provided Public hall, the finest place in which a national convention has ever been privileged to meet excepting that in which the Democrats gathered in San Francisco in 1910. Public hall cost the people of Cleveland $6,300,000 and is located in the heart of the downtown district, convenient to the hotels. Its architecture is beautiful and it seats 16,000 persons. Within its walls are all the conveniences that the builders could think of, and its stage is the largest in the country.

Then there are the hotels, ample in number and well conducted. Their managers looked after the comfort of the city's guests in every possible way and, what is more to the point, rates were kept well within reason.

Cleveland seems to have more automobiles than any other city in the world in comparison with the population, but the able and well-trained traffic police protected the life and limb of the convention visitor in a way that elicited the admiration of all. No one was permitted to get himself run over, whether or not he wished to do so.

Local committees, social organizations and individuals arranged programs of entertainment to fill up the hours when the convention was not in session, and many of the men and women visitors were accommodated by the various golf clubs. There were theater parties, boat rides, band concerts, fireworks and other things galore. Special teas and receptions were given for the woman, and a program for colored visitors was provided.

The matter of providing excitement was up to the representatives of the party, who had none to provide. The crowds in the hotel lobbies, when they were not occupied in the discussion of that elusive subject, the vice presidential candidate, gossiped with old and new acquaintances and amused themselves by picking out from the passing throng the notables. They had no trouble in recognizing the dome-like head of Secretary of War Weeks, nor the bronze face of Bascom Slemp, secretary to President Coolidge; the genial homeliness of Joseph B. Kealing of Indiana and the Lincoln-like physiognomy of Lawrence Y. Sherman of Indiana could not be mistaken. Young Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, aroused mild interest as he wriggled through the crowds, but eyes did not follow him as they did his father.

Always in a national convention the music is an attractive feature, and this Cleveland gathering was no exception. The big brass band in the hall was led by John Philip Sousa himself, and every American knows what that means. In the hall is a magnificent pipe organ, which was magnificently played at frequent intervals. The floodlights of the hall, "plain and colored," were used with discretion and art during the playing of the National Anthem and other patriotic airs. From Columbus came a large Republican glee club which sang not only in the convention hall but at the Coolidge headquarters of the women and elsewhere.

Humorous writers of wide reputation have become an established part of these national party meetings, and they were more numerous in Cleveland than ever before, and perhaps less humorous. Will Rogers, Heywood Broun, Ring Lardner and a score more were here looking for material for jokes.

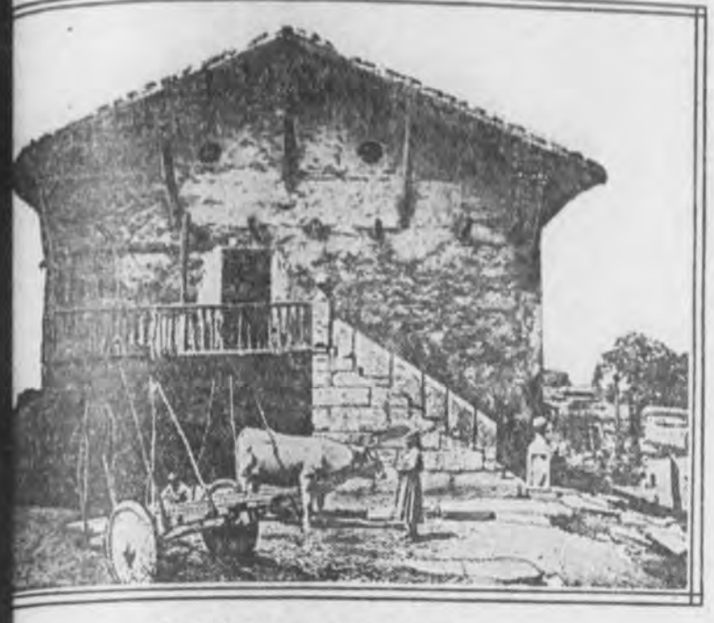
Spain's New England



Typical Basque Farm House.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Those who may look upon Spain as land of the siesta where life flows in leisurely sort of way, have overlooked the Basque provinces at the extreme north of the peninsula. This region centering around the important city of Bilbao has been aptly dubbed "Spain's New England," for there is unmistakable Yankee-like spirit in the air.

The traveler notes the change as soon as he crosses the Basque border by rail. Even the train picks up speed and arrives at each succeeding little station punctually—a thing unknown in the country to the south. "Vascongados," as the Spaniards call them, or the "Euskaldunac," as they call themselves, are decidedly different. Even the Basque tongue (Euskara) is totally unintelligible to the Spaniard, and it is spoken almost exclusively by the peasants of the three provinces of Guipuzcoa, Vizcaya and Alava, though Spanish is used in the larger towns and cities. A Basque newspaper, and there are several of them, resembles Polish quite as much as it does Spanish.

The history of these "Yankees" of Spain, who proudly claim to be the purest unmixed race in Europe, is a tradition of determined efforts to defend and retain the natural rights and liberties which they have enjoyed since time immemorial. They had certain fueros, or special privileges, to which they held through thick and thin, and way back in 1202 they stubbornly refused to become incorporated with the provinces of Leon, Navarre and Castile until the privileges had been duly recognized.

These privileges gave the Basques, among other things, a republican constitution in their three little provinces, immunity from taxation and freedom from military service, though they maintained certain forces of their own.

The Basques helped in the unsuccessful Carlist uprising in 1876, however these fueros were taken from them. Thus the much-hated salt monopoly of the Spanish government was enforced into the three provinces only with the more-hated tobacco monopoly and with the most-hated "quinta," or military conscription.

Bilboa, Second Spanish Port.

Picture a small, round valley nestling among wondrous green hills, some of which are almost worthy of the name of mountains, with a river carefully making a letter S or two in order to enter this beautiful stronghold. That is the site of Bilboa, with several hundred thousand souls, the largest Basque city and the second seaport of Spain.

The river is the Nervion, which has been canalized from the city to the sea of Biscay, eight miles distant, so that ocean-going merchant vessels come and go, passing the Ayuntamiento, or beautiful municipal building, on their way, and dropping anchor within a stone's throw of the Teatro Arriga, one of the finest theaters in Spain.

The hills encircle the city so closely that the ribbons of railways seeking escape from north, east, south and west must find their end only by plunging into the many tunnels.

In likening the Basque provinces to New England, one must mix his metaphor a bit and admit that Bilboa is the "Pittsburgh" of Spain. Along the river, between the city and the sea, are some of the world's most important iron deposits. They were known in the Middle ages—so much so, in fact, that Elizabethan writers used the term "bilbo" for rapier. It is only during the last three decades, however, that vast exploitation has taken place; and now the river is filled with freighters loading ore for Newcastle or for Rotterdam, where it is transshipped into Rhine barges and carried to Krupps and other German iron and steel makers.

Not all of this Vizcayan wealth is shipped in its natural state. Basque industry has caused the erection of many plants along the river, where rails and ship plates are produced. The rails explain why these provinces lead in the matter of Spanish railways, and the steel plates why Bilboa has become Spain's shipbuilding center.

The peasant farmers in Basque land, as is true of the peasants in other parts of Europe, give up the ground floor of their dwellings to chickens, pigs and steers; but their own quarters upstairs in these houses of many animals, are spotlessly clean.

Many Mines and Foundries.

One derives a false picture of the center of Basquedom around Bilbao, unless he takes the little eight-mile side trip from the city down to the sea. Paralleling each side of the river is an electric tramway, and paralleling each of these in turn is a steam railway.

Town after town is to be seen on the way. Along the left bank of the Nervion shipbuilding yards are succeeded by immense iron foundries and smelters, and dozens of steamers are tied up alongside these industrial plants, all combining to fill the air with the smoke of man's activities.

The pretty green hillsides far beyond the river are marred here and there by patches of reddish-brown color, where, in the distance, can be seen the puff of the little locomotives of the ore trains, and occasionally the rumble of a dynamite explosion is heard. These are the mines, and from many of them, stretching for miles through the air, to the loading berths on the river, are aerial cables, to which are fastened buckets full of red ore moving continually from mine to river, with parallel cables carrying back the empties to the far-away brown patches on the hillside.

The river winds its way between these rich hills, and finally, rounding a corner, comes suddenly to the sea. The strong sea breezes of the Biscay blow away the smudgy fog of industry, and one emerges again into sunny Spain.

At each side of the river mouth is a town—Portugalete on the left and Las Arenas on the right. A beautiful and unusual bridge, connecting the two forms a fitting monument to mark the union of the Nervion with the waters of the Atlantic.

There are few harbors more beautiful in setting than this, with one breakwater of stone stretching far out into the sea from the Portugalete side and another, of equal length, from the Las Arenas side. Within the breakwaters are vessels riding at anchor on the deep, blue water, a few steamers and many small fishing schooners, for the fresh fish of the Basque sea are marked high in the record of fish excellence.

Basque Sardine Women.

One of the unique little pictures of the Basque towns on the sea is that of the barefooted sardine women, walking with infinite and unaffected grace through narrow streets of stone flagging, with great square wooden trays balanced on their heads. On the trays are hundreds of silvery fresh sardines laid out in neat rows. And the women cry, "Sardinas, sardinas vivas!" indicating that their wares are still alive.

Among other qualities of excellence, the Basques are the leading athletes in Spain. They supply a goodly number of torreros for the bull ring, but the really noteworthy excellence of the Basque sportsman lies in no more nor less than playing ball.

It is not baseball, however, but the great Basque ball game, juego de pelota, democratic and popular as is the national game in America. One sees the boys in the villages hard at it, and in the cities the fond Basque parent, like the American, is sometimes caused a violent shock by the smashing of a pane of glass in the dining-room, caused by the unwelcome entry of a pelota, a little smaller and a little harder than a baseball.

The game is, perhaps, a more violent form of sport than baseball, and in many respects closely resembles squash rackets.

In a description of the "New England of Spain" some mention must be made of San Sebastian, the second city in the Basque provinces, but the least Basque in characteristics. It is a modern town on the Bay of Biscay only a few miles from the French frontier, the summer residence of the royal family and the most popular of Spanish resorts. It has a fine casino and an unrivaled bathing beach. Indeed, in many ways, San Sebastian is a serious rival of Monte Carlo.

MOVEMENT TO END COMMISSION RULE

PETITIONS TO BE CIRCULATED CALLING FOR INITIATIVE ELECTION ON BIRMINGHAM FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

Birmingham.—The Alabama legislature last summer made the city of Birmingham its own agent and gave it a free hand in selecting and setting up its form of government. Hunter Armstrong and L. K. Bowen, leaders of the movement to end commission rule, declared in a statement.

Bowen, who served as one of the county's representatives, cited an act passed by the assembly, in support of the contention that the anti-commission movement will not require further legislative action before changes can become operative.

All details of the plan for a return to the mayor-aldermanic system have been drawn up; petitions for an initiative election will be in circulation in a few days, and an advisory committee of 15 or 20 leading men and women will be appointed at once to help direct the campaign, Armstrong and Bowen announced.

The drive will be formally launched with a big mass meeting, according to present plans. August 15 is the tentative date proposed for the referendum.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

J. W. Green, locomotive engineer and legislator, of Selma, has won his fight for a judgment against the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers for its act of ousting him from membership during the World War. Information arrived from Washington that the supreme court of the United States had refused to consider the appeal, holding the federal court to be without jurisdiction. As a result the labor organization must pay Mr. Green $12,500 plus the interest and penalties assessed by state law.

A third audit of the books of the public improvement department of Comptroller C. E. Armstrong's office, growing out of the shortage for which William L. Lehman, young clerk, was sent to Kilby prison, was authorized by a unanimous vote of the Birmingham city commission. The solicitor would not reveal details of the prisoner's statement or the name of the person said to be involved; but intimated the grand jury would make startling discoveries on the strength of it when it resumes its investigtion June 23.

The city of Jasper is now planning another large paving project, according to Mayor J. H. Cranford. The plan as announced by Mayor Cranford, is to pave First avenue from Nineteenth street to Twenty-second street and Second avenue from Nineteenth street to Twenty-second street; Twentieth street between Third avenue and First avenue; Twenty-first street to Third avenue and Twenty-second street between Third avenue and First avenue.

The incorporation of the Gadsden Coal and Clay Products company disclosed the fact that near the city a vein of fire clay underlying a workable seam of coal is to be developed for the operation of one of the largest brick plants in the city. The coal and clay will be taken out of the same opening, the coal to be used in burning the brick and furnishing steam for the machinery.

Two negroes, Collier Powell and William Price, were killed in a shooting affray, which took place on the Johnny Gray place about nine miles south of Eutaw. It seems that Collier Powell, William Price and Willie Williams got into a fuss over a blind tiger still, which resulted in William Price shooting Collier Powell, and in Willie Williams shooting William Price. Both died immediately.

Approximately 1,000 members of the reserve army training corps arrived in Anniston Saturday to begin their six weeks' summer training course at Camp McClellan. These are the first civilians to arrive at the local army post this year. Col. Raymond Sheldon, commander of the Eighth United States infantry, will be in charge of the R. O. T. C. camp.

Unless the bids of $171,000 is scaled down Attalla will hardly let the contract for 30 paved blocks in the center of the town, according to officials when the council received a single bid. It was decided to wait for a lower price.

The commissioners court of Green county has let contracts for the upkeep and maintenance of the principal roads of the county.

Reports came from Winston county stating that hundreds of families are moving into the national forest along Sipsey river. The families are said to be from northern cities, and intend to spend the summer months on the reservation.

New rates on canned goods, molasses, syrup, rice and sugar, in less than carload shipments, from Mobile to Louisville and Nashville stations south of Montgomery and east of Myrtlewood were approved by the Alabama public service commission.

A thorough test of Alabama's ancient blue laws is to be made in the high courts by some of the business men of Gadsden who were convicted on the charge of keeping their store open on Sunday. It is said that counsel for the defendants will set up the plea that the law is discriminatory and that it is also unjust. Demurrers filed and overruled also indicate that the drawing of the indictments will be attacked. Most of the 40 odd defendants pleaded guilty and accepted fines of $10 each.

The city water department of Gadsden has just completed the laying of 10,000 feet of six-inch mains in the western part of the city, making water connections for a number of homes and establishing 12 fire hydrants in a section heretofore without protection. About 2,000 feet of 10-inch pipe is to be laid into Alabama City to connect with its large distributing system, thus giving that city a water service equal to that enjoyed by Gadsden, according to officials.

The attempt of the state highway commission to divert the Montgomery-Birmingham highway through the town of Prattville, adding about a mile and a half to the distance, has been disapproved by United States District Engineer R. E. Toms. The state highway body first located the road to pass a short distance east of Prattville with a spur to the town. Later, upon Prattville citizens agreeing to pay the extra cost, the commission voted to route the road through the town.

A large quantity of war trophies, estimated at between 15 and 30 carloads will be available for shipment into Alabama as this state's share of World War trophies, according to announcement by Adj. Gen. Hartley A. Moon. The trophies include a wide variety of articles, cannon, including big howitzers; caissons, machine guns, rifles, helmets, Uhlan lances and other articles

The Alabama officers reserve association will probably hold its annual convention in Tuscaloosa at the same time as the state legion convention meet there July 3, 4, and 5. About 200 are members of the organization and are composed of officers commissioned in the United States army, but not in active service. Col. John S. Sewell, of Birmingham is head of the association.

Ed Kinney, negro, exchanged a probable penitentiary sentence of from one to twenty years for a $50 fine when a Jefferson county jury changed its mind and convicted him of petit larceny after it had previously announced a conviction for grand larceny involving the theft of 307 yards of silk.

The court of appeals in a decision granted Freeman Savage, former deputy sheriff of Walker county, a new trial. Savage had been convicted in the Walker circuit court on a charge of manslaughter. The appellate court held that the circuit court erred in not admitting certain testimony on behalf of the defendant.

W. R. Crew has been elected by the Goodwater council as town clerk, succeeding J. S. Flemming, who recently died. Only two names were placed before the body for the place. W. R. Crew and Robert Wilson, and the vote stood three for Crew and one for Wilson. Z. D. Sprayberry has resigned as chief of police of Goodwater.

The Etowah county commissioners designated one of the Bellevue Highlands streets on Lookout mountain as a public road and ordered it rebuilt from the main Fairview road to the county tuberculosis camp. This was done on the petition of a number of officers and members of the county tuberculosis association.

Denial that he was guilty of the many charges preferred against him in a grand jury indictment, was made in a public statement issued by Sheriff Guy O'Rear of Walker county. Although admitting that he may be guilty of technical violations, he declared, "I have not unjustly taken one cent from anyone."

Alabama is building roads equal to those being built in North Carolina, according to W. S. Keller, state highway engineer, who with members of the highway commission recently returned from North Carolina, where they attended a convention of the American Road Builders' association at Greensboro, N. C.

Organization of a federal intermediate credit association to have headquarters in Montgomery and serve farmers throughout the state by providing credit for production purposes was authorized by the executive committee of the Alabama Farm Bureau federation.

Foster and Creighton company have secured the right of way for a railroad from Waco in Franklin County to the new quarry they are opening at the Kimbrough mountain. The road will be about two miles in length and the quarry is said to be the finest limestones in the county.

According to plans being worked out by the State Highway department, Calhoun county is to be spanned by a paved road from the Talladega county line on the west to the Cherokee boundary north of Piedmont.

GOOD HOT WEATHER DRINKS

A variety of cooling drinks are always a welcome addition to any meal or menu. The following is a great favorite on the farm:

Oatmeal Drink.—Take one-quarter of a pound of oatmeal, one cupful of sugar and the strained juice of two lemons. Add one-half cupful of boiling water to the oatmeal, mix with the other ingredients and pour into a gallon of boiling water, stir well, put through a sieve and chill before serving.

Tea Punch.—Prepare four cupfuls of strong tea, let it cool, then add one pineapple cut in bits, one pound of cooked cherries, the juice of six lemons, one cupful of sugar. Stir until the sugar is dissolved, add one quart of carbonated water, a pint at a time. Serve with a sprig of mint and chopped ice.

Chocolate Sirup.—This will keep until used if kept in the ice chest. Take three squares of chocolate, one ounce of cocoa, one and one-half pounds of sugar, a pint of water and one and one-half teaspoonfuls of vanilla. Boil the cocoa in one-half cupful of water in a double boiler, grate the chocolate and mix with one-third measure of sugar; add this to the cocoa after cooking ten minutes, stir constantly, adding the remainder of the sugar and cook ten minutes. Remove from the fire, strain and cool and add the vanilla. Add a tablespoonful of the sirup to cold milk or ice water; top with a spoonful of whipped cream or a marshmallow.

Fruit Punch.—Boil together for ten minutes three cupfuls of sugar, two cupfuls of water, with the rind of one lemon and one orange. Strain and while hot, add one glass of currant jelly. Set on ice and when ready to serve add the juice of nine lemons, five oranges, one cupful each of cherries and shredded pineapple. Pour into a punch bowl, add ice and water, adding a pint of charged water at a time to give it sparkle.

Boston Cream.—Take three quarts of water and one and one-half pounds of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of lemon extract, two ounces of tartartic acid, and the whites of two eggs. Boil the water and allow it to get cold, then stir in the other ingredients, beating the whites stiff. Mix well and pour into bottles and keep in the ice chest. When serving put in a pinch of soda in a glass, half-fill the glass with ice and fill with the cream. Drink at once.

Help one another, the dewdrop cried,
Seeing another drop close by its side;
This warm south breeze would drive me away
And I should be gone ere noon today,
But I'll help you and you help me
And we'll make a brook and run to the sea!

ABOUT UNCOOKED FOODS

The raw faddist didn't know why raw food seemed to be so healthful; but he knew he could cure anything that flesh was heir to with raw foods. Today we know that many raw foods, such as greens of all kinds, cabbage, carrots and turnips contain life-giving substances called vitamines, which are (if eaten uncooked, not lost in the water of cooking or destroyed by heat) most valuable in keeping the body in good health.

One doesn't object to raw cabbage, carrots, lettuce, water cress and an occasional turnip, but one hesitates to eat uncooked beets or potatoes; in fact, they will need to be well-masked in good rich salad dressing to be very popular with the masses.

Another point which the raw food supporters will tell us is we all eat too much, which we know, and that, when eating raw foods, one feels satisfied with a much smaller amount of food. Thus we may save food and money by being a raw food eater.

We are told also that every bit of such food is assimilated; you find yourself feeling good after the meal, brain clear, wits nimble, and when retiring time comes, sleep like the proverbial log. There is really something worth while in this; it is at least worth a trial.

Cabbage Salad.—Take a hard, crisp head of cabbage, chop fine—or better, shred very fine; add salt and a few spoonfuls of sugar, a generous amount of thick, sweet cream to moisten, a dash of vinegar; mix well, and enjoy a most appetizing salad.

A dessert of a handful of dates and nuts will be easy to prepare and serve, and to the busy housewife who has everything to do—a great comfort. These foods are no more expensive, when time and material are counted, than many of the so-called simple desserts.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Should Use Swamp-Root

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Mr. Durant Finishes His Work—

Shelby county sustains a distinct loss in the removal of Rev. R. L. Durant, pastor of the Baptist churches at Columbiana, Shelby and Wilton for the past 2½ years, to another field of service.

Mr. Durant has been a faithful pastor and an earnest preacher. No man has ever lived in our county who had a higher vision of his calling and who labored more earnestly to lead his people into a consciousness of their opportunities and their obligations as Christians and as members of the Christian church.

His work has been with and for all the people regardless of denominational affiliation. He has taken the position that no group of Christians in a community can prosper in their work at the expense of another group, and so every effort of his leadership has been directed along the line of closer and more effective co-operation of all Christian people in a common cause.

As he leaves Shelby county, Mr. Durant may carry with him the assurance that his labor has borne abundant fruit and that hundreds of loyal friends throughout the county will keep him in loving remembrance always.

Lawlessness Is Being Put Down—

The Birmingham Post quotes W. W. Hudson, assistant prohibition director of Alabama, as saying that "Shelby county is much drier than it was a year ago," so much drier in fact, that Shelby has been displaced as a source of liquor supply for Birmingham.

Sheriff Falkner agrees with Mr. Hudson's statement. He says there is not nearly so much liquor being made in Shelby county as there was a year ago.

That is mighty good news. For the past few years Shelby county has been held up before the whole state as an example of a county that had only contempt for the prohibition laws. When Frank Willis Barnett of the Birmingham News came down to write up Columbiana for the people of Alabama he selected as a fitting and typical illustration for his story a large heap of broken stills and the front page of his paper was adorned with the picture of this big pile of stills.

Much as the law abiding people of Shelby county, who have always been in the majority, deplored this unfavorable publicity, at that time it was difficult to offset it. It was only too true that in some parts of our county whole communities seemed given over to the business of making and selling liquor. Some made it their business to furnish the materials such as sugar, grain, copper, barrels, etc., and they had good business in these lines of merchandise, too. Others made it their business to make the liquor, others to haul it and sell it. So complete was the organization of those engaged in this unlawful business, that some made it their business to watch for the officers and to give warning of their approach. More than that it was said that watchers were kept in Columbiana, right in the very shadow of the court house itself, whose business it was to watch Sheriff Falkner and his deputies and to get the news out ahead when they left town, day or night. Nor was that all. This organized liquor ring, one of the most effective organizations in the whole county, showed its utter contempt for the law by sending its representatives to members of the sheriff's force, to offer large sums of money if these officers would only agree to give but a nod of the head when information as to the sheriff's plans might be needed by those who were making deliberate plans to violate the law.

Even with that their activities did not stop. When the sheriff and his deputies would get by all these watchers, as they did with regularity, averaging for weeks at a time, at least one still broken up every day, before they could get to jail with their prisoners there would be a whole company of men who had driven in in their automobiles waiting to make their bonds. When court day would come, the court room would be filled with a big crowd of men, sometimes of women, who by their very act showed their sympathy for those who were being tried for violating the law.

Thinking back over these conditions, it seems wonderful to realize that in so short a time, and against such great odds, Sheriff Falkner has been able to bring about so complete a change. Today the situation is well in hand. He has done what he promised he would do, he has restored law and order in Shelby county.

Mr. Falkner, his faithful deputies, the state and federal officers who have assisted in the work all deserve the everlasting gratitude of the good people of Shelby county for their faithful, conscientious efforts to put down lawlessness and set up law and order in its place.

Farmers Need Organization—

Experience and observation should have long since taught the farmers that it is only through organized effort of their own that a way out of their difficulties can be found. Men in other callings have learned this lesson long ago and so every business and profession has its organization. Leaders are chosen to direct affairs and the members have learned that it is to their interest to follow the leadership of those who are chosen to lead.

Somehow the farmer finds it hard to make up his mind to undertake the management of his affairs in any such way. When the Farm Bureau was being organized, there were a good many who would not join it. When, through the efforts of the Farm Bureau, a plan was worked out by which cotton could be sold to better advantage than ever before, these men were willing enough to take for their cotton the higher prices thus made possible, but they were not willing to give the farmers' organization credit for having any thing to do with it. When fertilizer prices were cut way down, through the efforts of the Farm Bureau, a good many farmers instead of buying through the organization, gave their business to the very men who if it were in their power to do so, would put the farmers' organization entirely out of business and would then put prices back to their former level.

Since these things are true, the Reporter has come to doubt if those who did join the Farm Bureau and who believes in its plans and purposes are as enthusiastic as they ought to be. If they really believe in this organization of farmers working together in the interest of farmers, they ought to use every opportunity to make it stronger and better. The leaders ought to be thinking continuously about the needs of Shelby county, and regular meetings ought to be held for making plans to meet these needs. Then when a decision is made as to something to be done, as for example, the organization of the Egg Marketing Association which is now under way, it would be easy to get members of the Farm Bureau to line up as one man and give such an effort intelligent, hearty support.

Such an organization as this would soon convince the most skeptical, both farmers and business men, of its value and in the years to come there would come to Shelby county, through its efforts, a greater and more substantial degree of prosperity than we have yet thought possible.

HEADACHES GONE TIRED NO MORE

Gives Credit to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Hopes Other Women Will Benefit by Her Experience

Skowhegan, Me.—"I was sick most of the time and could not get around to do my work without being all tired out so I would have to lie down. One day when I was reading the paper I saw the Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertisement and saw what it did for other women, so I thought I would try it. I have taken three bottles, and cannot begin to tell you what it has already done for me. I do all my work now and keep up the whole day long without lying down. I have no more headaches nor tired feelings. I hope every woman who takes the Vegetable Compound will get as much benefit out of it as I have." —Mrs. PERCY W. RICHARDSON, R. F. D. No. 2, Skowhegan, Maine.

You have just read how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped Mrs. Richardson. She gave it a trial after she saw what it had done for other women. For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been thus praised by women. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Sunday School Lesson

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for June 22

REVIVAL UNDER EZRA AND NEHEMIAH

LESSON TEXT—Neh. 8:1-18; 13:1-6; 15-31.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts."—Mal. 3:7.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Learning From God's Word.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Value of Bible Study.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Bible in the Life of a Nation.

The lesson committee has designated this as reforms, but it was more than reform. It was a revival. It requires the quickening of God's spirit to induce men, especially a whole nation, to turn to God from their sins. This is a fine illustration of the rightful place of God's word in the life of a nation.

I. The Word of God Being Read (Neh. 8:1-3).

1. The Eager Assembly (v. 1). The people gathered themselves together and spake unto Ezra to bring the book of the law. The people with yearning hearts requested the reading of God's Word.

2. A Representative Assembly (v. 2). It was made up of men, women and children. The men did not leave the spiritual affairs to the women, neither were the children left at home.

3. An Appreciative Assembly (v. 3). So eager were they to know God's Word that they did not get tired, although the lessons lasted for five or six hours. Their ears were attentive from morning until midday.

II. The People's Attitude Toward God's Word (Neh. 8:4-6).

1. Reverence Shown God's Word (vv. 4, 5). When Ezra opened the Law, all the people stood up out of respect for God's Word.

2. They Joined Heartily in the Prayer. As Ezra led them in prayer they joined heartily in saying, "Amen, Amen," bowing their faces to the ground.

III. God's Word Being Interpreted (Neh. 8:7, 8.)

The attitude of the people toward God's Word largely depends upon the minister.

1. He Stood Up Where the People Could See Him. (v. 5).

2. He Read Distinctly (v. 8). Much Bible reading is greatly to the discredit of the Word and the reader.

3. Caused the People to Understand the Reading (v. 8). The supreme business of the minister and teacher is to make the Word of God so plain that all—old and young—can understand.

IV. The Effect of Applying God's Word to National Life (Neh. 8:9-18).

1. Conviction of Sin (v. 9). The Word of God is quick and powerful Heb. 4:12). It brings conviction of sin (Acts 2:37). God's method of convicting men of sin is to have His Word applied by the Holy Ghost.

2. Weeping Turned Into Joy (vv. 10-12). When sins have been perceived and confessed God would not have His children to be sad. Continued mourning will not atone for the sins that are past. It unfits one for present tasks and dishonors a pardoning God.

3. They Shared Their Blessings With Others (vv. 10-12). True joy manifests itself in giving to others.

4. The People Obeyed (vv. 13-18). In their acquaintance with the Scriptures they found that the Feast of the Tabernacles had been long neglected. They went to work and kept this sacred feast in a way that it had not been kept since the days of Joshua (v. 17).

5. Separation From the Ungodly (Neh. 13:1-3). As soon as they had heard the Word of God, they separated themselves from the mixed multitude.

6. The House of Worship Was Cleared and Order Restored (Neh. 13:4-14). No nation can be strong which neglects its worship of the true God.

7. Restoration of the Sabbath (Neh. 13:15-2). Israel had long violated the Sabbath. Unnumbered evils follow in the wake of Sabbath desecration. To ignore the essential law of the Sabbath is national suicide.

8. Restoration of God's Law of Marriage (Neh. 13:23-31). When those who had intermarried with the heathen were brought face to face with their sin, they separated themselves from their ungodly companions, because they could not have God's favor while living in disobedience to His Word.

Stress Double-Breasted Coat; Makes Scarf and Blouse Akin

THE present fashion era calls for quite a different set of adjectives to describe our new tailored suits. Such terms as boyish, boycut, garconne type and similar expressions now interpret the latest style trend. This boyish movement so manifest in the modern suit tailleur, accounts for the vogue of the new-fashioned, old-fashioned, double-breasted coat. It is "boycut," if you please, and that is the leading idea just now. So if you have not yet purchased your suit for vacation travel, why not select its coat with two rows of buttons instead of one?

A Thoroughly Up-to-Date Model.

The thoroughly up-to-date model here shown emphasizes the chic of the double-breasted coat and the correctly man-tailored suit. The breast and hip pockets, the sleeve and the perfect contour of collar lapels, express eminently correct style.

Materials most in use in the tailored realm are poiret twills, reps, hairline suitings and the mode extreme favors black satin or those of French alpaca. In making up the latter there is no compromise in tailored detail, as the satin, likewise the alpaca, is as strictly man-tailored as regulation cloth.

Many of the black satin suits are complemented with heavy white satin or bengaline silk vestees, while the tailored satin blouse in white is the last word in fashion. These often sport fantastic buttons, those of glass principally favored, while the newest (here is a hint to the home artist), are hand painted.

A black satin suit which dared to depart from the formal tailleur and which was delightfully youthful, shows revers, cuffs and pocket inserts of gay cotton cretonne. There is a white satin blouse which peeps from the trig coat just enough to disclose a row of glass buttons painted in gypsy colorings. Possibly in the telling, this ensemble suggests the bizarre in costuming. On the contrary, so judiciously actly the same material as one's frock. But we digress from the subject under consideration, for it is of the matching blouse and scarf we would tell, such as this picture presents.

To wear a blouse without a scarf to match is to all but transgress the rules of this season's fashion game. 'Tis a bit of gay colored silk which establishes an affinity between neckpiece and blouse in the accompanying picture. The most popular blouse of the season, according to fashion's report is the one of all white with colorful trimmings. The one here portrayed is of heavy white satin with diminutive brass ball buttons fastening it tailor-like up the front. All colors of the kaleidoscope are present in the silk which is used for cuffs, hip band and scarf. The length of silk used for the scarf is hemstitched, or rather picoted, all around. The fringe is formed of hand-knotted skeins of silk which repeat the various colors of the gay print.

Suit-Blouse With Scarf to Match.

Of all combinations, none is more in favor than black and white. The white crepe de chine blouse with white jabot of the crepe piped with black and white printed silk, perhaps buttons covered with the black and white, a turnover collar of the black and white print and a monogram trim on the pocket, attains to the ideal in fashiondom. Of course there is a black and white scarf to match, and it repeats the monogram on the blouse.

BARLEYCORN AND BUSINESS

A great honor descended on Ypsilanti, Mich., not long ago. President Harding was choosing ten delegates to represent the United States government at the International Congress Against Alcoholism held in Denmark in August. One of the ten was Mrs. E. L. Calkins of "the town with the queer name."

And thereby hangs a tale. Once upon a time—to begin in the approved fashion—a mutual acquaintance told me of Mrs. Calkins. "Left a widow without income or apparent means of making one," the story commenced, as I recall it. "Nothing to go on except that strenuous determination to meet fate, that Roosevelt standardized among American characteristics."

The immediate way out that she took, escapes my memory. But she didn't run off to Detroit or Chicago or New York on the plea that all the money to be made was piled up in the money centers. She stuck to the people she knew. Somehow she got into real estate.

The strenuous determination grew. So did the money. At the time I heard the story the unencumbered capital was, as I recall it, $20,000 or $30,000.

Here comes in the sequel of the tale. I wrote Mrs. Calkins for the story of her real estate venture.

"I was much amused when I read your letter," she answered. "Bless you, all I've done in real estate is just a sideline. My real job has been fighting John Barleycorn. But, I'll see what I can make of it as soon as I find time—if you're sure you want a story on a 'Main Street' scale."

Not unnaturally, she never found time for the story when passports and such more important affairs claimed her time. So here it is with the "sideline" overshadowed by the President's recognition of her value on the main job.

She did not get the appointment through any "pull." She got it because the folks near home, the same folks that she had years before decided were good enough to live with and work with, wanted her recognized. More distant neighbors took up the idea. The state grange, the state women's organizations, the governor and each of his staff, all requested the President to appoint Mrs. Calkins. She had, one might say, the backing of Main Street on the Main Street scale. And it won!

GIRTH-CONTROL LADY

Long Beach, Cal., despite its millions made in oil, has always been rather proud of being a "Main Street" community. Thousands upon thousands of its citizens are retired farmers and merchants from the Mississippi valley. They still keep the neighborly point of view and the neighborly interests that they developed through years of hard work "back home." But they have leisure, and whenever a woman has time, we're told, she thinks about her looks.

This background was the incentive in starting a business in Long Beach conducted by two well-bred, much-traveled women. The business is nothing more nor less than a beauty shop. But it is owned and managed by a B. S. and an A. M., who substitute for the often shoddy atmosphere of such a shop common sense and culture.

The Master of Arts is Mrs. Robert Lee Hatcher, wife of a big lumber dealer of Alaska, who found the winters in the Far North too trying and wanted something to keep her busy. Years of newspaper and publicity training—she was once president of the Illinois Women's Press association—and of work with big women's organizations preceded this latest business. The women of Alaska sent her two years ago on a personal mission to Washington to ask the President to appoint the man whom they could trust as prohibition enforcement director. Her shop is a service station for the national women's foundation for health, which through women's organizations campaigns for such common-sense things as an annual health examination and properly fitting shoes.

Mrs. Hatcher's pet beauty cure is—exercise! To prove the value of a simple before-breakfast setting-up, she acknowledges her sixty years, lets an occasional woman pull her curly white hair to be sure it isn't a wig, and demonstrates to selected audiences the value of what has recently been named "girth control." "The old masters knew all the secrets of color," she quotes her guide in an European art gallery, "but they did not seem to know much about Anna Tommy. Nowadays, to judge by the women on our streets, we've learned something about anatomy, but we sadly lack both judgment and art in application of color. We daub it on from the outside instead of from within!"

AFTER A TEST OF 26 YEARS

Illinois Woman Tells of the Good Results She Has Obtained From Her Consistent Use of Cardui.

St. Joseph, Ill.—"I have used Cardui at intervals for 26 years," recently said Mrs. Asa G. Ollis of St. Joseph. Shortly after my marriage, I had my first course of this splendid medicine. My . . . were irregular and I suffered with cramps and a . . . pain in my side and back. I took Cardui and it helped me. I could see I was better after my first bottle.

"I used Cardui for weakness and nervous troubles before and after child birth. It is a splendid tonic, and, after two or three bottles, I would be strengthened.

"I am the mother of eleven children, seven girls and four boys. I don't believe I would ever have been able to do for them as I have, had I not found a good tonic that helped my nerves, gave me an appetite and strength. I feel like I couldn't have gotten along without it. I used it for change and got along real well."

Twenty-six years' use, when needed —Mrs. Ollis certainly should know what she is talking about after having put Cardui to such a long test. One of Cardui's chief ingredients, however, has been tested by use and recommended by medical authorities in the treatment of female troubles for over six hundred years.

Have you tried it?

DAIRY

HEALTH IS MENACED BY DIRT IN MILK

The cook is as clean as the kitchen towel, and the dairyman is as clean as the dirtiest thing his milk touches, is the opinion of Ben F. Eldredge, dairy specialist of the extension service of the Utah Agricultural college. Unless everything, from the barn, cow and milker to the brush used on the pails, is perfectly clean, the milk is likely to become contaminated with harmful bacteria of filth. One sour rag used in washing a bucket will make an entire milking dangerous. There is no higher art than the production of wholesome human food, Mr. Eldredge believes, and he declares that if dealers who supply even a few families with milk fully realized the responsibility they bear toward the health of their patrons, they would redouble even their greatest care.

The best way to produce clean milk is to keep dirt out of it, Mr. Eldredge says. No amount of straining or clarifying can ever purify milk once infected with dirt or germs. This fact is particularly in evidence in the milk obtained from the single cow who supplies a few neighborhood families. The milk cannot be pasteurized, and too often a tell-tale residue is a common thing in the bottom of the bottle or bucket.

For preventing milk from ever becoming dirty, sunlight and steam are the best possible cleansers. Germs and harmful bacteria can live only a little time, and cannot multiply in the dry sunshine. Vessels properly scalded with steam can never infect milk. A clean dairy barn, dry bedding, a clean, healthy cow, a clean, healthy milker and sterilized utensils are what every producer of milk owes to his family and the community.

Iowa College Outlines Dairying Fundamentals

Following an analysis of the work of cow testing associations in Iowa, dairy experts at Iowa state college emphasize the following points as deserving of consideration as a guide to increased profits from the dairy cow:

1. The production of feeds best suited to dairying, especially alfalfa hay.
2. The elimination of the scrub or grade sire.
3. The use of pure bred dairy sires from good producing ancestry.
4. The weeding out of unprofitable cows through cow testing associations.
5. Rational feeding.
6. Giving the cows the attention that their importance demands.
7. Regularity of milking and feeding.
8. Providing a succulent feed throughout the year.
9. Breeding cows to freshen in the fall of the year except when one is retailing milk.
10. Supplementing poor pastures in late summer with either summer silage or soiling crops.

Phosphorus Is Required in Ration of Dairy Cow

When the forage fed to cattle, sheep and horses consists of crops grown on acid soils or is of the non-legume type, the lime-carrying materials should be fed at the rate of three to four pounds to 100 pounds of grain. Even when legumes like alfalfa, clover and soybeans are fed the addition of lime-containing minerals will do no harm and may do a great deal of good.

The feeding of wheat bran and middlings provides phosphorus which is very necessary in the ration of a dairy cow. While it is true that sodium phosphate added to the ration of a dairy cow while she was dry increased the milk flow in the following period, further experiments are deemed advisable to prove that phosphate feeding can be generally practiced under diverse feeding systems with profit.

Dairy Notes

For the dairy herd soy bean hay is the best annual hay crop that can be grown and it makes a very acceptable substitute for clover or alfalfa when these hays are not at hand.

* * *

Oat and pea hay well cured makes very desirable food for dairy cows or for sheep. It is also satisfactory as horse feed, though rather soft for horses that are required to do hard work.

Cows receiving all the alfalfa they care to consume are getting enough protein to permit them to do good work. On good quality alfalfa hay, cows have produced more than 300 pounds of fat in a year.

* * *

Every cow owner is indebted to those enterprising men who have worked hard to broaden the market for dairy products.

* * *

Corn silage and alfalfa hay are the best roughages for dairy cattle, while corn fodder and timothy hay have proved the poorest.

* * *

For the dairyman who has little or no permanent pasture, Sudan grass may well be used as a pasture crop immediately following the oat pasture.

"I Can't Praise Self-Rising Flour Too Highly"

AFTER I used my first sack of self-rising flour (20 years ago) I ordered more for I knew right then I was never going to do without it. . . . I have never had a failure with anything I ever tried to cook with it. . . . I can't praise self-rising flour too highly."

It's hard to realize how much satisfaction there is in using self-rising flour until you try it. One thing is certain: when you learn what delicious biscuits and quick bread it makes, when you see how the ready mixing reduces your housework and when you realize what a saving it affords, like the South Carolina housewife quoted above, you "can't praise self-rising flour too highly."

Self-rising flour is made from choice sun-ripened soft wheat. Pure phosphate baking powder has been added in the proportion to make the dough properly. As in plain flour it comes in various grades. Ask your grocer for the same grade of self-rising you have been using in plain flour. Be sure it carries the Blue Shield, which is a guarantee of satisfaction.

FOLLOW THESE FIVE RULES For Making Perfect Biscuits with Self-Rising Flour. (1) See that your oven is hot; (2) Always use sweet milk or cold water; (3) Never add baking powder, soda or salt; (4) Use good shortening—lard, vegetable fat or butter; (5) Make soft dough—bake quickly. SOFT WHEAT MILLERS' ASS'N, Inc.

Use SELF-RISING FLOUR

MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE Every bag of self-rising flour bearing this Blue Shield of purity is fully guaranteed by the Soft Wheat Millers' Association, Inc. The contents are absolutely pure and wholesome and comply with all Pure Food Laws. If you are not satisfied with your baking results, the Association will cheerfully refund your money.

It complies with all Pure Food Laws

From Pig Iron to Pompano

FROM PIG IRON to pompano, from shoes to satsumas—the Louisville & Nashville Railroad transports practically every known commodity and luxury from the places where they are plentiful to the places where they are scarce; thus adding to the comfort, as well as to the profit, of both the shipping and the receiving communities.

These figures showing the freight tonnage handled by the L. & N. in 1923, are interesting and instructive: 1,600,000 cars of freight—4,380 cars a day; 57,460,190 tons of freight—157,425 a day.

The reader may form some idea of the practical service being rendered to the American people by considering the articles and commodities of everyday use from the viewpoints of where the raw materials come from and where the finished products are made ready for the consumer.

Look about your home or your office; turn the subject over in your mind when you sit down to dinner today. How many of the necessities and luxuries of life would be yours without the modern transportation systems of America—the finest and most efficient in any country on the face of the globe?

EMOCRATS HOLDING NAT'L CONVENTION

The national Democratic convention is being held this week in w York City. The opening session was held Tuesday when the liminaries of organizing the vention were carried through. It was expected that the first days would be taken up with adoption of a platform and the mination of candidates for presnt and that the balloting would begun on Thursday.

The convention really started t week when a laarge number delegates came to New York when W. G. McAdoo of Calirnia and Governor Al Smith of w York, the two leading candites, came. The bitterest prevention contest in the history the Democratic party was car- on between the followers of se two.

Mr. McAdoo came to the convenn with more delegates pledged him than any other candidate and with the almost certain rospect that he will receive a ajority of the votes on an earballot. Practically all other candates joined against Mr. McAdoo ing every effort to perfect such organization of the minority of delegates as to make it imssible for him to get the twoirds vote necessary to nominate.

It was the opinion of the leaders at because of this bitter warre between McAdooo and Smith ither would be nominated but at the choice would go to some e not regarded now as a leading ndidate. Of these the favorites em to be John W. Davis of West irginia, Senator Carter Glass of irginia and Senator Samuel Raon of Indiana.

Clanton had a fire Saturday ght that destroyed two buildings st of the Chilton Hardware Co., d the Williamson bakery. Three her buildings were damaged. he loss is estimated at $25,000.

CALERA FARMERS SIGN UP FOR OVER 2000 HENS

Calera takes the lead in signing contracts for the Farm Bureau Egg Marketing association, over 2,000 hens having been signed up in this community in two days. County Agent Lauderdale was assisted in the work by Jno. E. Ivey, poultry specialist in the Extension Service, Auburn. A number of farmers signed up for 100 hens each and some went above that figure.

The Wilsonville unit of the association is practically complete, over 1900 hens having been signed. Something over 800 hens have been signed up for a third unit at Columbiana and Mr. Lauderdale plans to complete this unit next. Later he will work Vincent community and also Chelsea community which will more than make Shelby's quota and give the county five strong units well distributed.

OFFICER J. W. ADKINS MAKES A FINE RECORD

J. W. Adkins, federal prohibition agent who for a time was stationed in Columbiana, is making for himself an enviable record as an officer in his work in Jefferson county. Last week he was associated with W. W. Hudson, assistant to the state director, and their record for that week of stills captured and men arrested is the best yet made by any two men in the federal service, it is said.

Recently the papers told of a raid by Mr. Adkins and other officers on a still located in an abandoned mine. The still was some thousand feet under ground and to get to it the officers had to wade an underground lake that covered the bottom of the mine.

UNIQUE SERVICE AT METHODIST CHURCH

A unique and interesting service is held at the Methodist Sunday school on the fourth Sunday of every month, conducted by Brother Tom Roberts. After the lessons are over and the reports are made all members of the school who have had a birthday during the month gather at the altar and each one drops into the birthday bank as many pennies as he or she is years old, as a thank offering. Then follow a few words of exhortation and encouragement by the leader the distribution of souvenirs, and the selection of an appropriate Bible, verse followed by a special prayer.

Last Sunday the group who came forward to make their thank offerings included two of the oldest members of the school, one 90 and the other 85; men of middle age, active in the affairs of life; a young man just ready for college, a young lady who will soon finish high school, and a number of little folks, some of them in the beginner's class.

The money that is given in this way is set apart as a special fund to be used for missionary work and in the years since the practice started a considerable sum has been contributed.

WORK BEGINS SOON ON C. OF GA. R. R.

The work of rebuilding the track of the Central of Georgia railroad so as to straighten the track and lower its grade, will be begun soon. Two crews of men have been stationed in Shelby county; one at Sterrett and one at Arkwright. Proceedings have been filed in the probate court seeking to condemn the lands for the right of way and the petition will be heard by the probate judge June 30th.

The Vida Lumber company of Leeds has also filed condemnation proceedings seeking to acquire a right of way for a railroad to extend from Dunnavant to certain timber lands in Shelby county, belonging to this company. This petition will be heard June 27.

Farmer Has His Inning

At last the farmer is having his inning. For more than a week there has been no rain and plenty of sunshine. Reports from over the county indicate that the farmers are taking advantage of the favorable weather and are making good progress in getting rid of the grass that got such a start during the rainy season. Crops are growing nicely too, it is reported. Two cotton blooms a week earlier than the first last year are evidence that another cotton crop is well on the way.

SCORES BRUISED IN TROLLEY CRASH

ACIPCO AND NORWOOD CARS IN COLL'SION—ONE SENT TO HOSPITAL

Birmingham.—Four persons were injured severely enough to require medical aid and approximately 100 more sustained slight bruises and shocks when a Norwood car loaded to capacity crashed into the rear end of an Acipco car crowded with passengers returning to their homes at Seventh avenue and Nineteenth street, north.

J. T. Mooney, 1406 Fulton avenue, the more seriously injured of the four, was removed to St. Vincent's hospital in Johns' ambulance where the full extent of his injuries had not been determined Friday night. Henry Kelso, ambulance driver for Johns' Undertaking company, sustained a sprained wrist and ankle; John G. Namie, shipping clerk for the Alabama Dry Goods company, was injured about the back and neck, and Mrs. B. H. Samuel, 1845 Thirty-first street, north, sustained an injured back. All of the injured except Mooney were removed to their homes where they were given medical attention.

Approximately 100 people occupying the two cars were thrown from their seats and shocked and bruised by the impact which wrecked the rear end of the Acipco car and the front end of the Norwood car. According to witnesses on the front car, they had stopped, apparently to take on a passenger, when the Norwood car drove into them from the rear.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Chamberlain that William Holcomb, Jr., deputy sheriff, complainant and chief witness, were absent from the city. The continuance was granted by United States Judge Ervin.

Maxwell-Field has been described as a vital link in the government's chain of air stations by Lieut. Col. Charles H. Danforth, newly appointed air service officer of the Fourth Corps area, who recently was in Montgomery for a trip of inspection of the field. Maxwell Field is the only government owned flying field in the area, Colonel Danforth said.

LIVE STOCK

PROPER FEEDING IS REQUIRED BY PIGS

For the first twenty-four hours after farrowing, the sow should have nothing to eat, but she should have plenty of clean water. On the second day she should be fed a light feed of bran in the form of thin slop, and should be put on feed gradually so that the pigs will be able to take care of the milk flow. Young pigs must not get too much milk, because it tends to give them scours, one of the most serious troubles. About the only way to check this trouble is to feed the sow very lightly and sometimes it is necessary to skip a few feeds and gradually bring the sow back on full feed again.

No fixed rule can be followed in regard to the amount of feed the sow should have for the first week or ten days, says L. P. Crawford, farm herdsman at Clemson college, in discussing the care and attention that should be given the sow and litter during the first two weeks after farrowing. Some sows produce more milk than others. A heavy milker should be fed lightly until the pigs are large enough to take care of the milk. A poor milker should be fed more liberally in order to get the milk flow started. It is necessary that the feeder use judgment in each individual case. After the pigs are a week or ten days old the sow should be on full feed.

Pigs ten days or two weeks old are likely to develop thumps. This is caused by the pigs becoming too fat and from the lack of exercise. Often when you think you are going to have a wonderful show litter you will find them breathing hard and with a pronounced jerk in the flank. This is thumps, and we have found that this trouble can be prevented easily by forcing the young litter to take exercise. This can be accomplished by pushing the young pigs along with a broom, or carrying them some distance from the bed and allowing them to work their way back, the former method being preferable.

Assuming that all has gone well for the first week, we would then get the sow out in a lot to herself. A lot containing young rye or rape where she can get all of the green forage she will eat is preferable. She should be fed in addition a well-balanced ration, such as a mixture of corn meal, middlings and a small percent of tankage. Another good ration is corn and skimmilk.

All Sheep Susceptible to Stomach Worm Pest

The stomach worm is a parasite of all breeds of sheep. Fine wool sheep are susceptible to invasion by this pest just the same as any of the mutton breeds, although they may not show the effects of a medium to light infestation as quickly. This is probably due to the fact that their bodies are more angular and a slight loss of flesh is not as noticeable, writes D. S. Bell in the Ohio Farmer.

The eggs of the stomach worm are passed from the sheep in the droppings and will hatch in a variable length of time depending upon the temperature and moisture conditions. This hatching may occur in a few hours or under adverse conditions it may require a few weeks. Dryness or freezing temperature will kill this newly hatched larvae. If it passes this stage it becomes enveloped in a chitinous sheath and in this condition is resistant to freezing and drying for long periods of time. Keeping sheep and cattle off an infested pasture for one year is usually considered necessary for these ensheathed larvae to die and render the pasture free.

Right Feed for Sows

The sow needs the right kind of feed to produce a strong litter. Corn, barley and wheat are fattening feeds and should be supplemented with protein feeds and minerals to produce strong, healthy litters. Alfalfa, clovers, field peas and soy beans are protein feeds. Tankage and skim milk are animal sources of protein feeds and need consideration in the brood sow's diet.

Live Stock Notes

Guard rails in the pen are often the difference between pig loss and pig profit.

A good time to replace scrub stock with pure breds is when the price of live stock is low.

Care ought to be taken when the sows are put on pasture not to overfeed the first few days.

Pigs put on pasture produce profitable pork. Full-fed April pigs will make an early and better market.

* * *

Nature's tonics for young growing pigs are exercise, sunshine, plenty of green succulent feed, and clean surroundings.

"It can't be done," said a hog producer one day last fall while looking at a litter of pigs raised to a ton of pork in 180 days from birth. Yet many have done it.

* * *

Sows to nurse litters well must have some reserve flesh to draw from, and should come up to farrowing time in a fair degree of flesh.

ROAD BUILDING

FOUR-WHEEL DRIVE AIDS ROAD SURFACE

When a man or a family gets used to eating pancakes for breakfast, it takes an extra effort and much advertising to make them believe that there is a breakfast food that is cheaper and better. It is the same with everything. Roads and automobiles are no exception.

We have our present style automobile driven by the two rear wheels. The two front wheels carry about the same load, many times there is more weight on the front wheels than the rear ones. And still the rear wheels are compelled to do the pulling for all four.

In traveling around the country on dirt or gravel roads you will notice the road surface is full of short little holes dug into the road by this pull on the wheels. Because the pull on the road surface with the present style drive is exactly equal to the pull on the tire surface, any dirt or gravel road will give way under such a pull or strain. This strain or pull on the road surface is entirely gone from the front wheels. If we used horses to pull the auto instead of an engine, we would do away with all this pull by the wheels on the road surface.

Now, it was never supposed that rolling a road did it any harm. Neither would rolling an auto over the road do much harm. By driving an auto over the road with all four wheels turning together we would be as near the rolling idea as possible. By turning all four wheels at the same time they simply act as rollers and do not dig into the road surface enough to pull it loose.

I claim that four-wheel drive will more than pay for the extra cost in saving on tires alone, writes J. B. Ketchum of Illinois, in Hoard's Dairyman. It would also save on gasoline; less horse power would be required. It is the big secret of good roads in this country. Until we get the auto perfected and a successful four-wheel drive, we will never be able to maintain any road system at a reasonable cost.

Our present automobile engineers are just about the same as the man that got used to the pancakes.

Highways and Railroads Need Billion Each Year

At a time when the railroads of America need at least $1,000,000,000 a year for their development, the public highways of the country are receiving that amount and more, says the Providence Journal.

In 1923 the sum of $1,250,000,000 was expended upon road improvement, while the total capital expenditure on railroads, including equipment, was only $750,000,000.

This means that we are starving our railroads and at the same time providing new means for their competitors, the motor cars and particularly the motor trucks, to flourish. The situation is unfair, because the trucks are permitted to operate without paying anything like their fair share of the upkeep of the modern highway surfaces of which they take advantage and on which they put a heavy tax of wear and tear.

Trails to Be Marked in Cascade Forest Reserve

Five hundred miles of government trails in the Cascade national forest will have been marked with sign posts every mile when installation of 300 that have just been received at the local warehouse of this forest is completed. The posts will be installed in May, according to officials of the forest service.

The posts will be sent to the McKenzie bridge, Oakridge and West Boundary districts of the forest. On the top portion of the posts will be printed the name of the trail and beneath will be an arrow pointing the direction of different objectives.

Drive Against Billboards

Massachusetts has begun a statewide drive against the billboards that line its highways. The state department of public works has been empowered to regulate billboard advertising by the process of licensing that industry. Violation of the new regulations is punishable by a fine of $100 for the first offense and $500 for the second.

Location of Best Towns

In traveling one cannot but note that the most prosperous towns are along the lines of good transportation, so good roads and good transportation help in the first element of the farmer, "The ability to make a comfortable living from the land."

Roads to Circle Earth

More than 8,000 miles of roads of all types were completed with federal aid during the year which ended June 30, 1923, according to a government report. This, added to the mileage completed previously, brought the total for finished projects up to 26,536 miles, or more than enough to circle the earth. The projects under construction at the close of the year amounted to 14,772 miles, and were estimated at 32 per cent complete.

FRENCH INDO-CHINA

An Interchange of Gossip in French-Indo-China.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

France's empire in the Far East—French Indo-China—has been brought dramatically out of oblivion for the rest of the world by the spectacular flight of Captain D'Oisy, French airman, who in only a few days' flying time recently tied Paris to the eastern capitals, Saigon and Hanoi.

Even the location and make-up of French Indo-China are hazy matters in most Western minds. Southern Asia consists of a series of peninsulas beginning in the west with Arabia. Then follow gigantic India, and the narrow, long-drawn-out Malay peninsula. French Indo-China is just beyond the latter and is the blunt, thumb-like projection that completes the South Asiatic peninsula series.

This French territory is in practically the same latitude as the Northern Philippines and Central America, a land in the edge of the tropics, warm and damp and tremendously productive. Dense forests cover much of the country, both lowland and mountains, and many parts have not been developed or even explored.

French Indo-China, which is half again as large as France, consists of Cochin-China in the southeast, a full-fledged French colony with a representative in the house of deputies; and the protectorates of Cambodia, Annam, Tongking and Laos. Tonking, however, is really more than a protectorate. The other units of that class have their native kings assisted by French residents. Tongking has neither king nor viceroy, but is administered entirely by French officials. The various provinces that make up the French Indo-Chinese union have a total population of more than 17,000,000.

The southern territory which is tributary to Saigon is a highly productive agricultural country. It is, in fact, the second largest rice producing region in the world, being surpassed only by nearby Burma. Sugar, too, is produced in large quantities. Cambodia may play a very important economic role in the future for it is an excellent cotton country.

Saigon and Hanoi.

Saigon, the capital of Cochin-China, was until 1902 also the administrative center of all the French territories of the union. That distinction has now passed on to Hanoi. The city proper has a population of about 85,000, but its suburbs swell the total to upward of 200,000. About 10,000 Frenchmen live in Saigon exclusive of soldiers. With its well-kept, wide, shady streets, and its beautiful public buildings and statues, Saigon is a sort of Washington of the Far East. The city is situated 34 miles from the sea on the Saigon river and has a harbor thronged with merchant vessels and French naval craft.

Hanoi, on which has fallen the mantle of administrative center of the French Far East, is far north of Saigon near the Chinese border. This is a city of 125,000 with almost as many Frenchmen as Saigon. It has ample possibilities for beautification and the French have made the most of them. Hanoi lies on the Red river 80 miles from sea. In addition to the river which serves as a transportation artery, the city and its environs are dotted with a number of lakes ranging from Le Petit Lac, perhaps half a square mile in area, to Le Grand Lac, many times its size.

Both Saigon and Hanoi are unfailing objects of wonder to the few tourists who poke about in the odd corners of the Far East. In them France has accomplished as much as America has done with Manila or Great Britain with Hong Kong or Singapore; and in addition to giving them industries, cleaning them and supplying sanitation, public utilities and good rule, the French have greatly beautified them

IMPROVING CATTLE IS NEW IN AMERICA

The United States has received its dairy breeds from Europe, as well as most of its methods in dairying, knowledge of the use of milk, and methods of manufacturing. In many instances the American dairyman has greatly improved upon European methods, but he is indebted to Europe for his primary lessons. Perhaps it is another case of the pupil excelling the master.

The first cattle were brought to America by Columbus at the time of his second voyage. These cattle were never improved and received little or no care. At least they are not important in the history of the development of cattle in this country. Interest in the dairy business only dates back to the early part of the Eighteenth century. The early settlers of our New England and Southern seaboard states brought cattle with them from their native homes. Scientific breeding was not practiced, so these cattle were crossed indiscriminately and formed that class of cattle that is now generally spoken of as "natives."

Interest in better cattle was evidenced about 1820, when several importations of improved cattle were made from Europe to America. No one of these importations was large, but they formed a nucleus of good cattle that the American dairyman has so well improved. From 1860 to 1880 dairy breed associations were organized and through their efforts the various breeds have been promoted and the breeds kept pure through their systems of registration. Improvement of dairy cattle is a new enterprise in America and the dairyman may feel proud of his accomplishments and be encouraged to greater things in dairy development.—B. W. Fairbanks, Colorado Agricultural College.

Garget Often Is Cause of Great Loss in Herd

Garget often causes considerable loss in the herd. When an animal is found to be suffering from this trouble she should not be milked till the last as the disease may be carried on the hands. After milking the hands should be washed with a good disinfectant. Milk from the diseased quarters should not be milked on the floor but milked into a pail and disposed of. Cows suffering from it may be treated with the following mixture:

Mix eight ounces of a good lubricant, eight ounces of wool fat, two fluid ounces belladonna, two fluid ounces extract pokeroot. Warm and mix. Massage udder thoroughly. Feed one tablespoonful of powdered pokeroot and one tablespoonful of saltpetre three feeds, stop three feeds and continue again if necessary. Diseased cows should be isolated from the rest of the herd.

Feed at Regular Periods

The usual practice in feeding milk cows is to give the concentrates before milking and the roughage after milking, both morning and evening. In addition many dairymen feed a little roughage at noon. Because of the large capacity of the cow's paunch it is not necessary to give the noon feed. Two feeds daily provided at regular periods make a good rule to follow. The frequency of feeding has little or no effect upon the test.

Cooling Milk in Summer

The coming of warm days has made it necessary for the dairyman who is supplying whole milk to the trade to go over his equipment for cooling the product before it is delivered to the transportation companies. It is important that the milk be reduced in temperature before it starts on its journey to market. If it is warm, there is a tendency to churn the milk and make it lumpy as a result of the action in transit.

Box Stalls Are Best

Cows kept in box stalls produce more milk and slightly more butter fat than those kept in stanchions, but the slight increase in product does not balance the added expense for space, bedding and labor. Box stalls are to be recommended only when maximum production is desired regardless of expense, as in testing cows for records.

Feed Value of Hays

Sudan grass, timothy and millet all have much the same kind of feeding value for milk cows, all being decidedly inferior to alfalfa or clover because of their lack in bone and muscle-building material. With hays of this sort, it is necessary to feed much more of expensive purchased feed such as bran and oil meal.

Feed of Record Cow

Alfalfa and mixed hay, corn silage, and a grain ration consisting of the usual concentrates mixed on the farm with an analysis of about twenty per cent of digestible protein, fifty per cent of carbohydrates and five per cent of fat, was the main ration fed to Onyx Lilith, the world's new junior three-year-old record cow for ten months. In that time this young Holstein cow gave 21,387.2 pounds of milk, which yielded 727.61 pounds of fat—equal to 909.3 pounds of butter.

MOTHER OF MIGRANTS

One woman cannot mother all the million and a half migrant workers demanded yearly by American industry. The particular faction that Laura Parker helps consists of families who work and drift through the canneries and truck farms in New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland.

Outbuildings, temporarily turned into human habitations for the few weeks of the camp, are usual. Men, women and other children of the Polish and Italian families employed carry in the meager amount of equipment that will enable them to exist while they work from daylight until dark in a field or cannery. Babies are uncared for. Children run wild. Thievery, gambling, drinking and bullying are commonplaces. The annual cycle is from city slum to berry patch, to vegetable garden, to oyster bed, and back again.

Is it possible for one woman to do anything? It is for Miss Parker, because the Council of Women for Home Missions is back of her. She is the supervisor of stations established by the council, staffed by undergraduate college and normal school girls who work frequently without pay.

The actual work nearly always means a fight with unspeakable filth. Always it means making friends with the mothers and babies. Sometimes it means hundreds of dollars in equipment given by the employer; sometimes only his allotment of a building and $10 a week for running expenses, without which the council would not attempt its work.

Imagine a nursery where 20 or 30 babies can be cared for. Perhaps one bambino has been brought from "a chicken house, where the only furnishings consist of two beds in which eight people sleep, and a packing box which does service for both table and chairs." Perhaps the slightly older children announce that "baths give children measles, mumps and whooping cough." After the babies, cleanliness for the next in size is rewarded by a piece of candy for each bath. Gradually boy volunteers make packing-box furniture; girls like to put on the clean gingham dresses of nursery assistants; a basketry class; a dress-making class, for the older girls and women when cannery work lets up for a day; proud cooks and dishwashers for the daily hot luncheon; occasional parties for parents at noontime or holiday periods; Bible stories and songs; an occasional day spent in distributing to the men helpful pamphlets in their own tongue, "Registering Your Child's Birth" or "Courts of Law and Their Use."

Out of all this comes to the migrants the meaning of Miss Parker's slogan: "A good American keeps his body, clothes and mind clean."

THE WOMAN WHO CANS

It took the war to teach many of us the money value, the food value, and the pleasure to be got out of canning fruits and vegetables. Melita Crawley of Edgewood Farm, Mount Vernon, N. H., cans permanently and profitably. What was originally a summer home has grown into a successful business plant.

And in these days when news stories frequently play up the departure of industry from the great cities in search of handy raw material, it's interesting to compare Mrs. Crawley's wisdom in staying at the source of fresh supplies, five miles from the railroad though she is.

For those who are interested in the business details Mrs. Crawley says:

"Peas are one of my chief crops and best sellers. Blanching I consider essential to the canning of all vegetables. Corn is fully as good a seller as peas. This is also a vegetable which is difficult to can successfully unless the same precautions are exercised as with peas, in the way of quick handling and using corn of the right age. I try to keep all vegetables in a good healthy condition by frequent cultivation and top dressing with fertilizers, as vegetables grown quickly are more tender and of a far better flavor.

"I raise strawberries, raspberries, black raspberries and blackberries, which are used for preserves and jam.

"I find as each year goes by I am tempted to cut down the variety of products I put up and try to handle larger quantities of the best sellers. But when one first starts out in such a business she is obliged to put up a larger variety in order to tell what will be the most profitable as well as sell the best.

"I would not advise any woman to take up this business unless she has a natural liking for out-of-door life and is physically able to do this sort of work. She will need stick-to-it-iveness, and patience, and must not be afraid to work. Such a business never becomes as monotonous as most office work. One should have enough to live and run the business on for at least two years before much return can be expected."

Not Well Since Three Years Old

Catarrh of the Ear Neighbor Recommended PE-RU-NA

The experience of Mrs. J. C. Dacus, 1621 Booker St., Little Rock, Ark., was not an unusual one. It was in fact a repetition of what has happened in thousands upon thousands of instances. She had a running condition of the ear from the time she was three years old.

In spite of treatment it persisted and became very offensive. One day a neighbor recommended Pe-ru-na and La-cu-pia which had relieved his wife of the same trouble.

Mrs. Dacus used three bottle of each of these quick acting remedies and reports that the discharge and offensive odor are both gone.

Her disease was one of the very many forms taken by Catarrh and is known as chronic Otitis.

Wherever the catarrhal condition is located Pe-ru-na reaches it.

May be purchased any place in tablet or liquid form.

Let's Do Our Best For Montevallo.—

On Monday the records showed the enrollment at Alabama College for the session of 1924-25 was just double the enrollment at the same date last year. The dormitory is practically filled and the catalogue has not even been issued yet. A conservative estimate is that 400 girls who will apply for entrance will have to be turned away.

The people of Alabama certainly owe it to themselves to equip this school, their state college for women, so that Alabama girls may have as good opportuntty for training as the girls of other states. There is no better way to bring them to do this than for Shelby to rally as one man for the college and by doubling our quota show to the rest of the state that the home people appreciate Montevallo and are willing to do their best in providing for her support.

The People Have Their Part.—

The Reporter called attention last week to the wonderful record of Sheriff Falkner and his assistants in putting down the open, wilful and organized violation of the law in Shelby county. It is a splendid record, one in which every good citizen may feel a sense of pride and satisfaction.

There is, however, this more that may be said. Sheriff Falkner could not have done the work he has done, neither could any other man in his place have done this work, without the loyal support and active co-operation of hundreds of good men and good women who believe in law and order and who want to see the laws enforced. These men and women have a sense of community pride and a sense of right. They feel their obligation to the future generation and they know the only way to have a good citizenship in the future is to provide a good environment in which these future citizens may grow up and be trained.

These men and women have not been willing to say, "It's not our business to bother with moonshiners and bootleggers." They have made it their business to see to it that the blight of lawlessness was not allowed to fix itself upon their communities. These are the people who have kept their churches and Sunday schools going. They are the ones who have made the greatest sacrifices to have good schools. These are the men and women who have been tried as it were, by fire, and have proved themselves to be 100 percent, good, American citizens.

Co-Operation Proves Profitable.—

Another proof that co-operative effort pays in marketing farm products is furnished by the farmers of Marshal county, who have just finished marketing their first crop of strawberries. When these farmers first decided a year ago to plant strawberries they formed themselves into an organization. They sold 8 cars of berries at a good price and will increase their acreage next year.

In discussing their success the Gadsden Journal says, "Let us assume that the same acreage had been set in berries and that the crop had been the same, but that there had been no organization for marketing. Every farmer knows that under these conditions smaller profit would have been made. Much of the crop would never have been shipped and some of it would have spoiled in the field."

The same thing may be said about the marketing of any other crop that the farmer grows to sell. Everybody else who has anything to do with getting a crop into the hands of those who consume it, is organized; those who haul it, those who buy it, and those who sell it. So long as the farmer attempts to match himself singlehandedly against all these organized groups with their highly paid experts, just so long he is going to fail to get a satisfactory and just return for the fruits of his labor.

When Do We Have Good Government?—

"When will America go dry?" was asked Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-saloon League of America. "When public officials learn to reflect in their conduct, the will of the people who choose them to office," was Mr. Wheeler's reply.

Mr. Wheeler is right. The way to have our laws enforced is to elect to office men who themselves believe in its enforcement. There is no greater farce that can be imagined than that of trying to have good government with men in office who are indifferent, dishonest or inefficient.

The News Gets Mighty Sick.—

It was all right when Governor Al Smith left his office and his job at Albany, the capital city of New York, and came down to New York City to look after his campaign for the Democratic nomination for president, but the Birmingham News didn't like it when Mr. McAdoo came east for that purpose. The News proceeded to read a strong lecture on the dignity of being a candidate for president.

It pointed with great pride to Senator Underwood's example. It said "in keeping with the good old Democratic idea, Mr. Underwood will remain at his home in Washington." "He will not go to New York," said the South's Greatest Newspaper, "and scramble and scuffle to obtain the nomination for himself as though it were a ward political plum! he will not descend to 'grand standing' and banalities, ballyhoo and bunk. The claptrap and spurious enthusiasm of well drilled claquers, the posing, attitudinizing, and the utterance of shallow demagogic sentiments—none of that for the statesman from Alabama!"

But as to Mr. McAdoo's coming, that "gave the News a faint feeling of nausea in the solar plexus region." "It was all so banal" said the News," so theatrical, so tawdry and so cheap. A playing to the galleries and a cultivation of the gawking groundlings, but thoroughly typical of the man and the cause. The only thing lacking was a black-face trio with banjos, playing and dancing breakdowns on the back end of the wagon, while the eager medicine man offered his magic nostrums to the guffawing and diverted gapers.

"In the case of our 'Medicine Man' of Democratic politics it is perhaps not too great a stretch of the imagination to see him taking the money and handing out the bottles, which might very well bear the label: 'Doheny's Magic Oil'."

This disgusting outburst is but a sample of the attitude maintained by the News toward Mr. McAdoo throughout the campaign. Never before perhaps have the people of Alabama seen anything so unreasonable and so unfair.

That was on Friday. Did you read what happened on Sunday? Why on Sunday Mr. Underwood changed his mind. He got down off his "high and dignified" and came hurrying up to New York; the papers said, because there was not enough Underwood enthusiasm. Did the South Greatest Newspaper proceed to feel again "that faint feeling of nausea in the solar plexus region?" Not that we have heard. Evidently it was just as all right for Mr. Underwood to come as it was for Al Smith to come. But for Mr. McAdoo to come, well that was something awful.

A Progressive County.—

Marshall county has recently secured an all-time county health officer who is rendering a wonderul service to the people of that county. The report of his first quarter's work, just published, is in part as follows: 1649 school children examined, of whom 1498 were found defective. 1457 sanitary inspections and 164 sanitary pit privies installed, replacing that many of the dangerous, open back type. 169 complete anti-typhoid vaccinations and 576 examinations made for hook worm. 5460 square feet of water oiled to kill mosquitoes and prevent further breeding.

The Reporter hopes the day is not far distant when the people of Shelby county may have the benefit of this same kind of service. There is no better form of service than that of conserving the health of the people.

One of the biggest jobs before the people of Shelby county is that of building a better system of schools. We ought not to be satisfied until our boys and girls have as good opportunities as those of any other county in the state. What if it does cost money? It will be an investment, the very best one we can make.

With Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Texas, Oklahoma, North Carolina, South Carolina, Kentucky, all instructed for McAdoo and with Virginia, Arkansas and Mississippi all friendly and ready to come to the McAdoo standard at the right time, Alabama finds herself the only state from the whole South lined up as a part of the combination of Wets, Roman Catholics and Foreigners, who are trying to move the earth itself to prevent the nomination of Mr. McAdoo. It must be a lonesome feeling.

The DeKalb Republican sees the prospect of some fun ahead. It says, "If the Democratic Convention nominates Mr. McAdoo for President, it will be interesting to see the mental contortions of the Birmingham News as it twists and squirms itself into line and gets up behind him in the "good old Democratic way." Recent utterances of that paper seem to indicate that they hold that McAdoo occupies about the same position in the Democratic party as LaFollette in the Republican party. But we are not uneasy about The News having sufficient versatitlty to get back in line all right and support McAdoo if he is nominated."

WHAT? WOCO-PEP! Yes sir! We are supplying thirty pumps, and more to follow. Thank you. JOHN T. ELLIS &SONS.

Study Electric Eel

Attendants at the New York zoo having been stunned by current from the electric eel, an investigation has been begun of the creature's power plant. Previous attempts at measuring the current have failed because the apparatus used was not sufficiently sensitive to register the sudden and intense shocks delivered. These, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine, are said to be powerful enough to stun a horse and are described by keepers who suffered them, as "sledge-hammer" blows that caused black and blue marks on the skin. A German professor, according to R. L. Ditmars, curator, has obtained light of dazzling intensity by connecting the current to bulbs, but the flash was over in an instant, defying attempts to measure it.

Siam's King a Poet

The king of Siam has had a villa built at his country place for the queen. It has been picturesquely named Suan Raj Radi, or the Royal Garden of Love.

While the king was attending scout maneuvers he wrote to the queen a daily letter which was in reality a love poem.

On the occasion of the house-warming for the queen's new villa one of these poems, consisting of some thirty verses, was distributed to the guests. It depicted the king as a happy husband and gave an intimate glimpse of his life of love with the queen.—London Mail.

A home based on right principles will be simple. No ostentation or living beyond one's means; simplicity in entertainment, in offering freely of what one has to friends, without apology or explanation.

FILL THE COOKY JAR

No child will ever forget the delight of grandmother's cooky jar, and even the older ones enjoy a crisp, tasty cooky with a cup of tea. In most families the cherished recipes are handed down from mother to daughter. Here are a few that are good and worth saving:

White Cookies.—Take two cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of shortening, mix and cream well, then add two well-beaten eggs and a cupful of milk; a greated lemon rind or a nutmeg for flavoring may be used. Sift four teaspoonfuls of baking powder with two cupfuls of flour, add alternately with the milk and when well blended set on ice for an hour or two to become stiff. Roll out, adding as little flour as possible; sprinkle with sugar as the cookies go into the oven.

Hermits.—To one cupful of thick, sour cream add two cupfuls of brown sugar, one cupful of chopped raisins, two-thirds of a cupful of butter, two well-beaten eggs, one teaspoonful each of soda, cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg, and stir with flour to make a stiff dough. Drop by teaspoonfuls on a baking sheet, add a nut or raisin on top of each and bake in a moderate oven.

Soft Molasses Cookies.—Take one-half cupful of shortening, two cupfuls of molasses, and put over the heat. When the boiling point is reached add one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and ginger, stir well and remove from the heat. Add one beaten egg, one cupful of sour milk and one teaspoonful of soda. Beat well and add about four cupfuls of flour and drop from a spoon on a baking sheet.

One may add different spices, nuts and fruit to the above recipe, making a different tasting cooky.

Aunt O's Cookies.—Take one cupful each of butter and sugar, two eggs well beaten, one-half cupful of milk, nutmeg to taste and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder added to flour to roll. Roll, cut and sprinkle with sugar. Bake in a hot oven.

Man wants but little here below,
Nor wants that little long;
'Tis not with me exactly so,
But 'tis so in the song.
My wants are many and, if told,
Would muster many a score;
And were each wish a mint of gold,
I still should long for more.

EAT MORE LAMB AND MUTTON

Those who object to the flavor of mutton will find if the skin is carefully removed the woolly flavor will go with it. Great care must be taken in dressing mutton, never to let the oily wool touch the flesh of the meat after its removal. The wool is so filled with oil that it imparts the disagreeable odor to the meat if it touches it.

Mutton en Casserole.—Cut a pound (more or less) of mutton cut from the shoulder into serving-sized pieces. Brown in a little fat, add salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Cover with boiling water and one cupful each of fresh carrots cut into cubes and one of peas, with one small onion. Cover and place in a hot oven to cook for three hours. Serve from the casserole.

Roast Leg of Lamb.—Rub the leg of lamb well with salt, pepper and a sweet fat. Place in the roasting pan and sear it well in a hot oven. Now add one-half cupful of water, one cupful of tomato, one onion, six peeled potatoes and roast with the lamb. Baste occasionally and serve with the gravy in the pan.

Mutton Stew.—Take a neck piece and put on to cook in boiling water to cover with one small onion. Simmer until tender, then add a can of peas, thicken the gravy and serve the peas and gravy around the meat. Season well while the meat is cooking.

Barbecued Lamb.—Take cold roast of lamb, cut into slices and reheat in the following sauce: Take two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half tablespoonful of vinegar, one-third of a cupful of currant jelly and one-fourth teaspoonful of mustard. Cook until the lamb is well-heated and seasoned.

Chicken Pie.—Cook the chicken as usual, stewing with an onion or clove of garlic. Lay the chicken well-seasoned in the baking dish, removing the onion. Cover with broth and place baking powder biscuit closely over the top. Just before serving add a cupful of good rich cream to the broth in the dish.

Combination Soup.—Put one cupful of lentils, one-half cupful of barley, one onion, two cloves, one grated carrot into a saucepan; simmer for two hours, add salt and pepper to taste. The onion should be stuck with the cloves and removed, then add a pint of milk and four tablespoonfuls of butter. Serve at once.

LOVELY GEORGETTE FROCK; BATHING SUITS OF PLAID

FASHION is strewing our path with roses this season. Not real roses, but great gorgeous ones printed on dainty georgette or chiffon. As if to surfeit with an excess of beauty, designers devised a charming scheme of outlining these rose bouquets with crystal beads, not allover, but patterning yoke, sleeves and hemline as shown in the gown of corn-color georgette with multi colored roses, pictured herewith.

There is every indication that these diaphanous beflowered creations will prove summertime favorites. Not only from the way the public at large is taking to water sports, it is safe to predict that the majority of these reminders of "what to buy" for the coming months will conspicuously set forth beach togs and bathing suits.

It has grown to be a habit with women of fashion to plan their sports outfits in terms of knitted outerwear. Particularly in regard to bathing suits, the preference is for the knitted kind.

The present mode for Scotch plaid designs is utilized in a very handsome knitted bathing suit, as illustrated herewith. This is but one among many instances where gay plaids are featured in knitted outerwear. Some of the most effective beach capes of the season are plaid-knit and many of the latest sweaters are the same.

Beaded and Beflowered.

White jersey-knit bathing suits with long capes to match, the entire boldly embroidered in black, interpret one of the season's leading modes.

Sportswear stylists also favor one-piece suits with skirts developed in navy blue with allover embroideries in red or tan in connection with fantastic applique designs which are repeated in the border and collar of the matching cape.

Appliqued and embroidered monograms are noted on the majority of knitted bathing suits displayed in opening exhibits. The monogram idea is especially effective on the other-wise perfectly plain knit bathing suit, as it supplies a decorative feature without in any way appearing unduly ornate. When a scarf collar is attached to the matching beach cape, a monogram is also placed on one end of the neckpiece.

Some very striking black and white effects are stressed among flowered chiffon frocks. Such is a handsome model showing huge black flower clusters printed on white. The roses and foliage are outlined and heavily inset with white porcelain beads.

About the most important document drawn up in feminine handwriting at this time of the year is mindy's vacation shopping list. Judging are there exquisitely delicate shades, but some of the handsomest are in very dark, rich colorings, such as deep-toned roses on black, navy or brown backgrounds. These, too, are beaded in sparkling splendor.

Not only are flowered and gay-printed georgettes chosen for party and formal dinner gown, but these attractive fabrics are being made up in simplest possible form for afternoon frocks. They are ideal for summer days, worn with tea-colored lace cuffs and collar, with possibly a ribbon girdle and frequently with merely a drape of the self-material about the waistline. Every woman realizes the satisfaction of possessing a dress of this sort, which can be slipped on at a moment's notice.

REVIEW—REHOBOAM TO NEHEMIAH

GOLDEN TEXT—"Righteousness exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach to any people."—Prov. 14:34.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Selected Stories of the Quarter.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Main Events of the Quarter.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Chief Persons of the Quarter.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—From Rehoboam to Nehemiah.

Three methods of review are suggested:

I. Modern Application of the Outstanding Teachings of the Quarter's Lessons.

For adult classes qualified members may be asked a week ahead to prepare the teachings of the quarter along the following lines:

1. Patriotism. It should be pointed out how the nation suffered and was utterly ruined because of the lack of patriotism.

2. The need of real education. Because the people were not taught about God they went into idolatry. The real need of the nations of the world today is to be taught about God.

3. Evils which afflict society, such as luxurious indulgence, tampering with the occult, necromancy, etc.

II. Biographical.

This method is always interesting and can be adapted to all grades. The most outstanding men in the history of Israel and Judah appeared in this quarter's lessons, namely, Rehoboam, Jeroboam, Ahab, Elijah, Elisha, Amos, Hosea, Athaliah, Hezekiah, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Nehemiah, etc. These can be assigned to different members of the class the previous week to present the outstanding lessons associated with each character.

III. The Summary Method.

This means pointing out the central teaching of each lesson. The following suggestions to that end are offered:

Lesson 1. The kingdom so gloriously administered in David's time reached its climax under Solomon, but because his heart was turned from God through the influence of his heathen wives God determined that the kingdom would be rent from him. Rehoboam's wicked stupidity in refusing the counsel of experienced men caused the work of two generations to be undone in a moment.

Lesson 2. Elijah's struggle with Baal proves that the Lord is the true God and that because He does respond when called upon in sincerity He alone is entitled to be worshiped.

Lesson 3. The proof that Elisha was chosen by God to succeed Elijah was that his anointing of the Spirit was discernible by the sons of the prophets and that he did similar and even greater works than Elijah.

Lesson 4. Those who give themselves up to the practice of sin will ultimately come to ruin. The wages of sin is death.

Lesson 5. Israel went into exile because of her sins, according to God's announcement through Amos. God's word cannot fail.

Lesson 6. In spite of Athaliah's wicked purpose to destroy the seed royal, Joash of Messiah's line was preserved and elevated to the throne. No purpose of God can eventually fail.

Lesson 7. Hezekiah, when threatened by the Assyrians, resorted to God's house and sought the prophet of God. God's house is the sure resort of His people when in distress and his ministers are best qualified to give help.

Lesson 8. Because Jeremiah faithfully declared God's word, God delivered him from his enemies.

Lesson 9. Judah, like Israel, went into captivity because of her sins. God never forgets the faithful ones nor fails to punish the wicked.

Lesson 10. Though Israel's leaders failed, and their failure involved the nation in ruin, the Good Shepherd will eventually come and deliver them and exalt them to their proper place among the nations.

Lesson 11. When the period of the captivity was fulfilled God caused a remnant to return. God never forgets. He can even move the heart of a heathen king to fulfill His purpose.

Lesson 12. Through the reading of God's Word the people were revived and they put away their sins. The only way to bring a revival in righteous living is to bring the people to know God.

Rejecting the Truth

Has God predestinated some to be lost? Certainly not. There is no such thought in Scripture. The reason why some perish is their own deliberate rejection of the truth. "Because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved."

Will Not Accept

God will not accept the oily words of new thought for the sacrifice and atonement of Christ.—The Living Word.

The Controversy

A controversy with one who preaches the word of God, is with God—not the preacher.—The Living Word.

Christian Life

The Christian life is not knowing or hearing, but doing.—F. W. Robertson.

The SANDMAN STORY

OGRE AND MERMAIDS

ONCE upon a time there was an Ogre who lived in a castle by the sea and many times he had seen the beautiful mermaids come up to sun themselves on the rocks, but he had never been able to get near enough to speak to them.

While the Ogre possessed some magic power, he was not able to change his form, so he went to a good witch and asked to be given power to change into a dolphin when he chose, for the Ogre had fallen in love with the mermaids and wished to ask one of them to become his wife.

If he could get close enough he would be able, he thought, to ask the one he would choose and tell her he lived in the beautiful castle on the high rocks and could change himself into another form.

This the old witch did, and one morning when the pretty mermaids came to the rocks a big dolphin came swimming along, but before he could speak to them two mermaids leaped to his back and drove him through the water.

Then back to the rocks the mermaids guided him with some seaweed reins they made him take in his mouth, and two more mermaids leaped upon his back and again the poor dolphin was driven through the water.

All day back and forth he traveled, the pretty mermaids laughing with glee at the frolic they were having, and when they at last released him the dolphin was too tired to speak, and flopping itself up on the shore it fell asleep.

When the dolphin awoke it wished itself an ogre at once, and away to the woods he ran to the witch that had given him power to change shape.

"Rid me of this power to change to a dolphin," he said to the witch. "I have no wish to win a mermaid for my wife. Such thoughtless creatures as they are would not be the sort of wife for me, and I wish to be sure I shall never again be a dolphin, for if once they caught me I might never escape but always be their slave."

The old witch laughed. "I thought you would not care for those water nymphs," she said. "You can't change the nature of those creatures. They are used to having all the sea creatures for their slaves."

The Ogre began to tremble. "Are you sure I will never become a dolphin again?" he asked. "No," replied the witch, "there is only one way in which you are sure never to take on that form again, and that is to be changed into a rock or a high mountain; but if you remain an ogre you may some day, when near the sea, take on the form of the dolphin."

"Change me into a mountain and make it a high one, where those mermaids can never climb," said the Ogre.

So the witch changed him into a mountain and there, looking down on the sea below, where the mermaids sport in the sun, the Ogre is safe from their spell, and the mermaids sometimes, when they catch a poor dolphin and drive him through the water all day, think they hear a roll of thunder sounding along the mountain top; but it is the mountain who was once the Ogre, laughing to think of what he has escaped.

Swamp-Root a Fine Medicine

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by parcel post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

"I fancy I play the worst game in the world," he confessed to the caddie.

"What's his name?" asked the player hopefully.

And the caddie replied: "Joyce."—Pearson's Magazine.

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

NOSEBLEED AND A KEY

IN MANY parts of the country it is believed that a key worn on a chain around the neck will prevent or cure nosebleed. The same superstition is found in many parts of Europe and in Asia. There are superstitions with regard to the key which are of analogous nature. These superstitions would appear to be compounded of two elements; the idea of the ancients with regard to iron as being both a "bane and antedote" in witchcraft and the idea of sympathetic magic. In Asia the iron idea is stressed; in Europe and America the sympathetic magic idea. But in all three regions the mixture is apparent.

In the superstition under consideration the key derives its principal power from the fact that a key is used to lock up things. Therefore, by sympathetic magic a key worn around the neck locks up the nosebleed and stops it.

An analogy is found in the manner in which the Balkan Slavs in times of epidemic keep the disease from their village. Two women go outside the village, one with a lock and key and one with a kettle of water. The woman with the kettle says: "What do you come for?" to which the woman with the key replies, "I come to lock the village from mishaps." And having turned the key in the lock she throws it into the kettle. This is repeated three times at three different places outside the village and the villagers have greater faith in the efficacy of the ceremony than in all the health boards in existence. For that matter, many an American girl has more confidence in the power of the key around her neck (some say it should be hung down the back) to cure her nosebleed than in the skill of the doctor.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

FACTS about your name; it's history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

ARABELLA

ARABELLA, which is bestowed in all good faith by fond parents, only to be cut down directly to the more convenient Bella, is a name of great power and dignity. It comes from the "eagle" series of Icelandic names, which is responsible for many of the appellatives popular in English speaking countries.

Arabella signifies "eagle heroine". The first lady to bear the name was the granddaughter of William the Lion of Scotland, who married Robert de Quinci. Another Arabella was she, who, with her husband John de Montpyncon, held the manor of Magdalen Laver in the reign of Henry III.

The Normans, who made radical changes in all names that did not sound like French, cut Arabella down to Arbell. "My Lady of Arbella" was the title of the unfortunate Arabella Stuart, whose history is familiar to all of us. It is chiefly due to this poor lady that Arabella gained such vogue and had such widespread usage in England.

Arabella's talismanic gem is the diamond. It promises her fearlessness, success, and, if set in gold and worn on the left hand, true and abiding love. Thursday is her lucky day and 6 her lucky number. The violet is her flower.

JULY FOURTH

UPON this day was I made free
From every tinseled sovereignty,
And made a ruling monarch of
A vast domain of human love—
A king whose privilege it is
To serve mankind's necessities;
And in his quest for mortal pelf
To be forgetful of himself;
And on his brow with pride to bear
The crown of service true kings wear.

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

ROBERTA HOOD

ROBERTA HOOD had lived all her life up to eighteen on her father's old farm at Pleasant Valley. So when it came time for her to begin to think of her own financial future, she naturally turned to the city. And in two months she was one of five girls working in the pressing room of the big garment factory that supplied up-town shops with children's fine dresses. From eight to five she ironed dainty ruffles and tucks and plaits. The other workers rarely spoke to her; all went about their business in a dull, determined way; at intervals the manager looked in; and once in two weeks she drew her pay envelope. She became so used to the four mustard-colored walls that she was no longer conscious of anything beyond her ironing board and the shelf above.

Then one week she went home for Sunday. It was April and the woods were full of violets. Roberta Hood picked a big box of violets and moss to take to the city with her. When she left for her work on Monday morning the blossoms were so fragrant that she took a few with her in a glass and put them on the shelf above her ironing board. All that day as she looked up at intervals they seemed something living amid the mechanical routine of her motions. The head of the room came over to take a sniff and said that he came from the country, too. On her next visit home Roberta brought back some ivy, and the five workers took turns watering it and washing down the glossy leaves. Through this common interest they began to eat lunch together. Then they started a window box, and finally they achieved curtains, and a table where they spread their sandwiches and bottles of milk.

The pressing room had become a matter of interest in the factory. Finally, one day, the president of the company strolled in. He was a progressive man and he appreciated the business value of the esprit de corps of this little group. The upshot was a clubroom for the workers of the factory—a room of their own—freshly painted, with geraniums, and a disreputable yellow cat that they had adopted as their mascot.

To open the new club they had a party. The head man in Roberta's room sat next to her.

"This is your doings!" said he.

"Aw, go on!" laughed Roberta.

But the next spring, when they were married, Roberta put extra effort into "fixing up" their rooms. She had learned the value of the habit of bringing beauty into everyday life.

Helpful Advice to Overworked Women

MRS. C. E. CHAPMAN
1920 ELM ST., NEW ALBANY, IND.

DAY in and day out, week in and week out the tired, over-worked housewife and mother toils on, sweeping, dusting, cooking, cleaning and mending. Is it any wonder that after a time a weakness, such as Mrs. Chapman had, develops and the wife and mother pays a toll in physical weakness and pain for her efforts of love, the natural result of overwork?

Women who find themselves afflicted with weakness, pain, headaches, backache, nervousness, irritability and melancholia will be interested in Mrs. Chapman's letter, and should realize that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is especially adapted to overcome such conditions.

Mrs. Chapman's Letter Reads as Follows:

NEW ALBANY, IND.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a weakness which many women have from over work, and from which I suffered for quite a while. I wasn't fit to do my work and my sister advised me to take this medicine. After the first few days the pains were not so severe as they had been and after taking a few bottles I am not bothered any more. I am doing my housework every day and highly recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman suffering from female trouble. Only yesterday a friend called me on the 'phone and knowing what it did for me wanted to know what to ask for at the drug-store, as she meant to give it a trial."—MRS. C. E. CHAPMAN, 1920 Elm Street, New Albany, Indiana.

Another Case of Nervous Breakdown

MEMPHIS, TENN.—"Two years ago I was completely run-down and my nerves were a wreck. I could not sweep a room without resting, I could not do any of my work except a little at a time and the doctor's medicine did not help me. One day some one threw a little book on to my porch and in it I read several testimonials of women who had been like myself. I went right out and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and before I had taken the whole of that bottle I knew it was helping me. I took six bottles and then in about three months I took two more. Now I am in perfect health. I do all my own work and could do more. I can truly say that I know Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound gave me my health."—MRS. O. J. HINCKLEY, 475½ E. Georgia St., Memphis, Tenn.

Church Appreciates Faithful Service

Montevallo, Alobama, June 17.
The Montevallo Baptist church learned with deep regret that Brother William Lyman felt that on account of his health, he must resign the office of Treasurer of the church.

He was elected to this position on June 26, 1892, immediately after he returned from college. He served continuosly until the day of his resignation, May 31, 1924, practically thirty-two years. His books have been neatly and accurately kept and they will constitute an important part of the history of this church, and the town of Montevallo. Perhaps no church ever had so patient, painstaking, careful, accurate, and efficient an official as he has been. Truly he has rendered a service to this church that is invaluable.

The church highly appreciates this splendid record that he has made, and we adopt with a rising vote these resolutions:

Resolved, first, That the church receives with profound regret the resignation of Brother William Lyman as treasurer of this church His long and faithful service causes each of us to realize our debt of gratitude to him. We pray that our Heavenly Father may bless and strengthen him, that he may be restored to good health and that he may be enabled yet to render many years of service for the Kingdom.

Second, That these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy be sent to him, and copies sent to the press of Shelby county with request for publication.

If Mr. Underwood is defeated what is going to become of The Birmingham News?

Some of the Democratic papers speak very slightly of W. J. Bryan but in my opinion he is the smartest one of them all.

Bryan did get off a little on the 16 to 1 but a good Republican said that meant that if he was elected that would mean $16 to every one in circulation.

Underwood let his candy fall, so to speak, when he denounced the Ku Klux Klan and endorsed the Roman Catholic organization.

Garvin Baker and wife of Columbiana spent Sunday here with relatives.

Mrs. Olin McCall and children, of Birmingham, visited relatives here last week.

Otto Baker and family of Mignon spent Sunday with Harpersville relatives.

This picture shows one of the improved dormitories at Alabama College, Montevallo, erected to care for students in view of congested conditions. Alabama College is asking citizens of Alabama for one million dollars to help relieve this situation.

TRUSTEES TO SPEND PROCEEDS MILLION DOLLAR CAMPAIGN

Montevallo, Ala.—Funds collected in the million dollar campaign, launched on June 2nd by the board of trustees for Alabama College at Montevallo, with Dean Carmichael in active charge, will be expended by the regular board of trustees of the college, headed by Governor W. W. Brandon and President T. W. Palmer of the College.

The money will be turned over to this board to be used for expansion purposes exclusively, the building of additional buildings and installation of additional equipment to take care of the growing needs of the college. The school, according to Dr. Palmer, has reached the limit of its service to the state and it is for expansion, not maintenance that the million dollar fund is being asked of the people of the state.

The first thing that will be done with money collected in this drive will be the erection of a large dormitory to raise the capacity of the school in boarding accommodations to at least a thousand students.

This will be followed by the erection of an academic building in order that the classes, which have been meeting in rooms from one end of the campus to the other, may be gathered together in one building for the sake of convenience and efficiency.

Following that the board of trustees is planning to erect a modern chapel, to be a memorial to the Alabama Women of All Wars, which will replace the oldest and most inadequate building in the entire campus, the present auditorium of the school.

The program of expansion will cover a period of five years just as the collection of funds realized from the drive will cover a period of five years.

Members of the board of trustees have also been appointed members of the state-wide executive committee to handle the million dollar drive. The personnel of the committee is as follows:

Dr. T. W. Palmer, president, Governor W. W. Brandon, Judge W. H. Tayloe of Uniontown, M. V. Joseph of Birmingham, A. V. Lee of Gadsden, W. T. Sheehan of Montgomery, Dr. J. W. Abercrombie of Montgomery, Dean O. C. Carmichael of Montevallo, L. M. Moseley of Union Springs, W. J. Dansby of Butler, Judge R. B. Evins of Birmingham, J. B. Ellis of Selma, Virgil Bouldin of Huntsville and Landers W. Sevier of Birmingham.

STILL NO CHOICE ON 37TH BALLOT

"McAdoo is feeling fine" were the first words to come over the radio from the convention hall in New York City, Wednesday morning.

The roll call of the 37th ballot was finished at 10 minutes to 1, o'clock our time, Wednesday. The vote was as follows: McAdoo 444½; Smith, 321; Davis 107; Underwood 39½. No other changes of importance. On the 34th ballot Oklahoma went back to McAdoo and Mississippi went for him for the first time, which accounts for his gain.

History of Terrapin

In the year 1881, my brother, James W. Lacey, in his rambles on the farm, found a upland terrapin and with his pocket knife, carved on its back his initials and date. Twenty-five years later he found the same terrapin again and carved the year 1896. August the 21st 1915, Bryan Harris, a little nephew of James W. Lacey, found the same terrapin not more that one hundred yards from where it had the first figures carved on its back thirty-four years ago. Today, June 21, 1924, while rambling along the banks of Beaver Dam Creek near Maylene, I captured this terrapin again. I at once recognized him by the figures carved on his back 43 years ago. This seems to be his favorite resort as he was not more than one hundred yards from where he was first "initiated.

DEADLOCK HOLDS IN ...L. CONVENTION

The national Democratic convention in New York was still in session Wednesday morning. The convention adjourned Tuesday night at 9:40, our time, at the end of the thirtieth ballot for a nomination for president with no choice. The balloting was not begun until Monday morning; 15 ballots having been taken on Monday and 15 on Tuesday.

As was expected the convention was deadlocked by the friends of W. G. McAdoo of California and Governor Al Smith of New York. Mr. McAdoo received the highest vote on the first ballot, 431½, and he held the lead up to the time of adjournment Tuesday night. On the last ballot Monday night his vote rose to 479. On the last ballot Tuesday night it dropped to 415½. Governor Smith started with 241 on the first ballot and on the thirtieth ballot received 323½; John W. Davis of West Virginia received 31 votes on the first ballot and 126½ on the 30th ballot. Senator Underwood of Alabama received 42½ on the first ballot and 39½ on the thirtieth.

The convention was one of the stormiest in the history of the Democratic party. The work of writing and adopting a platform was not completed until after midnight Saturday night. Usually this part of the work is completed not later than Wednesday night and the balloting for president begins on Thursday.

Besides a determined fight made to write into the platform a plank demanding American entrance into the League of Nations, which was finally voted down, there was a more determined effort made by a group of leaders, consisting of Senator Underwood of Alabama, Governor Smith of New York, George Brennan of Illinois, and E. H. Moore of Ohio, to have written into the platform a plank denouncing by name the Ku Klux Klan. This proved to be the big fight of the whole convention, taking up more time and arousing more bitterness than any other issue. This effort also failed.

The platform proposes a referendum on the League of Nations; declares for religious freedom and condemns all efforts to arouse religious dissension.

AN EXPLANATION

In signing the agreement to close Thursday afternoons the Reporter had this understanding, with those carrying around the agreement: That we would continue at work in order to get out the week's mail and to do job work already on the hook. We have not taken in one penny of new business on a Thursday afternoon since the closing agreement went into effect nor will we so long as the agreement lasts.

NEW YORK MANSION THAT FIGURED IN REVOLUTION

De Voe House Has Sheltered Famous Figures of the Early Days.

Now Occupied by Granddaughter of Patriot Who Rendered Valuable Services to the Country.

Long before the days when Times square had acquired the dignity of a pasture a sturdy white house was erected on the slope of a hill near the Harlem river at a point now known as Highbridge district, the New York Herald-Tribune says. It was a simple structure, with patriarchal porch and massive paneled doors fashioned to resist sudden attack. Loopholed shutters were hung ready for emergency, the chimney was constructed of brick brought from England and to the handful of neighbors it was regarded as the last word in modern dwellings. They referred to it with civic pride when entertaining visitors from the seaport metropolis of New York.

Today the same house rests amid blocks of towering apartments. Few passersby are aware that it is the home of a granddaughter of the Revolution or realize the important part it had in the making of this nation. The floors creaked often under the stately tread of Washington, the courtly Lafayette danced the minuet there, while the bluff Rochambeau, soldier fashion, toasted success to war from many a flagon while seated in its dining room.

Memories of Lafayette.

"I can well remember the stories my grandfather told of Lafayette. So gentle, so merry, yet so brave, the marquis was the favored one of all," said Mrs. Emma C. De Voe, granddaughter of the Revolution, who dwells in this house of glorious memories. Mrs. De Voe is eighty-four years old. Her grandfather was Andrew Corsa, who died about the middle of the last century. He was the last of the Westchester guides, that troop of hardy men who braved death by the noose to circumvent the enemy and swore by the steel to ask no quarter in battle. They were the eyes and ears of the Continental army in this section.

The story of Andrew Corsa, whose picture hangs in the front room, with an ivory card of invitation to Washington's inauguration thrust in a corner of the frame, reads like a chapter from one of Cooper's novels. At the age of sixteen he was rendering important services to scouting parties that approached the British lines. A few years later he was riding at the right hand of the leader of the Colonial forces, a trusted adviser during the campaign before New York in 1781, toward the close of the Revolution.

Son of Stanch Tory.

As the records which Mrs. De Voe possesses show, when the Revolutionary troubles began Capt. Isaac Corsa, father of Andrew, held a commission under the crown and remained a stanch Tory to the end of the conflict. His estate comprised the land now occupied by St. John's college, a short distance from the scenes of his son's romance. He was unbending in his belief that the king could do no wrong. From the early days of the struggle for independence young Andrew looked askance at his father's scarlet coat, and his zeal for American liberty overcame all family considerations.

"Acquainted with all the passages about Kingsbridge, Fordham and Morrisania, my grandfather's services were anxiously sought," continued Mrs. De Voe, referring to a memorandum which she had at hand. "In the summer of 1781, after the allied forces had been encamped upon the heights of Greenburg for several weeks, Washington and Rochambeau made ready for a formidable movement toward the lines of the enemy. Those were trying days indeed, I can well remember hearing grandfather say when talking about the war. It seems like yesterday that he sat in his great chair sketching old battle plans on the ground with his cane. I was a very small girl at the time.

"Count Mathew Dumas and several other young officers belonging to the French staff who had been mapping the country hereabouts were ordered to set out at daylight and to push forward until they came within sight of the enemy's most advanced redoubts at the northern end of Manhattan island. The command was given to Count Dumas, while Cornelius Oakley of White Plains was selected to act as principal guide, accompanied by his cousin, James Oakley, and by grandfather.

Drove in British Outposts.

"Below Milesquare the reconnoitering party found a junction with a body of American light infantry. The allied detachments then attacked and dispersed a strong patrol of British regulars and soon afterward drove across Kingsbridge the chasseurs that occupied the Hessian outposts.

"Because of Grandfather Corsa's exact knowledge of the country his services were of prime importance. For hours he was constantly on horseback, giving counsel to Washington, Rochambeau, Lanzun and other generals while they passed through the fields of Morrisania, Fordham and Yonkers.

"Now we come to an incident which I always liked to hear grandfather describe, for, young as I was, it appeared highly humorous and he had such a droll way of telling it. Grandfather was mounted on a spirited horse, noted for speed, but which never before had been under fire. When the allies, marching east near the Bronx river, came in sight of the enemy the fire which the British artillery opened upon them was so terrible that the horse turned tail and galloped for safety behind the old Morrisania mill. With great difficulty grandfather managed to rein him in. Looking back, he saw Washington, Rochambeau and the other officers riding calmly along, as though nothing unusual was occurring. He forced his mount to return and resumed his place in the order of march. The officers, with good-natured laughter, welcomed him back.

"At the termination of the engagement Washington was loud in his praise of this boy, whose knowledge of the country had been of so great assistance. This is shown by the official letters that grandfather received.

"Every member of the Westchester guides was a personal friend of his. He himself was the youngest member of the company."

Washington Frequent Visitor.

Even in the busy years which marked the real formation of the republic Washington did not forget the hospitality of the De Voe house, and several times he was a guest there while making tours of the old campaign ground. One of the chairs, now standing at rigid attention against the wall, was a prime favorite with the general, and a scar on one of the arms is said to have been made by his sword hilt. The old clock by which he measured the length of his visits stands in the hall with folded hands. A wooden pin in its once busy mechanism has gone awry, so the ancient timepiece silently faces the door which has opened to the touch of so many notables.

To the Marquis de Lafayette the house had a fascination which extended into the days of his old age. He had learned to look upon it as a haven wherein to cast aside the cares in war.

So many thrilling facts associated with the birth of the nation are clustered about the little white house and the family which has occupied it from one generation to another until the present it would need a volume to chronicle all of them. The De Voes, who helped to carve history with their swords, have been in this country since 1677. The first to make his home in the New world was Frederick De Voe, or, as the name then was spelled, De Veaux. His lands extended over many acres.

Now the homestead, with its bit of land, shelters only the granddaughter of the Revolution and her son, Chauncey De Voe. To her son Mrs. De Voe is the "most remarkable mother in the universe." As he bends to say good night, while she places her hand upon his silvering hair, it seems as if the days of Lafayette himself had returned to the house on the Harlem

Strong faith had answered doubt and silenced fear,
And love of freedom, mothering resolve,
Faced down the dangers which bold deeds involve
When Right and Wrong on challenged front draw near,
And one road only seems to Duty clear!
Tho' fingers trembled, courage
gripped the pen,
And names were written—
names of simple men
Thus made immortal and forever dear.
Undying words above undying names,
From thee anew the living spirit
flames
In every soul that still loves liberty!
O, flames, consume the false gods of our day,
Dispel the fog of error, light
the way
Where travels Truth, Who makes and keeps us free!

Lesson for July 6

THE BIRTH OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:7-20.

GOLDEN TEXT—"For unto you born this day in the city of David Savior which is Christ the Lord," Luke 2:11.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Baby Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—What the Shepherds Saw and Heard.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Greatest Event in the World's History.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Great Hopes Centered in the Birth of Christ.

I. Jesus' Birth Foretold (Micah 5:2).

This prediction was made some years before. God moved the emperor to enforce the decree of taxation in time to cause Mary to be at Bethlehem.

II. Jesus' Birth Announced to Mary and Joseph (Luke 1:26-38).

The mighty archangel Gabriel was sent by God to the little town of Nazareth to Mary, a Jewish maiden, who was betrothed to a carpenter of the village by the name of Joseph, solemnly announcing that she should have birth to the Messiah and that this child should not be Joseph's son but should be the child of the Holy Ghost (Matt. 1:18-21). Later the angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph, also, making the same announcement to him, and added that the child should be called Jesus which means that Jehovah will save His people from their sins (Matt. 1:21).

III. The Prediction Fulfilled (v. 7).

This took place at a most propitious time. The Jews were under the power of the Romans. Not only did the birth of Christ occur when all systems of religion and morality were tottering upon their foundations but at a time most suitable for the introduction of the Gospel. The whole world being under one rule made it possible for Christ's ministers to go from city to city and country to country unmolested. The Almighty rules in the whole universe and is never behind in His administration.

The surroundings of Christ at His birth were of a humble sort. The Eternal God condescended to be incorporated with humanity—to be born in a manger, becoming the poorest of the poor that none might be hindered in coming unto Him.

IV. Christ's Birth Announced (vv. 8-14).

1. By Whom? The first Gospel sermon was preached by an angel of the Lord. Thus we see that the exalted ministers of God were interested in men and had part in the announcement of God's plan of salvation.

2. To Whom? His birth was announced to the shepherds who were keeping watch over their flocks by night. The fact that the glorious Gospel message was first sounded forth to them shows that poverty is no barrier to its reception. God does not reveal Himself primarily to the princes and great men of the earth, but often times conceals from such and discloses to the poor. (James 2:5).

3. The Nature of the Message. It was good tidings of great joy. It was good tidings because the darkness of heathendom, which had so long covered the earth, was beginning to vanish. The casting out of Satan, the prince of this world, was about to take place. Liberty was soon to be proclaimed to those who were in bondage. The way of salvation was to be open to all. No longer was the knowledge of God to be confined to the Jews, but offered to the whole world. Glorious news this. So glorious that a multitude of the heavenly host accompanied this announcement with their song of praise. Thus we see that the first Gospel sermon was in the open air. The minister was the angel of God, the choir were the angels, the audience made up of humble shepherds.

V. The Shepherds Investigating (vv. 15, 16).

They did not stop to argue or raise questions, though these things were no doubt passing strange to them. They went immediately to Bethlehem where they made an investigation and found everything just as represented. They had the privilege of first gazing upon the world's Savior, the Christ, the Lord of glory. They returned with gratitude in their hearts, praising God for all those wonderful things which He had revealed unto them.

VI. The Shepherds Witnessing (vv. 17-20).

They found things as announced. When they beheld the Lord of glory they could not remain silent. Therefore, they went back praising God. Those who really hear the Gospel message cannot be silent. If they really hear they must tell it out to others.

ARTFUL ENSEMBLE COSTUME; EXQUISITE LACE FROCKS

ONE vogue no sooner becomes established than along comes another to contend for right of supremacy. Just now the rivalry is between the boyish tailored suit of almost superlative simplicity versus the fanciful three-piece model which, according to modern fashion phrasing, bears the impressive title "ensemble costume." According to latest reports votes are casting very much in favor of just such a charming three-in-one suit version as you see portrayed in this picture. This handsome model is styled of pretty colored faille with matching linen crash ornately embroidered in wool gay in Russian colorings.

Noted everywhere in Paris today, and just as popular on this side of the briny blue, is the suit ensemble styled of two materials. In these composite costumes the very latest is for the upper portion of the straight line dress and the lining of its companion coat to be made of the very self-same high-colored printed silk.

A suit of striking composition employs black artificial satin for its foundation material with its jacquette lined with vivid plaid silk, the waist portion of the frock utilizing the plaid for trimming details. In this connection be it said that so-called artificial satin is listed as a favorite medium for this season's suits and coats.

The black and white vogue is carried out very effectively in the three-piece suit. The coat and skirt portion are of course black, with the lining of the wrap and the long tunic-like top of the dress of white crepe de chine. Sometimes silver braid finishes off the edges where lining and coat meet.

Clad in a fairy-like frock of finest embroidered net and lace, a vision of enchanting loveliness is she who graces the 1924 summer landscape. Dress art attains its ideal in the exquisite lace raiment as designed for the fortunate summer girl and matron of fashion of today. Not the slightest detail is omitted which contributes to the picture.

Even the silken underslip must be a certain subtle delicate pink, petal pink preferred, although peach tint is also a favorite. The fine embroidered net with daisies and roses and flowerettes with vines trellising its surface in hand embroidery effect, is most always combined with other lace, such as, for instance, the sheer lace flounce and upper waist portion shown in the model here pictured. For the cluster of soft satin loops a deeper rose pink is selected. Even the hosiery will be flesh tinted, for it is the fashion that accessories all match in color symphony. Typical of the choicest in lace modes, as designed for country club and garden party wear, is the model shown in the picture.

Not for many seasons has costume been so completely under the magic sway of lace. Not only does the mode call for ten-colored lace and net frocks, but filmy black lace creations are featured throughout all fashion.

The most delicate chantilly black lace is the chosen kind, made up very often in combination with sheer black chiffon. These transparent frocks veil either white or pale pink costume slips. One of the whims of fashion, this season, is to combine petal pink or peach with black. When the underslip is pink with black overmisting it, as it were, the mode calls for pink gardenias clustered at the girdle.

Oatmeal Scrapple.

Cook a shank of beef in plenty of water and when tender chop the meat and reserve the broth. Cook as much oatmeal in the broth as it will take, making a mixture thick enough to mold. When the oatmeal is well cooked, add the chopped meat, stir until well mixed and put into a bread pan rinsed in cold water to mold. Slice and fry for breakfast or any meal.

Springtime Salad.

Arrange a chilled salad bowl which has been rubbed with a clove of garlic with well-washed and dried lettuce, sprinkle over it three or four tablespoonfuls of finely minced green onions, stems and all. Garnish with thinly sliced red radishes and serve with well-seasoned French dressing. The blanched leaves of dandelions may be used in place of the lettuce. These may be found under leaves or in sheltered spots away from the light.

Scalloped Macaroni and Eggs.

Cook the macaroni, and the eggs in the shell, until hard, put them in layers, sliced, with the macaroni and white sauce. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake until the crumbs are brown.

Just whistle a bit if the day is dark,
And the sky be overcast;
If mute be the voice of the piping lark,
Why, pipe your own small blast.

REFRESHING ICES AND DRINKS

While the raspberries are in season look up all the good ways of preserving that delicious berry. Here is one that will be cherished when once used:

Raspberry Shrub. — Take twice as much measure for measure, of fresh raspberries as vinegar. Put over the heat in a granite kettle and cook until the fruit is mushy. Strain through a muslin cloth and to each quart of this juice add a pound of sugar. Bring to the boiling point again and then bottle and seal. When serving allow two tablespoonfuls of the shrub to a glass of iced water. Cider vinegar of the best quality should be used and if very acid may be diluted with a little water.

Raspberry Lacto.—Take a pint of raspberry juice or as much juice as may be pressed from a quart of ripe berries; add a cupful of sugar and a quart of good, rich, fresh buttermilk. Freeze and serve in sherbet cups. This is a most refreshing frozen dish and not so cloying to the taste as frozen creams.

Raspberry and Pieplant. — Take twice as much diced pie plant as berries; cook together, adding sugar to make a rich preserve. Can as usual. This combination can hardly be told from the entire berry, as the rhubarb is wholly disguised by the flavor of the raspberry. Strawberries, pineapple and other flavored fruits may be used with good results. As pieplant is cheap, and most berries rather expensive, this makes quite a saving.

Orange Frosting.—To one cupful of confectioners' sugar add the grated rind and juice of an orange with a bit of yellow coloring. Beat until smooth, adding a little cream if needed for richness.

Graham Cracker Cake.—Cream two tablespoonfuls of butter, add one and one-fourth cupfuls of sugar, one and one-half cupfuls of sour milk, two eggs well beaten, thirty-two graham crackers rolled very fine, a little lemon extract, salt and one teaspoonful of soda. Mix and bake in layers, using a lemon cream for filling.

Coffee Jelly.—Take one-fourth of a box of gelatin; soak fifteen minutes in one-fourth cupful of water. Pour over one cupful of boiling coffee and three tablespoonfuls of sugar. Strain and pour into molds. When partly cold add a tablespoonful of finely-cut nuts. Serve with whipped cream slightly sweetened. Garnish with halves of walnut meats.

An economical table pad may be made of several thicknesses of newspapers sewed together and cut to fit the table top. Cover with an old sheet top and bottom and a pad that costs nothing but the time of making will be made.

Mrs. Shaw Calls Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a God-Send to Sick Women

Cambridge, Maine.—"I suffered terribly with pains and soreness in my sides. Each month I had to go to bed, and the doctor told me I simply had to go under an operation before I could get help. I saw your advertisement in the paper, and I told my husband one day to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before I took the third dose I felt better. I took it four times a day for two years, getting better all the time, and now for four years I don't have any pains. After taking the medicine for two years I had another child—a lovely baby girl now four years old—the life of our home. I do praise this medicine. It is a Godsend to women who suffer with female troubles and especially for pains at the periods. I surely was very bad once, and I know that Lydia E. Mastering a Torrent

What is considered an important engineering triumph has been accomplished in the Swiss Alps in harnessing, with specially constructed turbines, a stream of water flowing at the rate of 540 feet a second, or more than six miles a minute, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine. The column of water has the strength and rigidity of a steel bar, and such force that each of the four 3,000-horse power units in the plant is driven with a stream only one and three-eighths inches in diameter. To withstand the terrific pressure, special apparatus had to be built. The water is taken from the Lake of Fully and flows through three miles of steel pipe with a fall of approximately one mile to reach the turbines.

Shelby County Reporter

LUTHER FOWLER, :: Editor and Publisher

SUBSCRIPTION, :: : :: the year $1.50

Entered at the Columbiana, Alabama, Postoffice, as second class mail, under act of Congress of March 3rd, 1879.

We Must Enlarge Our High School.—

With the increased enrollment of last year Shelby County High School in Columbiana has reached the limit of its capacity to serve the people of Shelby county. If the school is to continue to grow an additional building must be provided.

And the school must be permitted to grow. Each year the boys and girls in ever increasing numbers will be finishing the grammar schools and coming here for their training. Not to make provisions for them is unthinkable. While our enrollment for last year reached 148, a very satisfactory figure as compared with previous years, the enrolment in some of the county high schools was more than double ours. The only way for us to have a larger enrollment is to enlarge our facilities. It is the opinion of Mr. Parker, who has given careful thought, that the most practicable plan for relieving the crowded condition and providing room for more students is to provide a separate building for the home economics department. If this were done Alabama Colelge would furnish an additional teacher. Then every girl in school might be given training in home economics—at present only a limited number may have this training. Already the work of raising funds for such a new building has been started. The High School Alumni Association has received pledges, payable in five years for nearly $1,400. This work should be pushed until every citizen in the county has had opportunity to make a pledge.

A Clean-Up Campaign Would Help Columbiana.—

Columbiana is in many respects a good town. It has good people, people who believe in and support churches, Sunday schools and schools. They are constantly at work improving their homes—either providing more conveniences or improving appearances. There are some things, however, that are being over looked that ought to receive attention. The general appearance of the town is not what it ought to be. Our sidewalks, such as we have, are getting badly crowded with weeds. The ditches alongside our streets and a good many vacant lots have more the appearance of an old field turned out to grow up in weeds, rather than being in the heart of a progressive town. Along the sidewalks and streets, on vacant lots and around some homes are unsightly fences and old out buildings that are no longer needed. Worse than these are accumulations of trash of all sorts and kinds from tin cans both up and down the list.

The Reporter believes that somethnig should be done to remedy this situation. If the Ladies' Culture Club and the Exchange Club would set themselves to the task of leading the movement for a clean-up campaign and really see it through to completion, they would in that one one achievement justify all the effort and the expense that has been made to organize these clubs and keep them going.

The motto of the Exchange Club of Columbiana is "Unity for Service." Doubtless the Culture Club has in spirit adopted the same motto, "Unity for Service.

It would be a good thing for the members of these clubs to give a demonstration of united effort for Community Service by putting on at once a town wide clean up campaign.

Farm Bureau Can Render Great Service.—

Farmers have always felt the need of organized effort, and they have tried many times to build great organizations of farmers through which they could work to find the solution of their problems just as bankers, manufacturers, miners, plumbers, lawyers and doctors have done. There was the Grange, the Farmers Alliance, the Farmers Union and the American Cotton Association. Today we have the Farm Bureau which the Reporter believes has greater possibilities for enduring service than any other similar organization. But even so good an organization as the Farm Bureau will be in each county and state, just what its members make it. For that reason we wish to urge upon the Farm Bureau members of Shelby county that they give more time and thought to their organization.

The Board of Directors of the Farm Bureau ought to meet once a month, certainly once a quarter at least. At these meetings real business ought to be transacted. The county agent ought to make a detailed report of his work and this report ought to be discussed with much care and thought. After careful consideration of the needs, the directors of the Farm Bureau ought to advise with the County Agent as to what his undertakings should be. It is a great and costly and serious mistake to turn the county agent loose without suggestions from any one. Then after a certain line of effort has been determined upon every member of the board of directors ought to go back to his community to become an energetic leader to enlist the support of his neighbors, particularly Farm Bureau members, in carrying out the plans agreed upon.

This sort of effort will be like real co-operation, genuine wholehearted co-operation that will certainly bring lasting results. And for whose benefit? For the Farmer's benefit.

Auburn's Part in the Farm Bureau.—

There has been some disposition on the part of Farm Bureau members to criticise their organization because Auburn, that is the Extension Service, has so much to do with it. It is the Reporter's observation, that there would be no Farm Bureau either in Shelby county or in Alabama if it had not been for Auburn. We believe that the main reason why Auburn to day is having so much to do with the Farm Bureau is because the Farm Bureau members themselves have so little to do with their own organization. Let the Farm Bureau members take hold of the organization go to work in earnest, along the lines for which the Farm Bureau was organized, and they will find Auburn only too glad to say, "Go to it boys we are with you. Call on us when we can help you." But until the Farm Bureau members themselves become willing to assume their fair responsibility, that of carrying on their own organization, the Extension Service feel it their duty to at least keep the organization alive until such day as will bring an awakening on the part of the farmers to a sense of their own responsibility.

Alabama's Lone Stand on the Convention.

A good many Alabama democrats will not feel any pride in the part their delegation took in the National Convention.

The fight on the Klan was uncalled for and foolish. As has always been true of such fights it became so bitter that the only practical purpose it will serve for the Democratic party as a whole will be to make it more difficult for the party to win in November.

The delegates from other southern states knew this and very sensibly kept out of the fight on the Klan. The delegates from Alabama knew it too and very foolishly joined in the fight on the Klan. The only reason they can give for their action is that Mr. Underwood wanted it done. Former Governor Comer says that when he agreed to appoint half of the delegates, there was no understanding or agreement that the delegates would be expected to support Mr. Underwood in a fight on the Klan. But the papers tell us that after the delegates got to New York and held a "stormy session" they bound themselves to go the limit, and join the Irish Catholic bosses of New York, Illinois and Pennsylvania in their effort to condemn the Klan.

Some Facts About the Fight on the Klan.

More and more the real facts of Mr. Underwood's "heroic stand" on the Klan question are being given out.

Mark Sullivan who writes for the Birmingham News, in an article in Sunday's paper says that at first it was unanimously agreed that the Klan should not be mentioned in the platform by name. A great many of the leading Catholics and Jews, he says, preferred that the Klan should not be mentioned. This almost unanimous agreement on the part of the leaders of the party was upset, Mark Sullivan says, by two men, one the leading liquor lawyer and liquor politician of a Southwestern state, the other an equally prominent liquor lawyer and liquor politician of a middle western state.

In another article published in the News, Mark Sullivan said that Senator Underwood "adopted the Klan as an issue with the hope that it would enable him to capture the large foreign, Jewish and Catholic vote in the North and East believing that he would get the South anyway. When he was repudiated by every other southern state except Alabama, he was left without an excuse for remaining in the race, other than to press the Klan issue before the convention."

George Brennan, the Catholic boss of Chicago, who took the Klan fight out of Mr. Underwood's hands, gave as his reason for demanding an anti-Klan plang in the platform, that such a plank would help him to carry the large negro vote in Chicago. He is the man who declared: "We will either destroy the Ku Klux Klan or we will wreck the Democratic party."

With these explanations it is all the more strange that Alabama should be the only Southern state nolping out in such a fight.

About this time of the year it is not unusual to hear the farmers say, "We need rain." "Crops are burning up." "The drouth cut my corn in half." And yet there is enough rainfall every season to make two crops. There has been already this season more than enough rain to make a good crop if not another drop should fall. The trouble is our lands are not in condition to hold moisture as they should. We need more tractors doing deep plowing. We need more vegetable matter plowed into our soil to make it loose, pliable and fertile. This is not a new remedc. It is as old as farming itself.

In some counties of Alabama the boys and girls go to school nine months in a year. In Shelby county very few got to go to school that long last year. Most of them had only a 5 months term. We owe it to ourselves as citizens and to our boys and girls as future citizens to find some way to change such a condition. Our boys and girls certainly deserve as good a chance as others get.

In a decision recently handed down by the state supreme court it was held that an automobile carrying liquor can be confiscated, even when the owner of the car did not know, or says he did not know, the car was being used to haul liquor. Gradually the loop holes are being filled up and some good day men will learn that the prohibition law is a law after all.

Calera, Alabama, July 1.--On Monday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock, Mr. and Mrs. U. C. Wheatley threw the doors of their beautiful home wide open and in such an enjoyable way, entertained quite a number of their friends, it being the birthday anniversaries of Mr. Wheatley and their daughter Beatrice. Interesting games were played by the little people until they weretired and then they were invited into the dining room which was beautifully decorated in yellow and white. Places were laid for thirty-nine. Souvenirs of beautiful little baskets of candy which carried out the color scheme marked the places. The little folk were led in the dining room by the beautiful little hostess and Master Robert Lee Barber, following they marched in couples until they reached the door where they waited until pictures were made of the happy little ones.

If I were to write all day I could not begin to tell how bountifully were they served, or how they all enjoyed the party, but soon they had to say good bye, and each one went away, wishing the little hostess many happy returns of the day, as well as her father.

The following little folks enjoyed this occasion as well as many older people.

How the Railroad Dollar Has Shrunk

Although everybody realizes that "everything has gone up" amazingly and distressingly, the general public does not know of the great increase in the cost of operating American railroads, as shown by a comparison between the years 1916 and 1923—and the corresponding shrinkage of the purchasing power of the railroad dollar.

As a pertinent illustration, take the following figures from the records of the L. & N. Railroad:

In 1916, the L. & N. paid for labor 37c out of every dollar received, while in 1923 the cost had increased to 50c; the average cost of coal per ton at the mines was $1.10, which increased to $2.65; the cost of passenger locomotives increased from $16,575 to $51,500; freight cars, from $1,127 to $2,008; rails, from $30 per ton to $43; bridge steel, from $50 per ton to $88; cross-ties, from 51c each to $1.18; track ballast, from 10c per cubic yard to 23c—and so on.

In 1916 the L. & N.'s payment for taxes was $480 per mile, while in 1923 it was $1,265; an increase of 164%. During the same period the book value of L. & N. property increased 30.4%; but its net operating income decreased 6.4%.

All of this increase in cost was beyond the control of the management of the L. & N. Railroad; yet despite the new problems and burdens which it created, the L. & N. has consistently improved its service and added to the facilities of its transportation plant. The efficient and able management of the Nation's Railroads, of which the L. & N. is typical, alone has enabled them to meet the changing conditions, and shortened revenues, above described and still not only maintain their service to an equal standard, but actually improve it.

A GREAT STEP FORMED FOR ALBERTVILLE

(From Dekalb Republican)

We note with much interest the announcement that a co-operative Cream Producers Association has been organized in Albertville. The Albertville Banner very truthfully says: "This is the greatest step forward that has been taken by the business men of Albertville and the farmers in the trade territory since the incorporation of our town."

A dairy specialist was in Fort Payne a few days ago and told the business men here how it would profit them and the farmers of this section to institute such a movement as is being inaugurated at Albertville.

The co-operative cream producers association has been proven of incalculable worth by the farmers and business men of Dallas county, Alabama and Turner county Georgia. The movement is going to bring profit to Albertville and Sand Mountain.

Medicine Islands

Cutting Up a Camphor Tree.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

When a man is sick, not only the doctor on the next block, but men and women and products from all over the world are called on to make him well. A tale of far places is unfolded by any home medicine cabinet.

Only half the story is told by the neat druggist's labels on pill boxes and warning red death's heads on mysterious bottles. Babble of strange tongues, mixed exotic odors of rank forests and sweating, glistening brown bodies, and the warmth of tropic suns are stoppered by innocent Spanish corks.

Who thinks of Formosa's beneficence when he rubs an aching ligament with spirits of camphor? Small credit Java gets for saving millions of lives from racking, burning fever. Yet Java produces 99 per cent of the world's quinine, the best antidote known to man after the female anopheles mosquito has done her worst.

How illuminating a fainting spell might be if the victim could dream sweetly as he revived of the lands from which came aromatic spirits of ammonia for his resuscitation. Lolling in a carriage at society's playground, Nice on the Riviera, he might see peasants squeezing oil of lemon from skins of the yellow fruit. Swiftly the dream shifts to a field in sunny Tuscany where the very air is suffocatingly suffused with delicate odors as sickles flash on purple lavender. Half way 'round the earth the next mirage leaves him on a tropic isle off New Guinea's coast. Orchards in Banda grow nutmegs for the oil of myristica, another component of aromatic spirits of ammonia.

Back to the grimy city down in the "gas house district," the scene shifts as he watches ammonia being produced as a by-product of gas. One trip more before the veil rises: standing in rustling fields of the Middle West he sees the growing corn which will be distilled into alcohol.

No Longer Rely on Spices.

Once the Spice islands of the East Indies put their trust in the world's palate, but fashions in food changed

Today they stake their confidence that the world will get sick and they are winning back some of their lost prosperity. If some explorer were to happen onto the East Indies in the Twentieth century he might properly call them the Medicine islands.

Banda, in its few square miles of dry land lifted above the Indian ocean, concentrates the past and present history of the East Indies. The renaissance in European history is associated with the creation of a new and finer art, an upheaval in the Christian church system, and a revaluation of the status of women, but it is seldom thought of as a period when civilization discovered its palate. Yet the latter impulse led Venice and Genoa to brave pirates and storms to buy spices from the East. Tainted food was eaten without much complaint before Europe began to demand that unsavoriness be drowned in spice.

Marble palaces in Venice were built from profits on cargoes of nutmegs. But Shakespeare's Antonio and his fellow merchants on the Rialto never knew from whence the pungent, hard nut came. The Arabs got it from India and beyond that they knew not. Finally the Portuguese sailed around the Cape of Good Hope and in their conquest of the Indies discovered Banda, the mysterious source of nutmegs. Immediately they built a fort to guard their find, but the Dutch overpowered them and the nutmeg prize fell to Holland.

Refrigerators have literally robbed Holland of the fruits of her victory, at least, until she developed Banda as a medicine isle. Refrigerators outlawed tainted food and with fresh viands always available, the need for spices lessened. Even in the days of our grandfathers the center of the table was often decorated with a caster, a whirling device containing six or eight spices. Today salt and pepper shakers suffice.

Demand for the oil of myristica helps the nutmeg producers. The splendid mansions in Dutch style in Banda which can be purchased today for a song, are, however, monuments to another Eldorado, Macassar oil. In civilization's search for a hair restorer it hit two generations ago upon Macassar oil, a product of a tropic island tree. So enthusiastically did it embrace the concoction that was expected to replace man's crowning glory, that antimacassars were invented to protect the backs of easy chairs.

Java, today, puts its trust not in spices, but in cinchona, which is quinine, and in kapok and copra (dried coconut), in vegetable oils and rubber and coffee. Castor oil from the castor bean also comes largely from the Orient.

Boric Acid From Springs.

Even the bowels of the earth minister to humanity. Down from the fields of Tuscany where lavender grows, is a broad stretch of coastal plain which corresponds closely with the famous Pontine marshes. Repeatedly malaria has resisted man's efforts to recover this region called the Maremma. It contains, however, certain steaming springs, evidently allied to the volcanic nervousness of southern Italy. It was discovered that the waters of these springs contained boric acid. Engineers built retaining walls around nature's chemical fountains and drew off the liquid into basins where natural evaporation made the acid crystallize. This product is sent into commerce as borax for washing powders and in the medicine cabinet a solution of it is a familiar eye wash and emergency agent for burns.

The internationalism of medicine was borne out clearly during the war. German scientists, who had discovered illimitable magic in coal tar, developed certain important medical compounds on which the world had come to depend. Particularly prominent were carbolic acid and aspirin. With the war and England's blockade, the supplies of these agents diminished and the prices rose. Aspirin bounded from 32 cents a pound to $1.25 a pound. Carbolic acid gyrated from 25 cents a pound to $2.

Iodine is another common aid in the family medicine cabinet. Its antiseptic properties are well appreciated but its history is little known. For a time the Sargasso sea, feared by Columbus' sailors, contributed much of this medicine by way of Ireland, for the kelp from which it was burned was thrown up on the Irish coast by the gulf stream. Then, in the course of engineers' investigation of nitrate production in the Chilean desert, it was discovered that iodine could be produced as a by-product. The amount of iodine released by the nitrate companies of Chile now determines the market price of this chemical.

Medicines From Mines.

Stassfurt, Germany, is another important source of minerals for medicine. Near this little German town, twenty miles from Magdeburg, are the noted potash mines. Glycerin, an important ingredient of a familiar gargle, and of lotions for milady's skin, is indirectly a product of Stassfurt, since it is made from spent lye used to produce soap. The lye, potassium carbonate, comes from the potash mines.

Magnesium sulphate, which is Epsom salts, is also a product of Stassfurt mines. The salts take their name from a health spring at Epsom visited by Charles II and other members of English royalty. Stassfurt has no monopoly on this substance, however, since minerals from which it may be produced are mined in Euboea, an island off the east coast of Greece, near Salem in Madras, India, Ivrea, Italy and in California.

Much of the peppermint for toothpastes and for toothsome sweets is produced in Michigan and New York. It is also extensively cultivated in Kiangsi province, China, and distilled in Canton. Sens, France, and Leipzig, Germany, are other centers for the production of this pungent plant, which is not as particular about its habitat as many medicinal herbs.

Lavender, though native to Italy, southern France and Spain, also accustoms itself to many climates and soils. Among the earth's romantic spots, certain islands off the coast of southern France should receive special mention, for on them lavender is reputed to grow more thickly and with stronger perfume than anywhere else. Indeed, once they were called the lavender islands, the Stoechades, after the scientific name for the lavender plant. These islands lying near the French naval fortress Toulon, under their present name Hyeres, figure prominently in Joseph Conrad's novel, "The Rover."

Rarest Sea Shell

One of the rarest sea shells in the world is called the "Glory of the Sea." In shape and appearance it suggests an unfolding rosebud. Only 12 to 14 are represented in collections today. Three specimens of this beautiful mollusk were found in 1838 by a British scientist on a Philippine coral reef. A few weeks later the reef was destroyed by an earthquake.

The DAIRY

CREAM AND MILK OF SUPERIOR QUALITY

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Because cream is sold in smaller quantities than milk is no reason why less care should be given by inspectors in insuring a safe supply of good quality, says the United States Department of Agriculture. It is just as desirable for cream to come from tuberculin-tested cows or be properly pasteurized, or both, as that milk should. Heavy cream for whipping purposes is often sold raw and its quality should be above suspicion. Cream from old or returned milk of poor quality is not desirable.

All cities need carefully defined grades for cream, according to the department, with a fixed minimum for light, table, or coffee cream, which is the usual cream of commerce. The federal standard for cream which goes into interstate or foreign commerce is 18 per cent butterfat, and in different cities it varies usually from 18 to 20 per cent. Sometimes what is known as "double cream" is sold, and when that term is used the cream should contain twice as much fat as is required in ordinary cream, usually from 36 to 40 per cent of butterfat. "Whipping cream" may contain less butterfat than "double cream," but, according to a ruling by the bureau of chemistry, cream thus labeled, if shipped, interstate, must contain at least 30 per cent butterfat.

Feeding Will Regulate Quantity of Milk Flow

The question of the richness of the milk has received much attention by experiment stations in this country and in Europe, and the evidence is conclusive that the fat percentage of the milk cannot be changed permanently by any method of feeding. Certain experiments have shown that sudden changes in the ration, for example, greatly increasing the protein or oil content of the ration, may result in a small fat increase for a few days with some cows, with others no effect is produced. In any case the results are only temporary. No ration or method of feeding has been found by means of which a Shorthorn or Holstein can be made to give milk as rich as that of a Jersey or Guernsey.

However, the feed and management does not have a marked influence on the quantity of milk produced by the cow. The amount of milk a cow produces depends upon the ability of the cow to convert feed into milk and butterfat and upon the feed and care a cow receives. No cow can be made to produce milk above her capacity, no matter what kind of feed she gets nor how much.

Calf Feed Important

Experience has taught the importance of feeding the calf milk of uniform temperature from day to day. Best results are obtained when this temperature is kept between 80 and 100 degrees Fahrenheit. A young calf should not be fed milk that has started to sour. The pail should be thoroughly cleansed after each feeding in the winter time as well as during the summer season.

Clipping for Cleaner Milk

The production of clean milk is made easier by clipping the cow's udder and the tail from the switch up. This will prevent particles of dirt heavily infected with bacteria from dropping into the pail. Another practice that will aid in keeping the milk clean is washing the udder with a moist cloth and drying it thoroughly before starting to milk.

Dairy Hints

Screen milkhouse.

Cool cream down immediately and keep cool until sold.

* * *

Place a salt box in the pasture and keep salt before the cows constantly.

Observe new pastures and plan to seed the poor grass spaces next year.

* * *

Cream separators and other dairy utensils should always be cleaned properly immediately after use.

* * *

All utensils which come in contact with milk and cream should be kept clean at all times.

* * *

Milk pails and other utensils should be free so far as is possible from crevices where dirt may lodge and be hard to remove.

* * *

The milker should always milk with clean, dry hands. It is a filthy habit, to say the least, to milk with wet hands, and it is a mistaken idea that milking with wet hands makes milking easier.

* * *

Cleanliness in milking should be exercised at all times. Before milking begins, the cow's udder and flanks should be wiped off, preferably with a damp cloth, in order to prevent particles of straw or loose hair getting into the pail.

ENGINEERS WATCHING DETROIT EXPERIMENT

Ultimately, when the horse and buggy idea gives place to the motor transportation plan nationally, automobiles must be allowed to travel over long stretches of right of way at their maximum speed. Wider roads entering population centers, division of highways into their logical freight, local and express lines, and the unification of transportation laws throughout the United States will make all this possible.

So, at least, say engineers of the Middle West and the transport experts now busily engaged in working out the growing road problems of practically every community of any size in Illinois, Indiana and Iowa, writes J. L. Jenkins in the Chicago Tribune.

All of them are looking eastward this spring toward Detroit, where Wayne county pavement pioneers are pushing the construction of a 200-foot right of way from Detroit to Pontiac, with just this idea of segregating highway traffic and putting automobile operation into the scientific transportation field where it belongs.

When completed this highway will provide tracks in its center for fast and local railways. On the outside two 40-foot pavements will carry the automobile traffic. These one-way lines will provide for slow-moving and local cars on the inside lines and for fast, through motors on the outside speedways. Cross traffic will be protected, according to the first plan, by elevating the intersections and dividing the grades.

Thus the cars used to transport passengers or light freight for long distances will be given a chance to operate at maximum efficiency and minimum expense without endangering the joy-riders, the slow-moving trucks and the myriad other tardy vehicles which form the real barrier on any open road.

Uniform Road Rules Are Being Urged by Railways

Arguments for a federal rules of the road act to secure uniformity and reduce automobile accidents all over the country were advanced before the committee on commerce, trade and commercial law of the American Bar association by Herbert E. Rowe, chairman of the committee on the prevention of highway crossing accidents of the American Railway association, and D. E. Minard, general attorney of the Erie railroad. The committee met at the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, 65 Liberty street.

Doubt as to the legal practicability of the plan was expressed by some members of the Bar association committee. Mr. Rowe will file a brief and the recommendations of the committee will be announced at the forthcoming annual meeting of the Bar association.

W. H. H. Platt of Kansas City, chairman of the committee, said that the differences in the rules of the road in various states were a decided detriment, now that country-wide automobile travel had become common.

Method for Increasing Strength of Concrete

The strongest concrete will be obtained by the least possible amount of water in the mixing to produce a plastic mortar or mix, but after the concrete is placed the concrete should be kept wet for at least ten days, if great strength of wear or strain is needed as in highways.

Keeping the concrete damp the first ten days adds 75 per cent to its compressive strength, and adds 65 per cent to its resistance to wear. Three weeks of constant moisture will add still greater strength and resistance. Constant sprinkling may not be possible. Cover the concrete deeply with dirt, sand, hay or anything that will hold moisture and it will serve the purpose desired.

Good Roads Facts

It is estimated by highway experts that the extent of surfaced roads in the United States will have reached at least 450,000 miles by the end of the first quarter of 1924.

Massachusetts has begun a statewide drive against the billboards that line its highways. The state department of public works has been empowered to regulate billboard advertising by the process of licensing that industry. Violation of the new regulations is punishable by a fine of $100 for the first offense and $500 for the second.

One million tourists visited California by motor car last year, traveling on the Lincoln highway, according to an estimate recently compiled by the automobile clubs of that state. The total was 50 per cent over the number in 1922.

Instructions have been issued by the minister of highways providing for the planting of 2,500 trees in the course of the present summer on the Montreal-Quebec highway and the Caughnawaga-Sherbrooke highway. Work will commence immediately.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best—Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Valuable Tobacco Box

In Caxton hall, Westminster, London, reposes what is claimed to be the most wonderful tobacco box in the world. More than 200 years ago it was bought for four pence. It was then so small it held only three ounces of tobacco. Today it is more than four feet high and is insured for £7,000. The secret of its value is that that original box is now inclosed in six others and each is cased in silver.

One application of Roman Eye Balsam will prove how good it is for sore eyes. Costs only 25 cents. 372 Pearl St., N. Y. Adv.

Grow Silk Worms

A silk farm near Oroville, Cal., has commenced operations of incubating more than 2,000,000 eggs of silk worms for the commercial production of silk, says an Associated Press dispatch. The eggs were imported from France and Italy. The farm has more than 25,000 mulberry trees planted for feeding the worms and furnishing the material from which silk is made.

The Best Biscuits You Ever Tasted

NOTHING adds more to a good meal than a heaping plate of delicious biscuits made from self-rising flour. Everybody loves them. Tempting, nourishing, wholesome, you'll find in them a food value equalled by no other bread.

"I find that biscuits made out of self-rising flour are delicious and require less shortening," writes Mrs. C. S. P., of North Carolina. "The danger of having greenish-yellow ones occasioned by the use of too much soda is entirely eliminated. . . . . Now I can be sure that even my sixteen year old daughter cannot fail in making biscuits or cakes when self-rising flour is used."

Self-rising flour is pure and wholesome—the ideal flour to use whenever uniformly good bakings are desired. It consists of choice soft wheat flour and healthful phosphate baking powder measured and mixed so carefully that your bakings are always dainty and tasteful. Once you try it, you'll never be without it. Look for the Blue Shield on the bag. It means that you are buying guaranteed flour.

FOLLOW THESE FIVE RULES For Making Perfect Biscuits with Self-Rising Flour. (1) See that your oven is hot; (2) Always use sweet milk or cold water; (3) Never add baking powder, soda or salt; (4) Use good shortening—lard, vegetable fat or butter; (5) Make soft dough—bake quickly. Gold Coins Lose Weight.

In 1892 Great Britain began calling in worn coins and substituting new at the public expense. Since then nearly $400,000,000 of gold coins have been replaced. The loss by wear in gold coins was nearly five million dollars. This works out at about five cents loss on every coin called in. But in 1919, for instance, the profit on minting new silver equaled five million dollars.

THIS CONVENTION BROKE ALL RECORDS

When the Democratic National Convention adjourned at 4 o'clock Wednesday morning, 2 o'clock our time, 100 ballots had been cast and no nomination for president had been made. Eight full days of the convention's time had been given to casting these 100 baiolts.

Throughout most of the time the leading candidate had been W. G. McAdoo of California, who, on the 69th ballot, Friday, received 530 votes, lacking only 20 votes of a majority. The next candidate in strength was Governor Al Smith of New York, whose highest vote was 368, two more than one-third of all the votes.

A number of plans for breaking the deadlock was proposed from time to time none of which was acceptable to all the candidates and their friends.

Just before adjournment on Wednesday morning, Mr. McAdoo released his delegates from their pledge to him, and it is said, asked them to support Mr. Meredith of Iowa, who was secretary of agriculture in the cabinet of Woodrow Wilson. Mr. McAdoo's vote on the 100th ballot was 190 and that of Governor Smith was 351½. John W. Davis of West Virginia received 203½ on this ballot; Governor Cox 75½; Senator Glass Glass 35; Sen. Robinson 46; Senator Underwood 41½; Senator Walsh 52½.

After he had received nearly 160 votes, Senator Ralston, of Indiana on Friday asked that his name be withdrawn. On Monday his friends put him back into the race and on Tuesday his vote reached nearly 200. Before the first ballot Tuesday night, he, for the second time, asked that his name be withdrawn. The convention adjourned to meet at 1:00 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, New York time.

Old Resident Is Visiting In Shelby County

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Fitch, of Richmond, Va., were visitors to Columbiana the first of the week. Mr. Fitch was formerly a citizen of Shelby county and though he has been away for a number of years he still calls this home. He says that in all his rounds over the country, and he has traveled extensively, he has not found a county with superior advantages, all things considered, to Shelby county. Mr. and Mrs. Fitch left Wednesday to visit relatives at Harpersville and Vincent.

In an address before 10,000 American teachers in Washington last Friday, President Coolidge gave his approval to a bill pending in congress to create a Federal Department of Education, presided over by a member of the cabinet.

Rev. R. W. Stuckey was greeted by a large congregation at the Baptist church Sunday morning; this being the first service for the new pastor.

American Legion Being Organized

A call is made to the Ex-Service men of Shelby county to join the Hendrick Hudson Post of the American Legion, recently organized at Montevallo. The post has already a membership of 25 and the members are cordially inviting others to come in. The time limit for charter membership is Tuesday evening, July 15.

The American Legion is endeavoring to be of real service to ex-service men. It assists in handling all problems relating to insurance free of charge and it makes provision for the care of widows and orphans of soldiers. No soldier need ever be down and out if he keeps in good standing with the American Legion.

President's Son Died Monda Night

Calvin Coolidge, Jr., the younger son of President and Mrs. Coolidge died at 10:30 o'clock Monday night after an illness of five days of blood poisoning. The poisoning developed on Thursday of last week from a broken blister on the foot brought on during a tennis match. On Friday he was carried to the army hospital in Washington and everything that human skill could do for his relief was done.

The young man was sixteen years old and is described as a typical American boy, mischievous and full of vigor. He was an excellent student, ranking high in his classes. He would have graduated from the preparatory school after one more year and then would have entered Amherst college, his father's alma mater.

Calvin was at work on a farm in Western Massachusetts last year when the news came to him that his father had become president of the United States. He was working under a contract and refused to quit to go to Washington.

NEW CATALOGUE IS RECORD OF GROWTH

Montevallo, Alabama, July 1.—The new catalog of Alabama College has just come from the press. It shows many improvements that have been made in the courses of study during the past year. The increase in enrollment is indeed most gratifying. There were 656 during the regular session. The summer school of 1923 had 253 members; the Extension groups 236, making a grand total of 1466 students. Among the regular students for the session, there were 137 applying for the degree of Bachelor of Arts; 123 for Bachelor of Science in Home Economics; 10 for Bachelor Science in Physical Education; 46 for Bachelor of Music.

65 counties in the state had representation on the student roll, Shelby county having the largest, 76; Jefferson county ranks next with 53; Talladega third with 27; Wilcox fourth with 23, Dallas 5th with 20; Bibb, Covington, Etowah Marengo, Mobile and Walker next with 16 each.. There were 12 students from other states. The graduating class of 1924 was larger than all the graduating classes for the first 12 years.

The Departments of Education Home Economics and Music are well organized with a large number of teachers in all departments. The Home Economics course of study takes rank with that of the leading colleges and universities of the whole country. The Music Department now undoubtedly equals that of any other institution in the Southern States.

During the past year several scholarships have been added to the list. First among these may be mentioned another $500 scholarship from the Birmingham News and a similar one from the Alabama Power Company. The Alabama Federation of Clubs of the Fourth District has recently given a scholarship especially designed to assist in the training of amusic supervisor. Application for this scholarship should be made in July to Miss May Andrus, Monroeville.

Among the faculty, Miss Mary G. Stallworth, head of the Department of Mathematics, has secured a leave of absence for 1924-25. During this time Miss Ellen McMichael, a teacher of wide experience and now a graduate student of University of Chicago, will fill the position.

A dumping ground will be provided and all trash will be carried to that one place.

The people are required to gather up trash and waste at their homes and place in some convenient place within easy reach of the trash carrier who will make the rounds of the residence part of town once a week.

URGES ALABAMA SCHOOL SURVEY

PRESIDENT OF THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION RECOMMENDS PERCENTAGE RATING

Bexar.—A comprehensive and adequate educational survey, to ascertain the present condition and needs and future requirements of education in Alabama was advocated by A. G. Patterson, president of the Alabama public service commission, in an address here. Mr. Patterson was the chief speaker at the patriotic and educational rally which held the center of the stage at Bexar July 4, and was largely attended by citizens from various parts of Marion county, with visitors from adjacent territory.

Mr. Patterson took a strong stand on behalf of making adequate provision for the state's educational needs. He advocated, after completion of an educational survey of the state, the giving of a percentage rating to the various educational institutions of the state. He favored the making of educational appropriations in future in a single "lump sum," with the various educational institutions to receive a percentage of the sum based on their requirements as shown by the survey.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

The Troy Messenger and the Troy Herald, two daily papers have been combined and will be published here after under the name of the older and longer established paper, the Troy Messenger. DAIRY FACTS

MARKETING HAY IN ONE-POUND CARTONS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Instead of hauling their hay 35 miles to the nearest market as they did for a number of years, farmers of White Pine county, Nevada, are now keeping the hay at home, feeding it to dairy cows, making their cream into butter in a co-operative creamery, and selling their butter to the towns that formerly bought their hay. For some years alfalfa hay, the main cash crop in two communities, had been selling for less than the cost of production. To remedy this condition, progressive farmers and the county extension agent made a careful study of the possibilities of developing other sources of farm income. They found that the mining towns which bought their hay were also importing all butter used from distant dairy centers, paying high transportation rates. As many farmers had a few cows, it was decided to try marketing the hay in the form of butter. A creamery was organized, the dairy specialist of the state agricultural college trained butter makers, and churning was begun in May, 1923, averaging at first about 100 pounds a week. Herds have increased in production as skill in feeding developed, and the market has extended as the excellent quality of the butter became known. By the end of the year, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, the butter sales averaged more than $1,000 a month and demand still greatly exceeded the supply.

Pastures Provide Most Economical Cow Forage

Dairy farmers are urged to make their plans for growing next year's feed crop, in a statement made public by A. C. Baer, head of the dairy department at Oklahoma A. and M. college.

Here follows a list of crops which Baer says will furnish cheap, but excellent feed for dairy stock:

Early wheat, barley or rye pasture.

Improved native pasture.

Sweet clover pasture for early summer.

Sudan grass pasture for late summer.

Early fall wheat or barley pasture.

Alfalfa hay for supplementary or winter feeding.

Prairie hay for suplementary or winter feeding.

Row crops, corn, kafir or cane for the silo.

Cowpeas or soy beans for hay if alfalfa cannot be grown.

"Pastures provide the most economical forage for dairy cattle."

Minerals for Dairy Cows

"Complex salt mixtures should not be purchased by farmers," asserts the Wisconsin experiment station. "If the cow is getting good clover or alfalfa hay in addition to her grains and silage the only thing she needs in addition is some common salt, possibly some bone meal or wood ashes, and, if necessary potassium or sodium iodide to prevent goiter. There is absolutely no need to spend money for any other minerals."

Cows Develop Unevenly

Dairy cows grow unevenly. Recent tests in Missouri show that the first spurt of development comes before birth, at the age of five or six months. The second spurt begins two months before birth and ends four and a half months after birth. The third spurt begins at about a year after birth and ends twenty-six months after birth. To cash in on these facts, feed an abundance when growth is naturally most rapid.

Soy Beans Gain Favor

Soy beans are steadily growing in favor among dairymen. They have some advantage over the two crops previously mentioned. When properly inoculated, they will grow on soils more acid in nature than alfalfa or red clover. They produce a good yield of palatable hay if cut when the beans are just starting to form. When weather conditions are favorable, the hay can usually be harvested without losing many of the leaves.

Alfalfa Hay Is Leader

Good alfalfa hay is generally placed at the head of the list of roughages suitable for dairy cows. Little need be said of its merits as a roughage. Were it not for the acid condition of the soil in many districts, the crop would be grown much more extensively than it now is. To overcome this, dairymen are advised to make an application of lime and include alfalfa in the ration.

Inexpensive Fly Spray

A spray commonly used by Iowa dairymen and recommended by the dairy section at Iowa State college, is made by mixing four and one-half quarts of coal tar dip, four and one-half quarts of fish oil, three quarts of coal oil, three quarts of whale oil and one and one-half quarts of oil of tar. Dissolve three pounds of laundry soap, add the spray mixture and dilute the whole to thirty gallons with lukewarm soft water. This spray is not very expensive.

JAPANESE NORTHLAND

Ainu Chieftain With Tanbark Headdress.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Japan's sunny southern islands with their mild climate furnish the common conception of the empire of the Rising Sun. One hears little ordinarily of the Japanese northland. This neglected portion of the empire, however, has been dramatically uncovered for the world by the American round-the-world flyers, the first international travelers of note to approach Japan through her northern "back door."

Japan's northland includes Hokaido or Yezo, the northernmost of the main island group, a unit almost as big as Cuba; Saghalien, near the Siberian coast, bone of contention between Japan and Russia; and the Kuriles, the chain of little volcanic islands reaching far to the north, over which the American flyers skimmed after they left the American Aleutians.

Before western influence reached Japan the Japanese kept pretty closely to their balmy southern lands, and had only a tenuous hold on Yezo. They barely knew of the existence of the more northern islands. The rulers of Japan hardly seemed to consider even Yezo a real part of their domains until Russians began to trespass toward the close of the Eighteenth century. When this situation arose officials were sent by the shogun to govern the islands. For a long time Yezo was left almost entirely to the Ainus, the Caucasian-like natives, as far as permanent habitations were concerned.

During this period the Japanese treated this island as a sort of national, commonly owned fishing preserve. Fleets of fishing boats swarmed along its coasts in the summer, the fishermen making temporary camps, but the winter found all of them back south in "Old Japan." This matter of climate furnishes one chief key to the Japanese neglect of the northern islands. The race developed under the mild climatic conditions of the South. All their customs and habits were built in such a climate. They became accustomed to light clothing, mere shells of houses built of bamboo and paper, and to the cultivation of that warm land staple, rice. They lacked the pioneering spirit, and the rigors of a harsh climate were repugnant to them.

Developed by Americans.

While congestion became more and more marked in the southern islands, huge Yezo remained practically unused until half a century ago when the Japanese government began a paternalistic development. Though this was abandoned in favor of private initiative a few years later, the marks left by the American engineers and agricultural experts engaged at the time, stand out plainly in the island. Railroads were built, buildings got under way, and model farms established. The most striking mark of the Americans was on the architecture.

Southern Japanese traditions of flimy construction were abandoned, and houses built of heavy frame construction—a sort of New England style with Japanese adaptations. The country was heavily wooded, and as in all pioneer communities log houses also were constructed. Yezo became a New Japan and the climate is said to have reacted on the immigrants to produce "new Japanese," more energetic and resourceful than their southern brothers, true frontiersmen.

Three Large Cities.

After the settlement of Yezo was stimulated, logging and lumber production became one of the leading industries. Agriculture lagged, largely because it was believed that nowhere on the island could rice be grown. It was found later that certain varieties of rice would yield grain in parts of Yezo, though less abundantly than in the South. The demonstration of this fact made settlers somewhat less reluctant, but even now the population is only about 2,000,000, very low compared with old Japan.

In Hakodate and Otaru, principal ports, and Sapporo, inland capital, Yezo has cities of more than 100,000 population. In these and a number of other important towns the atmosphere of Japan is dominant. In some rural communities of the island, however, are considerable groups of Ainus. The Japanese have been indefatigable in their efforts to hand on to these distant cousins of the European some of the modernism that has come to the islands from the West, but their success has been slight. Only some 20,000 of these people—masters of all the islands before the Japanese came from the mainland—remain, and their numbers are decreasing.

Saghalien, still further north than Yezo, has had a somewhat similar history. It, too, was a fishing station in summer, deserted in winter; and to a degree this situation still holds.

The island of Saghalien was a political perplexity both to Russia and Japan for many years. Soon after the Pilgrim Fathers landed on the east coast of America, a Japanese feudal baron dispatched an agent to this far northern island. Within twenty years after that the Russians had landed on Saghalien. Until the Russian revolution the majority of the permanent inhabitants of Saghalien were Russian.

By a treaty of 1875 the sea-going Japanese gave up all right in Saghalien to the Russians in return for full rights in the Kurile islands. This condition of affairs continued until, at the end of the Russo-Japanese war, the treaty of Portsmouth gave southern Saghalien, up to the fiftieth parallel, to Japan.

Japanese Saghalien has little agricultural land, but has large forests of both deciduous and evergreen trees, amounting to more than 8,000,000 acres. Japanese paper mills are situated in Otomari and elsewhere, and an effort is being made to develop the papermaking industry.

Saghalien's Fish Industry.

But it is on fishing that the majority of the Japanese inhabitants depend for a living. As soon as the summer season is over the fishermen migrate to the southern islands of Japan for the winter. Mauka, on the west coast of Saghalien, is the center of the crab fisheries and much of the crab flake consumed in the Far East comes from this little town. A post road connects Mauka with Toyohara, which is the capital of Karafuto, the name which the Japanese have given to the southern part of Saghalien.

The average annual temperature of Saghalien is near the freezing point, and if the Japanese are ever to colonize the island they will have to change their methods of dressing and building.

In summer, the streets of Saghalien's capital swarm with Japanese; the Shinto shrine on the heights overlooking the Toyohara plain is visited by thousands; and numerous fishing boats ply back and forth from the ports massing the catch which is valued at about $3,000,000 a year. But in winter, the scene is different. Then the Japanese section of the city, with its light frame houses with movable partitions, is almost deserted, and only an occasional Japanese woman in a padded kimono, but with bare ankles, can be seen in the snowy streets.

The Kurile island group is unpleasant, on the whole, for mariners either of the water or the air. There are many half-sunken rocks off shore, while treacherous currents flow between the islands with each flood and ebb tide. Fogs are frequent and gales may blow at any season.

The southernmost Kurile island, Kunashiri, is just off the coast of Yezo and is more nearly a part of Japan proper than the other islands of the chain. Gradually the development that came to Yezo crept to the adjoining Kuriles. But it can hardly creep far, for the more northern of the islets are incapable of producing crops of any value and will probably never advance beyond the fishing station stage.

INDUSTRIAL HISTORY IN THE MAKING

Fort Smith, Ark., guarding the ford in Indian days, has looked on dramatic events. Today it is a crossroads in industrial development as it was once at a crossroads of engineering. It is reached by a train-the-Mississippi that never carries "diner"—yet is it a metropolis, an industrial center. And like all industrial centers nowadays, it wants more of its industries.

Two wholesale clothing houses, a paper-box plant, a button factory, "pants and overall" factories, you know not what in the line of farm supply houses now surround the old citadel of the fort, and furnish a scene of bustle and success that runs all the way down the streets. Country-bred boys are sucked in to join local wholesale store and office and factory, and these are sucked into the industrial maelstrom pool of New York and San Francisco and Chicago—but with a difference.

What woman holds the most interesting job in Fort Smith? That's hard to say. It's hard to discover even when you're right on the spot. But certainly one of the interesting ones is the job of presiding over what the imaginable person might call the take pipe to the suction pump of Fort Smith industries. She is the trim woman in black suit and crisp white blouse—and oh, a most understanding smile!—who wears a Travelers' Aid button and presides over the women's waiting room. (I warned you that Fort Smith is citified. It's also very up-and-coming about having all the new wrinkles in town management and the Travelers' Aid desk is a sample.)

There is enough time and space in the general spirit of being interested in your neighbor to make Fort Smith folk keep the best of its small-town traditions. So Miss Jennie Stevens, the aid lady, isn't expected to catalogue the women that she meets. She doesn't send a hasty postcard to some person or other, "This will introduce Fanny Smith. She needs a small room and she gets her first pay envelope." She will then never know whether Fanny Smith got it or not.

Instead, when Fanny Smith, on her first venture from Blanksburg, arrives in minus a job, minus friends, minus even a place to sleep, the aid lady becomes Fanny's first friend. She knows personally most of the people she sends up before she sends Fanny out to meet them, and six months from now she will probably know just how Fanny is getting on in work, and love affairs.

To my mind, the aid lady has the best job. But there's a sort of human interest quality about most of the Fort Smith jobs that the Chicago jobs lack!

A CIVIL ENGINEER'S W

Two pages she wrote about the pleasure of being a dweller on Street. Typewritten pages, too, ly spaced, on big sheets. As I wondered a bit why Mrs. Herric cational expert, had suggested writing her. Charming she unde is. A good citizen. A splendid A woman other women delig honor—for there is a whisper the General Federation of Wo Clubs ever elects a mountain dent, it will be this same Kathry ham of Glendive, Mont.

But a woman of business? T found it. Tucked away as appa the least important fact about h was a modest sentence. "I hav training in civil engineering Mrs. Perham wrote, "and sinc marriage to a bridge and buildin tractor, I have been able to wor by side with him on blue prints, fications, etc."

There aren't but 18 women civ gineers in all the United State wonder my vocational friend Mrs. W. T. Perham for Montana.

And when one can add to the sonality and courage of a pione such a "man's field," the fem charm that has obviously made success as a helpmeet to her hus then surely one has material first-class romance. Imagine a seller" with the unfinished bridge was to be the engineer's master endangered, then saved because heroine could figure out stresse boss a labor gang.

Fiction aside, Mrs. Perham's l letter of a happy woman. Partl ly happy because her life is lived small town. She comments on number of famous folk who "sta reers in small places and esta themselves securely before s larger fields to conquer." And the sums up her creed with this:

Let others reap the splendors
but give instead to me
The homely round of living blent small-town sympathy.
The little, small-town sympathy steals on neighbor feet
From tiny lamplit houses dow
maple-shaded street;
That lends its strength on tear-di ways its own bruised feet

The little, small-town sympathy
very soul of God.

Choose a Good Bed.

A simple, painted-metal single bed with a good mattress and spring is desirable for a young girl. A slip-on cover of unbleached muslin is excellent for keeping the mattress clean. The pillow, like the mattress, should be protected by a thin, close-fitting, washable cover between the ticking and the pillow case.

An improvised dressing table can be made by hanging a mirror over a small table. This is to be preferred to dressing tables with flounces of cretonne that collect dust. A bureau or chest of drawers is needed for storing clothing and personal belongings. Bureau and table covers should be as simple as possible and always fresh and clean. The chair should be comfortable to sit in. A bookshelf and work table are attractive touches. Some sort of wardrobe or closet is needed in which to hang clothing. A good wastebasket that will not tip over easily nor shed dirt, should be provided.

Shades and curtains should regulate but not shut out light and air. Simple, durable, softly hanging materials such as white or cream voile, scrim, Swiss, or cheesecloth, hemmed or hemstitched, make good washable curtains which may have overcurtains of colored or figured material.

The lighting is important. For lighting the bureau or dressing table an electric light on a drop cord or an inverted gas burner gives a much better light if suspended over it, but if kerosene is the only source of light available a bracket lamp fastened to the wall at one side of the bureau gives the best lighting. For reading, a table lamp is most satisfactory. One or two well-chosen pictures, simply framed, add to the room, but useless ornaments only increase the work of cleaning.

...Different Flavors May Be Had as Desired

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Far from the soda fountain—out in the country, at shore or mountain resort—the children may enjoy chocolate sundaes and fruit ice creams of many kinds if ice is procurable and if they are willing to furnish the labor when it comes to turning the freezer.

Plain Vanilla Ice Cream.

1 quart market cream (usually 16 to 18 per cent fat)
½ pint whole or evaporated milk
½ pint sugar (½ pound)
½ teaspoonful vanilla

Plain vanilla ice cream can be served with a hot or cold chocolate sirup as chocolate sundae; it is good with maple sirup poured over it and a few chopped walnut meats; with crushed fruit in sirup it may be some other kind of sundae.

Vanilla ice cream can also be varied by introducing different flavors into the mixture before freezing it. A cupful of sweetened fruit pulp is the right amount for the quantity of cream and other ingredients in the recipe. Half a pint of sweetened peach pulp (made from one cupful of dried peaches and ¼ pound of sugar) is enough for about 2 quarts of the crushed peach ice cream illustrated. A few tablespoonfuls of caramel flavor in vanilla ice cream gives a pleasant variation, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

FIRST PLACE IS GIVEN TO LACE; SCARF WIELDS MAGIC OF CHARM

AS FIRST aid to costume charm lace leads fashion's roll of honor. Silken dresses made up with lace dyed exactly to match are presented this season in a galaxy of entrancing models. Especially combined with crepe de chine is lace, an ally of all that is most lovely in the frock of summer inspiration.

To the lure of lace and silk is added the magic of exquisite color, dresses being fashioned in monotone orchid, almond green, citron, narcissus, peach or apricot, beige, while two of the most popular shades of the season are gray and poudre bleu. It is the latter delectable coloring which enhances the charm of the frock pictured. The top portion of the straight crepe de chine slip is plaided with tucking. The lace skirt is of the identical beautiful blue as the crepe. Broad rainbow-stripe ribbon is used for the sash. This model is ideal for afternoon formal occasions and for evening wear it serves with equal charm.

In many of the lovely tinted georgette frocks the lace of same color is inset as rows of insertion or in diamond-shaped motifs, the entire finely plaited from neck to hem.

Tiers of lace ruffle georgette or crepe de chine straightline frocks, but in every instance the style requirement is that the lace be accurately matched to the fabric.

This passion for dyed lace is apparent even when narrow valenciennes edgings are used. One of the prettiest models noted is a cocoa-colored crepe with myriads of ruffles of the val lace alternating with broad tucks of the dress fabric. The girdle is finished with a a huge rosette of the lace.

Quite a few of these enchanting chiffon and lace frocks are accompanied with wide scarfs to match.

The scarf's the thing. All fashiondom has enthusiastically turned scarfward. Indeed a costume without a scarf is a rare sight this season. A heap of responsibility is imposed on the scarf these days. It is depended upon by stylists to wield a sort of magic which shall convert the simplest frock or wrap into an ensemble of irresistible charm and chic. Not only is the scarf beautiful proving up to expectation, but it is making a record for itself. It takes two to produce the picture, namely the scarf itself and the wearer thereof. It would, indeed, be presumption on the part of any dictator to attempt to coach milady on the art of wearing the scarf. She has the situation well in hand. It is an inborn gift, a knack, a matter of feminine intuition, this wielding of the scarf about fair shoulders with a piquancy and coquetry which causes every onlooker to bow in admiration.

Ideal for Afternoon Formal Occasions.

Genius, too, is at its best in the creation of the scarf. It requires but nimble fingers, crafty hand-stitchery, and material of any sort, all these guided by the power of imagination to produce lovely scarfs.

The scarves in the picture are inspirational to those who would fashion their own. The one to the left is fashioned of gray supplé satin lined with white. Notice the latticework at one end with a handmade medallion at the other from which is a tremendous tassel made of skeins of gray and white floss intermingled. It looks as if the batik and print and dye experts of all the studios in the world are to be kept busy designing brilliant scarves for summer wear. The hand-printed one in the picture shows a border of gorgeous flowers on a white crepe foundation.

Genius at Best in Creation of Scarf.

WEEKLY MENU SUGGESTIONS

When we need nourishment, bulk, mineral salts and a corrective alkalinity we have only to serve the common Irish potato.

SUNDAY—Breakfast: Strawberries, cream of wheat. Dinner: Steak, boiled potatoes, cabbage with cheese. Supper: Creamed salmon sandwich.

MONDAY — Breakfast: Crullers. Dinner: Butter-scotch pudding. Supper: Milk toast.

TUESDAY—Breakfast: Toast, bacon. Dinner: Fried apples and onions. Supper: Macaroni and eggs.

WEDNESDAY—Breakfast: Omelet. Dinner: Potato soup. Supper: Ginger-bread.

THURSDAY — Breakfast: Doughnuts. Dinner: Roast of pork, browned potatoes. Supper: Lettuce and onion salad.

FRIDAY—Breakfast: Griddle cakes. Dinner: codfish chowder. Supper: Scalloped eggs.

SATURDAY—Breakfast: Toast and eggs. Dinner: Bean pot hash. Supper: Sponge cake, marmalade.

Crullers.

Take three eggs well beaten, add one-third of a cupful of powdered sugar and three tablespoonfuls of melted fat. Sift one cupful of pastry flour with one-half teaspoonful of salt and the same of cinnamon, add to the first mixture; roll out, adding more flour. Cut in oblongs, slit with three slashes and fry in deep fat. Roll in powdered sugar when cold.

Butterscotch Pudding.

Melt one cupful of brown sugar and two tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan. When dark brown pour over the mixture two cupfuls of boiling milk and let stand until the sugar is dissolved. Meanwhile soak a thick slice of bread and add the beaten yolks of two eggs, a pinch of salt and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake in a pan of water forty-five minutes. Beat the whites of the eggs until stiff add two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and the juice of half a lemon. Spread over the top and brown. Serve hot or cold.

Bean Pot Hash.

Prepare the hash as usual and put into the oven in a bean pot to cook slowly.

If a man finds himself with bread in both hands, he should exchange one loaf for some flowers of narcissus, since the loaf feeds the body indeed, but the flowers feed the soul.—Mahomet.

FOR THE UNEXPECTED GUEST

After a few experiences of an influx of unexpected guests with but little in the larder, the wise housewife will forestall any more of such unpleasant occurrences by providing for just such emergencies.

It is a good idea to have a few easily prepared recipes with all materials in reserve, as one is apt to forget the most important detail in the flutter of preparation.

An emergency shelf with cans, bottles, jars and glasses of good things, besides pickles, relishes and preserves from the fruit closet will tide over almost any occasion.

Potatoes are always with us and a dish of creamed potatoes with cold meat, salmon, tongue or chicken may all be easily served from a can. Olives, pickles, jelly or marmalade always help out a meal.

When the main dish is well in hand, salad materials may be gathered. The dessert may be simple—fruit, nuts and raisins or dates and figs, or a quickly prepared hot dessert like shortcake, steamed cherry pudding, or if the pastry is ready in the ice chest, a pie may be quickly made.

Sponge cake, angel food, or any plain white cake served with a spoonful of grated pineapple and topped with whipped cream, makes a most tasty dessert.

Cherry Pudding.—Take one cupful of flour, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of baking powder, adding enough milk to make a drop batter. Butter five small cups, drop in a spoonful of the batter and two tablespoonfuls of canned cherries, juice and all; then another spoonful of batter, leaving room in the cup for the mixture to rise. Place the cups in a pan with hot water surrounding them, cover closely and steam fifteen minutes. Use care in having water enough, but not enough to boil over into the cups. Serve turned out of the mold with cream and sugar for the pudding sauce.

Rhubarb Pudding.—Spread slices of stale bread with butter and lay in a baking dish; cover each slice with finely-cut rhubarb, adding as much sugar as is needed; dot with a few bits of butter and repeat with another layer of buttered bread and rhubarb until the dish is full. Pour over enough boiling water to soften (about half a cupful), cover with a tight cover and bake for an hour in a moderate oven. The last fifteen minues uncover. Serve from the dish; there will be enough sauce to serve with the pudding.

EXCHANGE CLUB HAS PLAN FOR SERVICE—

The Exchange Club of Columbiana is undertaking to render specific service to Columbiana and Shelby cunty by carrying in the Baltimore Manufacturers Record a series of advertisements that will call attention to the advantages we have and the opportunities we offer to those who are looking for desirable locations for industries.

We can make a fine showing in this respect. We have such resources and advantages as are possessed by few other counties in Alabama and it's time for us to begin to tell the world about them. This method of advertising in the Manufacturers Record will carry the story of our advantages where it has never been told before; it will carry the names of Columbiana and Shelby county where they have neved been heard before. Hundreds and thousands of business men throughout the country will read about us and will get the impression that Columbiana is a live wide-awake town and that Shelby county offers opportunities that are worth investigating.

Whatever of benefit may come from this effort will come to the community at large and will be shared equally by every citizen who lives here or who has interests here. But the expense of the effort, and there is some expense to it, is being borne by a small number of men, some of whom do not own a dollar's worth of property in the town, who have banded themselves together to work for the community good under the Motto, "Unity for Service."

This is a fine example of unselfish service, a genuine manifestation of the community spirit. Let us hope that the Exchange Club may continue as it has begun and find other opportunities for serving the community. Let us hope too, that a larger number of our citizens both men and women, may become imbued with that same spirit, "Unity for Service,"

WE LEARN A VALUABLE LESSON—

Whatever other benefits may come to Columbiana and Shelby county from the advertising campaign being planned by the Exchange Club of Columbiana, we have already learned one very valuable lesson.

If there had been no organization the effort to tell the world about the advantages we have would not have been made. Men ho not undertake such efforts as that single handed and alone.

There are dozens of other things, yes hundreds of other things, that we can, and will, find for our ornanization to do that will help to build a better town and county.

Not many of these things will ever be undertaken except throught organized effort, and those that might be tried without organization, would have but little chance of success.

THE POWER COMPANY IS LOOKING OUR WAY—

Another definite benefit from the plan to advertise Columbiana comes in the fact that we have attracted the attention of the Alabama Power Company in a way as has not been done before.

That great company assures us of their hearty co-operation in our advertising campaign and asks the privilege for themselves of preparing the copy and paying for the first half-page advertisement in the Manufacturers Record.

That one thing may be worth more to Columbiana than some of us realize. This great concern, like others we have heard about, seems most willing to help those who undertake to help themselves. The plain truth is that the future of Columbiana in is a large measure in the hands of the Alabama Power Company. We can't hope to grow as we want to grow; we can't hope for much success in bringing in outside interests, until we have light and power. Naturally we must, under present conditions, look to the Alabama Power Company for this service.

To have been able then to attract the favorable attention of the Power Company and to enlist their co-operation in this effort to build our town is a mighty good start toward better things.

SOME THINGS WE CAN DO FOR OURSELVES—

There is one more thing to be said about the effort to advertise Columbiana and Shelby county.

We have a good town but it can be made a better town; and a great deal of the work of improving Columbiana, we can do for ourselves without waiting for the Alabama Power Company or anybody else to come in. We can clean up the town, cut the weeds, destroy the rubbish, fill up the ditches, improve the sidewalks, tear down and take away the old fences, whitewash the outbuildings, paint our homes, improve our church and school buildings and grounds and we can clean off our cemetery.

These things we can do for ourselves and in getting together to plan and do these things we shall develop a better community spirit, and we shall learn how to do team work to such a degree, that when the opportunity to land something big does come our way we shall both know how to go after it and be able to land it.

Columbiana has been asleep to her opportunities while other towns, not so well off naturally as we are, have pushed ahead of us. It's time for us to wake up and go to work it earnest to build Columbiana and Shelby county. Our opportunity is coming, we must be ready for it.

There is no better way than to begin today to do the little things that are within our reach remembering always that in doing these little things we shall be strengthening the community mind and developing the community brawn that will make us able to do bigger things.

SHELBY COUNTY NEEDS A LIVE FARM BUREAU

When it once becomes properly organized and gets started to doing the work it was intended to do, the Farm Bureau will prove to be one of the most effective agencies for developing both the material and the moral interests of Shelby county.

There is a great work for such an organization to do and the Farm Bureau offers more nearly the ideal plan for getting this work done than has ever before been put forward by any similar movement. For that reason the Reporter believes, that every live, progressive farmer in the county ought to belong to this great organization.

There is no profit to anybody in beginning to say that the Farm Bureau has failed. If it were true it would be a calamity. If the Farm Bureau fails there is little hope for the farmer ever to have an organization of his own. But the Farm Bureau has not failed; it has never been tried in Shelby county. It has never even made a complete plan of the work that it was set up to do; it has not been well enough organized to carry out these plans if they had been made out.

It takes work, hard work, and steady, concentrated, intelligent effort to build such an organization as the Farm Bureau ought to be, but the promise of usefulness and service is so great that it's worth all the effort.

EVER HEAR OF CHEROKEE?—

Did you ever hear of Cherokee, Alabama? Not Cherokee county, Cherokee town. In 1920 Cherokee had a population of 524. In 1924 the people of this little town are building a new school house at a cost of $30,000. We do not know how they are doing it, but we just imagine they made up their minds that their boys and girls deserved a better chance.

A PROPER CELEBRATION OF THE FOURTH.—

Reports from over the county indicate a quiet orderly observance of Independence Day. Officers who were on duty that day say there was no rowdyism no drinking, no signs of liquor being passed around. Our people met in large numbers at different places over the county and carried out their plans for celebrating their country's birthday with spirit and enthusiasm, but in the manner that becomes good patriotic citizens.

ONE FINE THING ABOUT OUR COUNTRY—

There is one fine thing about this great country of curs, go where you will, you will find in almost every neighborhood a house built and dedicated to the worship of God. And our people believe in worship. Go in any direction and you will find at the appointed time, the people coming together in Sunday school and in church to engage in the service of worship.

No Christian need ever be lonely wherever he may be, if he will but go up to this house of worship. He will hear songs that are familiar to him since childhood, he will hear them read from the same old Book from which he learned to read at his mother's knee, the sermon from whatever text or subject, will not be altogether unfamiliar, and though he may never before have seen a single one of those present, he will feel that he is in a company of friends.

There was great wisdom and faith in the founding of our great government, that made one of its fundamentals, the provision that makes this happy condition possible. Let us as good citizens see to it that these sacred principles are kept alive and passed full of vigor on to our children and to our children's children.

Everything that is said in this column about how to build Columbiana applies to every other town in Shelby county that has not yet organized its forces and set to work to grow and build.

LETTER TO THE REPORTER

We heartily endorse your article last week concerning the good work done by Sheriff Falkner and his deputies. They have done some splendid work and it is being seen on every hand, but it seems to us that the courts and judges don't stand by them in enforcing the law as they should. They are too lenient in my opinion. The sheriff goes ahead he and his deputies, break up stills and arrest the persons running them, bring them to trial and some times they are fined the pitiful sum of fift dollars, and sometimes a senteenc of some-sort (very light) is imposed This along with other papers is sent to the Governor asking for a pardon. The Governor takes it, looks at it, turns it over and says, oh well my father was a good old Methodist preacher and he always preached forgivness, and I must do as I was taught. So I will forgive him, he has it so recorded, and this person although instructed not to sin any more, is back home at the same old job, and Sheriff Falkner and his deputies have their same work to do over.

IN MEMORY OF J. W. BRADLEY

On the morning of May 1, the spirit of J. W. Bradley took its flight. He had been ill for several weeks and his death was not unexpected.

In his early youth he was married to Miss Lucy Richardson and he was a devoted husband. The example of Mr. Bradley's life was such that those who follow it may hope to meet him again, for he walked the ways of a Christian. He was a member of the Baptist church.

Death came to Mr. Bradley at the age of 72. He was in Bessemer at the home of his son, C. W. Bradley. He moved from Bethel community a few motths ago and our people feel that they have lost one of their best friends and neighbors

His funeral was held in Bessemer on the day following his death and his remains were laid to rest in that city. Surviving him are two daughters, Mrs. S. J. Spearman and Mrs. H. W. Nelson of Bessemer; and three sons, O. F. Bradley, Wilsonville, T. A. Bradley Mayiene, and C. W. Bradley, Bessemer.

More the Fewer.

As a general thing, the more friends a man has the fewer he needs.

The Farmer Would Save Only 25¢ A Day~

There is much discussion and agitation in political circles about the financial problems of the American farmer and the so-called "relief" that might be given him by the reduction of freight rates.

Here is an interesting fact—established by United States Government statistics. The average farmer pays to the railroads for transporting his products the very small sum of $90.00 per year, less than 25c per day; and if the railroads were to haul his crops absolutely free of all cost, his economic condition would be bettered only by this paltry sum.

If the suggested reduction of 7 billion dollars in railroad valuation were put into effect, it would reduce the income of the railroads 35%, yet save the average farmer only four dollars a year.

Freight rates are not responsible for the farmer's troubles and most farmers know this despite the effort of vote-seeking politicians to "pass the buck" on all disturbances and depressions, to the transportation systems.

The strain of entertaining a nation at the White House killed four wives of presidents of the United States. They were Mrs. Tyler, Mrs. Fillmore, Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. Wilson. OILMEAL AND CORN FAVORED BY SHEEP

Some sheep feeders have been reporting excellent results from feeding a quarter of a pound of linseed meal a day to lambs in the corn field. Losses have been small and gains very satisfactory so far as they could be estimated. Similar reports have been made by others feeding lambs in the dry lot, though not under circumstances that allow a fair comparison. Some who have tried linseed meal feeding in the field have reported difficulty in getting the lambs to take it, says Chas. I. Bray, animal husbandry department, Colorado Agricultural college.

An explanation of the value of linseed meal with corn lies in the protein balance of the two feeds. A suggested reason for feed-lot losses from heavy corn feeding is that unused or unbalanced proteins may act as poisons in the body. Proteins are complex compounds of simple substances called amino-acids, some of these being highly necessary. Feeds vary considerably in the proportions of amino-acids, contained, some proteins being entirely lacking in one or more of these necessary amino-acids. When this is the case, another protein must be added containing an extra supply of the missing amino-acids.

Now linseed meal proteins and corn proteins appear to supplement each other in this way. At the Wisconsin experiment station tests with young pigs in regard to utilization of proteins showed that linseed meal proteins used alone were only 17 per cent available and the proteins of corn and barley were only 22 per cent available. But when a protein mixture was made up of three-quarters corn protein and one-quarter linseed meal protein, the mixed proteins were 37 per cent available, showing the value of each in supplementing the other.

Alfalfa probably supplies most of the amino-acids needed to balance corn, which is one reason why alfalfa and corn makes such a good combination in lamb feeding. However, in lamb feeding trials by E. J. Maynard at the Colorado experiment station last winter lambs getting linseed oil meal in addition to corn and alfalfa, gained three pounds more per head, brought 40 cents per hundred more on the market and made 38 cents per head more profit than those on alfalfa and corn only.

Tankage Good for Pigs on Rape and Blue Grass

During the summer of 1920, they found at the Iowa station that it paid to feed tankage in connection with corn to pigs on either rape or blue grass pasture. The pigs getting corn alone on rape pasture gained only two-thirds of a pound per head daily and required for 100 pounds of gain 623 pounds of corn, whereas the pigs getting tankage as well as corn gained 1.42 pounds per head daily and required for 100 pounds of gain 355 pounds of corn and 29 pounds of tankage. Each pound of tankage saved 7 pounds of corn. On blue grass, the results were almost identical with the results on rape, a pound of tankage saving 7 pounds of corn.

Earlier experiments at the Iowa station did not indicate such a decided advantage for tankage. It would seem, however, that even under the most unfavorable conditions a pound of tankage should replace 3 pounds of corn on rape pasture or about 4 or 5 pounds on blue grass pasture.

Market Through Sheep

Sheep not only afford a good market for salable feeds but for unsalable material, such as the forage around fences and ditch banks, the pick-up on meadows and stubble fields and other odds and ends of pasture not of sufficient acreage to use for cattle.

Live Stock Squibs

Scrubs lead—straight to failure.

Pure bred cattle figure out 49 per cent more efficient in production than scrubs.

An important thing is to provide clean dry shelters for the sows and their pigs.

* * *

Alfalfa and clover pastures are our best hog pastures and these can be used as soon as growth starts in the spring.

* * *

When the farmer buys stock he might better make it live stock than stock in a concern he knows nothing about.

* * *

Timothy hay is very undesirable as a feed for fattening cattle and clover or some other legume hay should be used if obtainable.

* * *

Tuberculosis is a menace to the hog business. In districts where skim milk, whey and other dairy products are fed to the hogs, contagion is likely.

* * *

With average prices for wool, a breeding ewe almost pays with her fleece for her upkeep during the year. And every little lamb means just so much profit.

ROAD BUILDING

DAY OF NARROW ROAD CONSTRUCTION GONE

Don't build the road narrow. But however it is built, have a right of way ample enough to provide for widening in the future. On these two hang all the law and the profits of modern road building!

An expensive fault of the narrow road is the concentration of traffic. Wheels moving constantly over the same places produce parallel lines of excessive wear. To prevent rapid disintegration of a single track road a heavier foundation and surface is needed than is required for a wider road.

Substantial shoulders at the sides on which the passing traffic may turn out are also necessary, as otherwise the wheels of vehicles turning out to pass will quickly wear ruts at the edges. In these water collects, to penetrate beneath the foundation, with disastrous results. A narrow road with soft earth shoulders is dangerous to motor traffic in slippery weather.

To build the heavier foundation and surface needed to bear the concentration of traffic on a narrow road, and the substantial shoulders at the sides require as much money as to build a wider road. On a wide road, traffic is scattered, and wear is distributed. With a paved surface sufficiently wide for two lines of rapidly moving vehicles to pass in safety, the necessity for artificial shoulders is eliminated. To build a narrow road, thin and without shoulders, means a loss of the entire investment in a comparatively short time.

A narrow right of way requires drainage ditches close to the travel. With no shoulder between paved surface and ditch the chances of serious accident are largely increased. All drainage ditches tend to become deeper, so that the danger of traffic becomes constantly greater.

Before any program for beautification of highway is undertaken, some assurance that the rights of way are wide enough to accommodate future traffic should be had.

Motor vehicle traffic will increase as the mileage of hard roads increases. A general extension in the width of wearing surfaces will call for wider rights of way. To obtain wider rights of way now means an ultimate saving of a large sum of money and will prevent many future difficulties.

Great Influence of Better Roads

The following points show how improved roads influence farm home life:

1. Shortens the distance from neighbor to neighbor and so reduces isolation and loneliness.

2. Brings the town and the country home closer together, making it possible for the farmer and his family to enjoy the amusements and educational advantages offered in town.

3. Saves time in traveling from the farm to town and from farm to farm. This allows more time for work, rest or pleasure.

4. Lightens the burden of marketing crops.

5. Social intercourse between town and country tends to break down barriers of misunderstanding, jealousy, suspicion and ill-feeling.

6. Improved roads make possible bigger and better consolidated schools and churches in town or in the country.

7. Improved roads offer greater incentive to hauling limestone and fertilizer in building up the farm and increasing its productivity and income.

Learning to Build Roads

The advisory board of highway research, which recently met in Washington, is composed of from sixty to seventy of the leading engineers and scientists of the country. More than $1,000,000 is being spent on learning how to build highways so as to give the best and longest service per dollar, and this group of men have assembled to discuss and exchange data on the experiments in progress on roads.

Roads Help Keep Pace

Good roads have helped the farmer keep pace with modern times. Who would go back to those days when the farm was isolated, especially in wet weather, the deep rutted dirt roads, the horse and buggy, or perhaps the sleigh, with its limited area of travel when a trip to town was considered a journey.

Remove Decayed Trees

Removal of all decayed trees bordering main line roads in Connecticut has been undertaken by the state highway department in the hope of removing the danger of highway blockades during heavy windstorms.

No actual cases of accidents involving falling trees across the roadways have come to the attention of the department, but it is felt that if this precaution is taken the probability of mishaps of this kind will be removed.

Now Well He Used PE-RU-NA

Mr. Charles S. Many, 12 Water St., Ossining, N. Y., writes:—"I had catarrh for ten years, tried a lot of medicines, spent a lot of money but it did me no good. Instead of getting better I grew worse. My eyes were bloodshot, my nose smelled bad, and I would get so dizzy I would be forced to catch hold of something to keep from falling. I used about ten bottles of Pe-ru-na and am cured of catarrh, the dizzy feeling has left me and I am not bothered any more. I keep Pe-ru-na in the house and when I feel a cold coming on I take a little. It does me good."

THE BLUEBIRD PRINCESS

PERHAPS if Prince Arno had been a poor youth he would not have found life such a bore and he might have married as his father the king had often asked him to do, and settle down at home.

But he was a prince, and he did not fall in love with any princess that his father had chosen, and so one day he started off on a journey, telling the king that when he found the girl he could love he would return.

The poor king was very unhappy, for he thought he should never see his son again, because if he could not love any of the beautiful princesses he had chosen for him, he was quite sure he would find none in his travels.

For many months Prince Arno traveled without seeing anyone but peasants working in the fields, and then one day, just as it was growing dark, he spied far in from the road where he was traveling a castle brightly lighted.

Turning his horse into the path, he rode up to the door, but what was his surprise when he reached the castle to see the light suddenly go out and all the windows dark.

Out of the Fire There Arose a Beautiful Maiden.

But as he was a brave prince he dismounted and boldly walked up to the door and knocked. A bent-over, witchey-looking creature answered his knock, holding a flickering candle in her hand.

"Can I find shelter here for the night?" inquired the prince.

"Enter if you wish," replied the witch. "If you care to remain, you are welcome; but no traveler has stayed here long, I warn you."

She led him to a room, where, by the candle light, Prince Arno saw a broken-down bed in one corner. "This is all I can offer. If you care to remain, you are welcome," she said.

Prince Arno told her he would sleep there that night, after he had made his horse comfortable under the trees.

It did not take the prince long to fall asleep, in spite of his strange surroundings, for he had traveled far that day. How long he slept he did not know, but when he woke the sound of music fell upon his ears.

Softly opening the door, he looked upon a strange sight. A room full of beautiful maidens dressed in blue were dancing and swaying to the music, though where the light came from or the music he could not make out.

Prince Arno knew he must be in an enchanted castle and that some strange spell was upon the place, and he was determined to find out something about it.

"Hold!" he cried, rushing into the midst of the dancing group, and at the same time he caught one of the beautiful maidens by her arm.

In an instant the scene had changed. Not a maiden was there. The light had gone and the music streamed through the windows. Prince Arno saw that he held by one wing a poor, struggling, frightened bluebird.

Just then the door opened, and in came the old witch. "You have rescued our princess," she said. "Now, if you are brave enough you can save her and restore her to her former shape."

"And what am I to do to break the spell that holds her?" inquired the prince.

The old witch touched with her cane the bare fireplace, and instantly there blazed a bright fire. "Throw her into the fire," she said.

This was not easy for the prince to do, for he was a kind-hearted man and could not bear to give pain to anyone.

"You hesitate?" said the witch. "They all do; no one has been brave enough to cast the bluebird into the flames."

Prince Arno hesitated no longer. If this was the way the spell was to be broken the bird must be sacrificed, and into the flames he threw the bird.

But instead of being burned, out of the fire there arose a beautiful maiden, the most beautiful Prince Arno had ever seen, dressed in a gown the color of the flames, as though they had wrapped themselves about her.

Prince Arno's heart told him he had found the bride he sought, and the old witch explained that she was a princess that had fallen under the spell of a wicked ogre, who had changed her into a bluebird, to remain one until a prince should rescue her in the way he had done.

"I could only break the spell that held her at midnight," said the witch, "and then only for an hour, when all the bluebirds around could be changed into maidens."

The next day Prince Arno took the princess with him to his father and the king gave a grand feast that lasted for a week to celebrate the marriage of his heir.

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

FEET TO THE EAST

IN MANY old graveyards in this country the graves are so placed that the body lies with its feet to the east. This is a form of orientation and a manner of burying still generally followed in Europe. Of this Elworthy says: "It may well be maintained that all our modern notions included in the general term orientation are but survivals of the once universal sun-worship." He regards "our still observed custom of burying our dead with the feet toward the East" as one which, though originating in heathen times, is not to be regarded as being still "an act of idolatrous sun-worship," but as having been changed into a pious custom of religious significance. He adds: "Among the aboriginal Australians who are still cannibals the graves have a direction from east to west and the foot of the grave is toward the rising sun."

The whole subject of orientation has received much attention from learned writers and there is a considerable literature on the subject. Though all agree that its origin was in sun-worship yet on other points the authorities are not all agreed. For that matter neither, apparently, were the heathen. For awhile the Egyptians built their temples so that they opened toward the east, allowing the beams of the rising sun to enter and gild the statues placed at the west end, Clement of Alexandria says that in general the altars and images of the pagan temples were placed at the east end and the temple opened to the west. And all alike were sun-worshipers.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day, lucky jewel

MIRIAM

HE exquisite name of Miriam seems to be a predecessor of Mary. It, too, signifies "bitter," and comes from the Hebrew word marah, which has that translation. But Miriam, according to the Scriptures, antedates Mary.

Miriam first named the sister of Moses and Aaron, who led the sons of the Israelites when they saw their enemies dead upon the seashore. It was not repeated until after the captivity when it took the Greek forms of Mariam and Mariamne, and became much used by Jewish women. The Asmonean princess in whom the brave Maccabean line was extinguished by Herod the Great, was called Mariam. Later it is found designating the poor soul who is cited as having fulfilled the most terrible of all the woes denounced by Moses upon the daughters of Jerusalem.

Miriam was one time the name by which the Blessed Virgin herself was called, and it also named two popular saints: the Magdalen and the Penitent of Egypt. Mariamne, the derivative, is sufficiently important to be discussed separately at a later date.

The pearl is Miriam's talismanic gem. Its legacy of tears will be set aside for Miriam, for whom it will bring sweetness, charm and true friendships. Monday is her lucky day and 7 her lucky number.

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

TRAVELING AND SEEING

AT THIRTY Priscilla knew that in the little town where she had grown up flourished the fine flower of civilization. Her town happened to be "located," as her geography said, in the northeastern corner of the United States, and Priscilla went each winter to New York or to Boston or to Philadelphia for two weeks. Once she had even been as far as Washington. But "travel," in the true sense of the word, was too expensive. Priscilla had been brought up not to spend her income. Moreover, Miss Elizabeth, who lived with her mother down the street and was Priscilla's model in all matters—Miss Elizabeth said that if one had "the seeing eye" one found at one's doorstep what many went across the world for and missed.

Then came Priscilla's invitation from her cousins in Florida to spend a month with them. So she rented her house and went. At Richmond, there boarded the train a family of returned missionaries from China, a mother and father and seven children; and Priscilla, whose section was next theirs, fell into conversation. She had, of course, read of armed guards and revolutions; but never before had she talked as an equal with anyone who had been under arrest. It made her feel excited. Then someone told her that the little brown bushes stuck over with white that she had been watching for a half day were cotton, and a kind of scared sense of great experience crept upon her. The negro cabins of the Carolinas, and the mules, and later the hanging moss and sugar cane of Georgia, made her feel positively Don Juanish. And then came Florida.

To Priscilla, who had never seen anything older than Plymouth Rock, the Sixteenth century town was a revelation of another world. The white coquina walls with the crimson splashes of the poinsettia blossoms, the orange trees and the fragrant yellow roses, the mocking birds, and the blue water and skies, gave her an actual sensation of growing—the top of her head seemed to have expanded—it was as if windows had been opened in a close room.

Then one day came a letter from Miss Elizabeth. Priscilla seemed to see Miss Elizabeth out there on the plaza under the palmettos among the sisters on their way to mass in the red-roofed cathedral. Miss Elizabeth was fifty, but Priscilla suddenly felt twenty years her elder. Next year Priscilla would go to China. She would save and sell and spend and see the world. She felt as if she had to make up for Miss Elizabeth and for all others who had deliberately and permanently dug themselves in. She would acquire the habit of travel.

Sunday School Lesson

Lesson for July 13

THE BOYHOOD OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:4-52.

GOLDEN TEXT—"And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man."—Luke 2:52.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Boy Jesus in God's House.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Boy Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Four-Fold Life.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lessons From the Boyhood of Jesus.

I. Jesus Growing (v. 40).

While Jesus Christ was God, yet His deity did not interfere with His development as a human being. The processes of His physical, mental and spiritual growth were the same as in any normal human being.

1. "Grew and Waxed Strong." It was necessary for His body to develop. His brain, nerves and muscles must not only attain unto their proper size but must come to act together, become correlated.

2. "Filled With Wisdom." His training was largely in the hands of His mother. She was a Bible woman, as evinced by her song of praise when it was announced to her that God's favor was to come upon her. She was, therefore, a suitable teacher. She, no doubt, taught Him to commit Bible verses to memory and taught Him the great stories of the Old Testament from the creation through the patriarchs and prophets.

3. "And the Grace of God Was Upon Him." By the grace of God doubtless is meant God's loving favor and tender care.

II. Jesus Tarrying Behind at Jerusalem (vv. 41-43).

At the age of twelve years the Jewish child took His place as a worshiper in the temple. He was then considered "a child of the law." Being conscious of His mission, when His mother and Joseph were returning from attendance at the Passover, Jesus tarried behind in the temple and inquired into the meaning of the ordinances of God's house. He had an alert, eager mind which inquired after truth, especially the truth concerning His Father's house. His heart yearned for His Father.

III. Jesus Found in the Temple (vv. 44-47).

When His mother and Joseph had gone some distance on their return journey they perceived that Jesus was not with them and sought for Him among their kinsfolk and acquaintances. Not finding Him there, they returned to Jerusalem, where they found Him in the temple.

1. He Was Sitting (v. 46). This shows that He was no passing visitor or sightseer. He was perfectly at home in His Father's house.

2. He Was Hearing the Teachers of God's Word (v. 46). This shows that He was eager to learn God's will.

3. He Asked Questions (v. 46). His growing mind was inquisitive. It more than received what was taught. It inquired after truth.

4. He Answered Questions (v. 47). His answers showed great wisdom, such as to astonish those who heard Him, yet we should not surmise that He was consciously displaying His wisdom. It was not an exhibition of His divine wisdom, but the expression of the workings of a perfect human mind suffused by the Holy Spirit.

IV. Mary's Complaining (vv. 48-50).

She remonstrated with Him for His behavior. To this He replied in a dignified, yet tender manner. He made no apology, showing that He was more than the son of Mary. God was His Father. Though Mary did not understand these things, as a wise mother she kept them in her heart.

V. Jesus' Obedience (v. 51).

Though He was fully conscious of His divine being and mission he lived a life full of filial obedience, thus teaching us that obedience to parents is pleasing to God and a duty which will be discharged faithfully by those who have the Spirit of Christ.

VI. Jesus' Development (v. 52).

1. Mental. He increased in wisdom. Although the divine nature was united with the human, the human was left free to develop as a normal human mind.

2. Physical. He increased in stature. This shows that His body developed according to the laws of a normal human.

3. Spiritual. He increased in favor with God and man. As His mind increased, and His apprehension of God became more full, the Divine Being could more fully express Himself through Him and, as the perfect life was lived, men could recognize in Him superior qualities and therefore their hearts would open to Him.

Little Regard for Others

A self-centered sinner is self-satisfied, selfish, conceited, contented with himself, but has little regard for others.—The Living Word.

BAPTIST MINISTER GIVES TANLAC FULL CREDIT

No greater praise can be accorded a medicine than the voluntary testimony of a minister of the gospel. The preacher's high calling puts a grave responsibility on his every word, and he will not jeopardize his reputation by commending a thing without first assuring himself it is all right.

Tanlac has been endorsed by numbers of prominent ministers. They have put Tanlac to the test of personal service and their words carry conviction because they say what they know to be the truth.

One of the latest to speak out in behalf of Tanlac is Rev. B. E. Bell, a retired Baptist minister, 207 Elm St., San Antonio, Texas, who says:

"Before taking Tanlac I had suffered from stomach and nerve troubles for over 30 years and there were times when my condition was such that it required almost superhuman effort for me to prepare my sermons and go through with my Sunday services. Indeed, my work seemed like some great obstacle across my pathway—a burden too big to carry in my weak physical condition.

"But in six weeks' time Tanlac transformed my entire outlook, giving me what seemed like a new set of nerves and a brand-new digestive system. My appetite became ravenous, my nerves steady, my liver action regular and I could sleep sound for the first time in years. Whenever I have the slightest symptoms of trouble now I always resort to Tanlac, am taking some at present, and it never fails to smooth things out for me. I certainly have the best of reasons for feeling grateful to Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

POLITICS OF TODAY

Just now the country is bein agitated by the selection of candidates for the presidency. Judging from the outside, there is a certain brutality about it, a certain heartlessness that is wholly unchristian and seems to us indefensible. Without the slightest hesitation the character of men is attacked in the most horrible way. Advantage is taken in every thing both private and personal that can injure the candidacy. It don't seem to be a question of selecting the best man for office. It's a question of getting my candidate over and calling off the other man. It has been astonishing in recent years how far this thing has gone. In the early days of our republic only the leaders in the community, moral men of high and great ideals were invited to a place of public trust. Now they try to laugh such men out of court It shows that our government is weakening, and sets before our eyes the glitter of gold rather than the character of state.

Power Company Starts New Series of Ads.

The Alabama Power Company begins this week a series of advertisements dealing with the relationship of that company to the state at large.

This first advertisement, on page four of this issue of the Reporter carries some interesting and valuable information. It is only ten years ago that state wide hydro-electric service was introduced into Alabama, with the completion of the Power Company's great plant at Lock12.

Since that time electric power consumption has grown steadily from 6500 horsepower to 360,000 horse power at the close of 1923. These ten years have been marked also, by the greatest industrial revival that Alabama, or any other state possibly, has enjoyed in a like period of time.

Read the advertisement on page four and watch for the later numbers of the series.

SHERIFF'S FORCES CONTINUE ACTIVITY

Siluria, Ala., July 14.—On June 28, Deputy Fallon, assisted by Will Cooper, raided a liquor hiding place near Siluria. After finding several bottles, they waited for the owners to come for it. Within a few minutes W. O. Cofer, better known as Ottis, drove up in a car. The officers slipped almost to them but were discovered in time that the bottles were broken, Ottis cutting his hand with the broken glass. Altogether there were 26 soda water bottles, a half gallon and a quart fruit jar, and a gallon can. Cofer was arrested and tried before Judge Riddle and fined $250 and cost. The other people in the car were not arrested.

On July 9, Deputy Fallon with the aid of Sheriff Falkner and Deputies Gardner and Adkins, raided a still about 4½ miles above Acton near Cahaba River and destroyed a 500 gallon still and six vats each with 600 gallons of beer. Two young men were arrested.

Saturday morning Deputy Fallon arrested Gayto Mays, alias Henry Mays, upon advice of officers from Morgan, Ga. The negro was carried to jail in Columbiana to await Georgia officers. Later in the day Mr. Fallon and Mr. Cooper came upon R. G. (Coon) Collins in Pelham with liquor in his car. He gave the officers quite a chase through Helena and towards Roebuck but gave in at Hillsborough when the officers began shooting the tires. Coon was later allowed bond of $300. That night Deptuies Cooper, Honeycutt and Lloyd Fallon assisted Sheriff Fallon in raiding a still within half a mile of L. & N. station, in Pelham. About 250 gallons of beer and 150 gallon still were destroyed No. arrests were made though everything at the still was warm at the time of raiding.

PASTURE SPECIALIST COMING FOR 2 DAYS

County Agent A.A. Lauderdale, has secured the services of John Rigdon, Pasture Specialist of the Central of Georgia Railway Agricultural Service, for two days work in Shelby county, Thursday and Friday, July 17 and 18. Mr. Rigdon has for several years had the actual experience of planting a number of demonstration pastures along the lines of the Central of Georgia railroad and from year to year checking up on these pastures to watch results: It was he who supervised the planting of the pasture on the McElderry farms in Talladega county that has attracted so much attention.

It is generally conceded that the best authority on pastures in the South is the service that Mr. Rigdon represents, and that Mr. Rigdon is himself as well qualified to speak with authority as any other man.

Mr. Lauderdale has arranged meetings at which Mr. Rigdon will speak, as follows:

Thursday, July 17, at 2 p. m. Vincent school house.

Thursday, July 17, at 8 p. m. Fourmile school house.

Alabama Cotton Crop Estimated 861,000 Bales

(By F. W. Gist, Agricultural Statistician)

The estimated acreage planted to cotton in Alabama this year is 3,191,000 the same as was planted last year. The condition of the crop on June 25 was 70, which indicates an average acre-yield of 129 pounds of lint. This yield on the acreage planted should produce a crop of 861,000 bales. Such an outcome is dependent on the changes that may occur in the growth of the crop during the rest of the season.

The crop was planted about six days late; the stand 77 per cent perfect. Farmers have expressed the intention to poison 13.5 per cent of the acreage in an attempt to control the weevil.

Weveils present in the fields on June 25 were reported to be 80 per cent of the number present last year and 88 per cent of the usual number present at that date.

The acreage for the whole country was estimated to be 40,403,000 an increase of 1,702,000 acres over that of last year and the condition average 71.2 per cent. A yield of 12,144,000 bales is indicated.

Wedding Halts Business of Exchangeites

While the Exchange Club was holding a called meeting in the office of Judge Riddle Friday afternoon, and while matters of great import were being gravely considered, business was interrupted with the announcement that a couple, Dr. W. E. King and Mrs.T. L. Baker, of Birmingham, had presented themselves before Judge Riddle to be united in the holy bonds of matriomny. His honor, the judge, was presiding over the meeting, but he promptly suspended business and invited the club to be witnesses of the impressive ceremony.

The couple was unaccompanied so the only witnesses they had were the members of the club, but to a man they can testify that the knot was well and gracefully tied by Exchangeite, Judge Riddle.

The groom thanked Mr. Davis for holding his hat and expressed himself as well pleased with his audience; then the happy couple departed and the Exchange Club resumed the transaction of its business.

TWO MEN HELD FOR McELROY KILLING

Two more men, Reggie Lucas and Bob Merrell, were arrested Saturday in connection with the killing of N. F. McElroy, whose body was found Wednesday morning in an out house near Calera, that had been burned the night previous. The arrests were made by State Officer Thos. P. Williamson of Birmingham, who had been assigned to the case.

The charges against Will and Arnold Carden who were arrested on Wednesday of last week, were dismissed Tuesday and the two men were released from jail.

HELENA WILL HAVE NEW SCHOOL READY

The community of Helena is making fine progress toward the completion of a new school building, according to W. S. Moore, one of the live wires of Helena, who was in town Monday.

The roof has been put on and the plastering is now being done. The building is to be completed in plenty of time for the opening of school. It will be when completed, Mr. Moore says, one of the most attractive in the whole county. It is built of hollow tile according to the latest state plans, has six class rooms and is costing about $14,000. But the people of Helena are not stopping with that. Already they are making plans for another bond issue of $7,000 that will take care of a balance on the present building and provide for a large auditorium. It has taken a great deal of hard work, Mr. Moore states, careful planning, and a good deal of money too, but the satisfaction of having a modern school building large enough to accommodate comfortably all the boys and girls in the community, will make up for all that

EXCHANGE CLUB HOLDS TWO GOOD MEETINGS

Membership Quota Is Completed and Application Is Made for Charter

The Exchange Club of Columbiana, for the organization of which the first steps were taken March 28th, reached its minimum quota of members at the regular meeting Thursday of last week and has forwarded to Exchange headquarters, Toledo, Ohio, its application for a charter, which when granted will entitle the club to take its place as a recognized unit of this national organization. Permanent officers for the club were chosen at a called meeting of the club on Friday afternoon, as follows:

F. G. Koenig , president; W. L. Christian, treasurer; Luther Fowler, secretary. The club now has twenty-five members, the new members received at the last meeting being, Rev. R. W. Stuckey, W. E. Merrell, E. W. Chapman.

The two meetings held last week were among the best and most enthusiastic the club has held.

The announcement that the membership quota had been reached was greeted with a loud cheer and the report of the committee in charge of the advertising campaign, announcing the Alabama Power Company's generous offer to co-operate with the club in the campaign was received with equal enthusiasm. By the time of the meeting Friday afternoon , the copy of the initial advertisement of the campaign prepared by the Alabama Power Company, had been received and this advertisement states that Columbiana is to have hydro-electric power furnished by the Alabama Power Company. This is the first assurance coming direct from the company, that Columbiana is to have this service.

After Mr. Koenig, a member of the town council, had explained the provisions of the recently adopted Trash Ordinance, the club appointed Friday, July 18, as Clean-up Day and named a committee consisting of Harry Gordon A. P. McGhee, E. M. Jones and J. P. Montgomery to co-operate with the Town Council and the Ladies Culture Club, in carrying out a general town wide clean-up campaign.

Members of the club are looking forward now to the time when their charter will be formally presented and they are planning to make this an important event, not only in the history of the club but in the life of the community as well.

The present membership of the club is as follows: W. L. Christian, J. H. Crawford, J. L. Davis, W. F. Davis, Luther Fowler, Harry Gordon, J. L. Isbell, E. M. Jones, F. G. Koenig, A. A. Gordon Fincher Hanged In Talladega Friday

(By R. P. Posey)

We were at the hanging of Gordon Fincher at Talladega last Friday. There were lots of people there. Two or three thousand. Just before Fincher was hanged, Rev. J. W. Haynes, a Baptist preacher sang: "Will There Be Any Stars in My Crown." Fincher stood by his on a box with a cigarette in his mouth smoking very nicely. When Mr. Maynes got through Fincher said to the large crowd, that "Alabama was hanging an innocent man. Farewell, Farewell to all," and then walked to the gallows unaided. Inside the jail he went to the window and waved his handkerchief at the people. In two minutes the rope was adjusted. The trigger was sprung and Gordon Fincher paid for the crime of which he was accused, that of murdering Miss Maybelle McCollough, near Lincoln, a young lady of 17 years old.

Fincher was 32 years old, had a wife and four children, the oldest 11 years and the youngest 3 years old. All were there.

DEMOCRATS NAME DAVIS AND BRYAN

Longest Convention in Political History Finally Concludes Its Labors.

103 BALLOTS ARE CAST

Nomination of West Virginia Man Is Accomplished After Smith and McAdoo Give Up—Meeting Lasts 14 Days.

THE TICKET

FOR PRESIDENT
John W. Davis, of West Virginia

FOR VICE PRESIDENT
Chas. W. Bryan, of Nebraska

JOHN W. DAVIS

CHARLES W. BRYAN

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Convention Hall, New York.—After a convention battle unprecedented in its stubbornness and its length, the Democratic party presents to the voters of the United States the ticket that heads this column. The Presidential candidate was not selected until 103 ballots had been cast, exceeding the 1864 record, which was 57 ballots, by 46 ballots.

Day after day, night after night, the deadlock continued unbroken, with McAdoo leading and Smith a persistent second. They and their managers were determined, not to say obstinate, and repeated efforts to persuade them to quit and thus to bring about the nomination of a compromise candidate, were frustrated. The religious issue, which was forced upon the convention in a fight over the anti-Klan plank in the platform, played its part, and a big part, in keeping the delegates from getting together. Indeed, it must be admitted that the struggle between the Klan element and the Catholic contingent dominated the proceedings of the convention. Everyone deplored the introduction of such an issue into Ameican national politics, but no one could deny that it had been introduced.

On the fourth day of balloting William Jennings Bryan, being granted the privilege of "explaining his vote" from the rostrum, tried to persuade the convention that McAdoo was its logical choice. The galleries booed him, angry delegates fired hot questions at him, and he accomplished nothing at that time for his favorite.

Several state delegations and various individual delegates changed their votes from time to time without coming anywhere near breaking the deadlock. McAdoo's forces, though waxing and waning, in the main stood by him with extraordinary pertinacity, and the Smith legions were no less unyielding. Favorite sons and dark horses were given tryouts day by day, but all seemed unable to develop real strength. John W. Davis once climbed to 129½ votes, and Senator Ralston got as far as 97.

Stick to It on Fourth

Independence day came and found the delegates still in session, weary-eyed, almost apathetic, but immovable. Not all immovable, to be sure, for by that time many were running short of both money and patience and several hundred delegates and alternates left for home on July 3. Some of these deserters were recalled by telegraph, and steps were taken to finance those who were "going broke."

The Fourth of July session opened with "The Star-Spangled Banner," and every candidate's banner continued to wave. Augustus Thomas read the Declaration of Independence, and almost every delegate seemed confirmed in the opinion that his life and liberty depended on his voting as he had voted, and that therein lay his pursuit of happiness. Through ballot after ballot the count displayed the same deadly monotony. Then Tom Taggert created a diversion by reading a telegram from Senator Ralston withdrawing from the race—at least for the time being. Indiana thereupon gave McAdoo 20 of her votes and Smith 10. During the sixty-fifth ballot came a telegram from James M. Cox turning loose the Ohio delegation. So the Buckeyes gave their 48 votes to Newton D. Baker, which didn't seem to help matters, since scarcely anyone else took the hint.

Friday evening the Smith forces brought forward two propositions, one that the candidates be invited to address the convention in executive session, the other that Smith, as governor of New York, be asked to come in and talk half an hour. Both were defeated by the McAdoolites, a two-third vote being required. The same fate met various attempts, on Friday and Saturday, to cut off the low candidate on each successive ballot. One delegate moved that the convention adjourn to meet in Kansas City on July 21, but received little support.

Baker Dropped

Ohio dropped Baker Saturday and Smith's vote crawled slowly toward the 400-mark while McAdoo's totals as slowly declined. After the seventieth ballot almost the only persons who paid attention to the roll call were the women in the California and Texas delegations, who mechanically waved colored bandannas every time a vote for McAdoo was recorded.

Late Saturday afternoon, when despair and disgust had seized upon all, that master politician, Tom Taggart, stepped to the rostrum and presented the first plan that seemed to offer a chance to settle the convention's troubles. That was that the chairmen of the national committee and of the convention be authorized to call the representatives of the candidates into a conference for the purpose of arriving at a compromise agreement. With a glad shout the delegates approved of this scheme, and the convention was adjourned until 11 o'clock Monday morning.

Labor for Harmony

Saturday night and all day Sunday the harmony committee labored, but to its most promising plans Mr. McAdoo dissented. The failure to reach an agreement was reported to the convention Monday and the weary round of balloting was resumed. After the eighty-second ballot a resolution was adopted releasing all delegates from all pledges and instructions so far as lay in the power of the convention. McAdoo's strength already was dwindling and on the eighty-fifth ballot he was below Smith for the first time.

At the opening of the Tuesday night session the convention was told by Franklin Roosevelt that Smith would withdraw immediately after such action by McAdoo. The reply to this was an increase of the McAdoo vote to well over 400. Ralston was tried out but after his vote had reached nearly 200 he definitely withdrew. Then J. W. Davis was again boosted by the floating vote. Ninety-nine ballots had been taken when McAdoo sent to Chairman Walsh a message saying that he was loath to abandon his supporters by quitting the contest, but was now willing that they should act as their judgment dictated. All motions to adjourn had been defeated and the century ballot was taken. McAdoo fell off to 190. But the suspicious Smith forces stood firm. Just then W. J. Bryan showed signs of wishing to address the convention again, so, at 4 o'clock in the morning the delegates hurriedly adjourned for eight hours and staggered to their hotels.

The one hundred and first ballot Wednesday noon showed both Smith and McAdoo fast fading out of the picture and John W. Davis looming up over three hundred. Underwood, with the support of New York, was a good second and Meredith showed up well. Senator Walsh, who wasn't eager for the nomination, received a respectable vote. Here was the making of another deadlock, with three or four bolts.

Despite Mr. Bryan's missionary trips through the delegations the vote for Davis mounted rapidly during the next two ballots, state after state climbing into what looked like the band wagon. Vote changes came fast and a veritable stampede resulted before the one hundred and third ballot was ended.

An so this most extraordinary of convention contests ended in the nomination of John W. Davis of West Virginia for President of the United States by acclamation at a night session Gov. Charles W. Bryan, of Nebraska, was selected as his running mate, and the convention adjourned in the early hours of Thursday morning.

The candidates of the Democratic party stand upon a platform which reaffirms the party's adherence and devotion to the cardinal principles of freedom of religion, freedom of the press, but does not denounce the Ku Klux Klan by name; which declares the ideals of world peace, the League of Nations and the had won by a margin of just four votes. Then the weary delegates returned to their hotels until Monday morning.

Pat Harrison, Keynoter

Perhaps as good a way as any to tell of this convention is to relate its chief incidents day by day. Of course Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi was the important figure on Tuesday, since he, one of Democracy's leading orators, was temporary chairman. Following the usual preliminaries and the beautiful singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" by Anna Case, while thousands of tiny silk flags fluttered from the rafters, Senator Harrison was installed and proceeded to deliver his long keynote speech. It was to be expected that he would excoriate the Republican party, and so he did. But somehow he did not arouse either the delegates or the galleries so much as one would have thought he might. Perhaps it was the heat. He was eloquent, however, and his language was incisive, his assertions sharply pointed, his denunciations of what his party thinks the misdeeds and shortcomings of the Republican majority in congress forceful. He won laughing applause when he declared that what the country needed was not a sphinx, but a Paul Revere, and again when, poking a bit of fun at the Cleveland convention, he promised that this would be no cold-storage affair, but red hot, highly seasoned and well prepared. Toward the end of his speech the senator did bring his hearers to their feet, and started the first real demonstration of the convention. As may be guessed, it was at his first mention of Woodrow Wilson. Everyone was ready for it, and on the moment all rose with a tumult of cheering. One by one the delegation standards were uprooted, and a parade through the aisles started that lasted many minutes. In the midst of it the band struck up the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," and again the admirable Anna Case stepped forward and led the singing throng.

Walsh, the Investigator

On Wednesday, to prove that the women were being given their share of the work, Chairman Harrison introduced Mrs. Le Roy Springs of South Carolina, chairman of the committee on Credentials. Handsome, calm and cool in white silk, she took the platform, waved greetings to cheering friends and read her report in a fine, clear voice. Then the star of that day, Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, was presented to the convention as its permanent chairman. "He is a real Democrat and the greatest investigator this country as ever known," said Senator Harrison, and the crowd howled approval. And again the state standards danced about the aisles and were massed in front of the rostrum, for here was the man who had done more than any other to supply campaign material for his party this year, and whom that party gives credit for having done great service for the nation.

Walsh is known as one of the best speakers in the senate, and his address was well written and vigorously delivered, though again the heat served to lessen its effect with the audience. Not so sharply, perhaps, as Harrison, but quite as effectively, he, too, set forth at length what his fellow Democrats consider the delinquencies of the Republican majority in congress and the Republican administration, and especially what they look upon as Republican attempts at palliation of the offenses and moral turpitude that Senator Walsh declared had been brought to light through the recent investigations in Washington. He alluded to "the palpable falsehood" of the Republican platform in its assertion that those investigations exposed misdeeds by men of both parties, and dared his political opponents to name one Democratic officeholder who "has been involved by the investigators for anything he did while in office."

In his peroration Senator Walsh called on his countrymen to return to the ideals of Woodrow Wilson and "resume the place he won for us—the moral leadership of the world." Which mention of their dead leader brought forth another demonstration, the pretty feature of which was the releasing of a white dove from a balcony.

About this time it developed that something had been "slipped over" on the women who are taking active part in the national affairs of the party. It had been decided that the gentler sex should be further recognized by creating a position of permanent vice chairman and giving it to Miss May Kennedy of the Bronx. The other women had not been consulted and the appointment was reported to the convention from the platform and approved. Miss Kennedy, not before known in national politics, is secretary to the sheriff here, and is an attractive and smart young woman who later demonstrated her ability to wield the gavel acceptably.

Ku Klux Klan Is Named

More formal business, including a resolution of thanks to "Our Pat," the temporary chairman, and then came the roll call of states for presentation of candidates. "Alabama," cried the clerk, and Alabama responded in the person of Forney Johnston, a business-like, snappy looking gentleman, who, in a business-like and snappy speech told the delegates why Senator Oscar Underwood was their ideal candidate. To him fell the honor of arousing the convention to the first really spontaneous demonstration so far. (That word "demonstration" is overworked, but it is the only one that fits.) Mr. Johnston said Mr. Underwood had asked him to place before the convention his views on a certain matter in unmistakable language. He did so, and when he named the Ku Klux Klan—the first outspoken mention of the organization—about half the delegates leaped to their feet with a wild war whoop that indicated they shared enthusiastically in the Alabaman's condemnatory attitude toward the "invisible government." The shouting ran like wildfire through the hall, and one after another state standards were wrenched from their sockets and carried into the procession that quickly formed. Not all of them, by any means, and there were bitter struggles over some that did not get into the parade. Most of the New England, northern and western states followed Alabama and New York into the anti-Klan demonstration. As a general thing the strong McAdoo delegations kept their seats and held their standards fast. In the Missouri section there was a squabble when John Keegan of St. Louis tried in vain to capture the standard. The women of the delegation uttered shrieks of protest, and Mrs. A. C. Parsons secured a hold on the staff that couldn't be loosened. In the Colorado delegation the row was more serious, and the state standard was badly mutilated before the police could quiet the excited delegates. It was to be noted that several standards in the parade were of states in which the Klan is especially strong, but in these instances, as in most of the demonstrations, the carrying of the standard did not mean necessarily that the entire delegation, or even the greater part of it, was in sympathy. Not until the band leader, showing unwanted tact, started up "America," which all could join in with good grace, was the tumult in the convention calmed. Characteristically, those in the hall who belonged to or sympathized with the Klan sat silent under the jeering cries of "kleagle" directed at them.

Big McAdoo Demonstration

Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas having been put in nomination by former Governor Brough, briefly, neatly and with little resulting fuss, the clerk called:

"California."

For this the McAdoo forces had been waiting on the edges of their cLairs and to the accompaniment of wild cheering a forest of California flags bearing the bear, sprang up where the McAdoo delegates were thickest, and smaller clumps wherever in the crowd were a few votes the Californian had corralled. To the front of the platform stepped former Senator Phelan, looking like a page from the history of 25 years ago, and presented at great length the claims of his candidate. Laying stress on McAdoo's record of good service rendered his country and the fact that he shared in the work and ideals of Woodrow Wilson, Mr. Phelan did his level best. His speech was full of good things, but he couldn't hold the attention of the overheated audience. Men and women wandered through the aisles and those who remained in their seats chatted with their neighbors until the hall was filled with a murmur that must have been rather dismaying to the speaker. However, he had the satisfaction of knowing that he was being listened to by hundreds of thousands of radio addicts throughout the country. Chairman Walsh finally grew angry and told the audience what he thought of their discourtesy, and then they relapsed into quietude for a few moments.

Even the McAdoo enthusiasts were glad to have Senator Phelan arrive at the culmination of his address, for it gave them the chance to "bust loose." They wanted to show the Smithites and all the others how numerous and how determined they were. California naturally led the dance, her men and women bedecked with gay colored handkerchiefs. In the van was carried a pretty young girl dressed as "Miss Columbia," and following her was a quartet of white-robed angels playing trumpets. Texas, Pennsylvania and a dozen other states helped ou with the procession, and whenever the enthusiasm seemed to be dying down, the devices familiar to all who have seen such affairs served to revive it. Miss Columbia and the trumpeters, hot but tireless, were hoisted to the platform, and for just one hour they kept the demonstration going. All this time Mrs. McAdoo, laughing excitedly, stood in a box and looked down on the shouting delegates who hoped to put her husband in the White House.

Bigger Smith Demonstration

Al Smith's adherents now succeeded in bringing about adjournment until Thursday morning, and they spent the interval in perfecting the details of a demonstration that they intended should be more spectacular and longer than that for McAdoo.

When the convention was called to order next day they were all ready. Beside Chairman Walsh sat a lady in white, who proved to be Miss May Kennedy, the permanent vice chairman. She was given the gavel after the invocation, and after a few pleasant words about the recognition accorded the women, she ordered that the roll call of the states be resumed. Governor Sweet of Colorado was first to arise, his intention being to second the nomination of Mr. McAdoo. But the Smith throng, which by this time had filled up all the available space in the hall, was impatient and rude. Shouts of "oil" arose from all the galleries and even from the floor and grew so numerous and loud that the speaker was unable to continue. Here Chairman Walsh again came to the front with a scathing rebuke to the hecklers that silenced them.

"Connecticut yields to New York" said a delegate from the Nutmeg state a few moments later, and instantly there was tumultuous cheering and wild waving of a myriad flags. But the demonstration was premature and Franklin D. Roosevelt, on crutches, mounted the rostrum and quieted it, so that he might place in nomination New York's beloved governor, Al Smith. To the unbiased listener Mr. Roosevelt's speech the most satisfactory that had made up to that time. His elocution was perfect, his sentences cut. The vast audience hung upon every word. It was a highly vescent audience, surcharged with thusiasm, and few speakers could kept it in restraint as well as the gentleman from New York. Who had set forth eloquently the virtues and qualities of Governor Smith which he believed made him the man to head the Democratic ticket. Mr. Roosevelt gave "Al's" admirers their way, and they went to it with will.

Now it was almost dinner time when the secretary read an announcement from the committee on resolutions that it would not be ready to report before Friday morning. A motion to take a recess and hold an evening session brought on a controversy. New York strenuously objected because the municipality had planned evening entertainments for the delegators. Adjournment until the next morning was proposed as an amendment and for the first time it was necessary to poll the convention. The vote was very close—559 to 513—those who preferred entertainment to business in the evening won out. To this seemed rather unimportant to the unposted onlooker, but in reality it was a test vote indicating the relative strength of the Smith and McAdoo forces. The managers for the Californian hoped that the nominating speeches could be finished and the balloting actually begun before the committee on resolutions was ready to report. They thought that this might insure the nomination of their candidate. The Smithites were determined their opponents should not have the advantage, if it existed, and they had their way.

More than six hours were devoted on Friday, to completing the list of Presidential nominations and to the seconding speeches, of which there were many. The additional names presented to the convention were: James M. Cox of Ohio, Gov. Charles W. Bryan of Nebraska, Gov. Fred W. Brown of New Hampshire, Gov. George S. Silzer of New Jersey, Senaor Carter Glass of Virginia and John W. Davis of West Virginia. This made sixteen in all, and of course there were in addition a lot of dark horses and favorite sons who were not formally placed in nomination. During the seconding speeches there was a lot of horseplay from the gallery gods, who were fearful of hearing talk and wanted action. Once the obnoxious fire sirens were started again, but Chairman Walsh announced that if their use was not stopped he would have them removed from the building.

Battle Over Two Planks

Saturday afternoon the worn-and-hollow-eyed committee on resolutions brought in the platform in the form of which it had been engaged night and night, throughout the week. Chairman Homer Cummings told of the vain efforts to settle the Klan and League of Nations disputes without putting them up to the convention, saying that at the final session of the committee, so sincere were the debates of its members that one of them recited the Lord's Prayer and William Jennings Bryan, chairman of the committee, asked Divine help.

Newton D. Baker of Ohio, proposer of the minority resolution for the League, staggered to the speaker's desk, so weary he could scarcely stand, and delivered himself of the one great burst of real emotional oratory heard by the convention. In impassioned accents, with fervid, hoarse often broken voice, he pleaded with the Democrats not to abandon the ideals of Woodrow Wilson but to stand firm in advocacy of immediate American membership in the League of Nations. It was a truly magnificent effort and as Mr. Baker was assisted to his seat the thousands in the hall gave him a real ovation. In the minds of all was the "Cross of Gold" speech that once made Bryan the nominee of the party.

Senator Key Pittman of Nevada applied for the majority of the committee, and though he was booed for his sarcastic allusion to Mr. Baker's internationalism, his arguments prevailed and the committee's plank winning by a vote of 742½ to 353½.

Now came the battle over the Klan plank, to witness which most of the vast audience had sat through weary hours. The opening shot was fired by Senator Owen of Oklahoma, in behalf of the majority report, and was well directed. W. R. Pattangall of Maine, author of the proposed amendment explicitly naming the Klan, replied with equal effect. Several minor guns on either side were discharged, and then Bainbridge Colby, the big plank of ordinance in the anti-Klan forces was turned loose. The former secretary of state made a corking good speech and aroused great enthusiasm. He was followed by William Jennings Bryan, who sought to pour oil on the troubled waters but was a determined opponent of the plank in which the Klan was named. Mr. Bryan was heard respectfully by the delegates but was booed several times by the audience.

The taking of the vote was long drawn out and tedious. Finally at two o'clock in the morning the chair announced that the majority report had won by a margin of just four votes. Then the weary delegates returned to their hotels until Monday morning.

Father Knickerbocker was as proud as a peacock when the convention was awarded to him, and he set out to show the other convention cities how to take care of such a gathering. The result was astonishing to every Democratic convention attendant.

LIFE IN THE OPEN

Life in the open through the eyes of an author who is at once a man of affairs and a poet—that's "Zen of the Y.D.," by Robert Stead. It's an adventurous life, for the scene is the Canadian West, where the open spaces are wide and the people grow large and individual to fill them. The author was born in Manitoba and has traveled all over that province and Alberta and Saskatchewan selling automobiles, so he knows the country well. Moreover, he's been a newspaper man in several cities of western Canada. And now he's an official of the immigration and colonization department of the Canadian government. But it is as a poet that Mr. Stead is best known; he is the author of "The Empire Builders" and many uncollected poems.

Zen of the Y.D. is the girl of the story. The Y.D. ranch is so big and so well known that Y.D. is the only name current in the country round for the ranch, old Y.D. himself and his daughter. There are four men that Zen has to manage—Transley, dominant and efficient; Linder, substantial, but not self-assertive; Drazk, irresponsible and vicious; Grant, erratic, but lovable. And Zen has her troubles doing that managing.

CHAPTER I

—1—

"Chuck at the Y.D. tonight, and a ...d under the shingles," shouted ...ransley, waving to the procession to ... off.

Linder, foreman and head teamster, ...raightened up from the half load ... new hay in which he had been ...aiting the final word, tightened the ...es, made a clucking sound in his ...oat, and the horses pressed their ...oulders into the collars. Linder ...anced back to see each wagon or ...plement take up the slack with a ...k like the cars of a freight train; ...e cushioned rumble of wagon wheels ... the soft earth, and the noisy chat... of the steel teeth of the hay-...kes came up from the rear. Trans...y's "outfit" was under way.

Transley was a contractor; a mas... of men and of circumstances. Six ...eks before, the suspension of a ...ding order had left him high and ..., with a dozen men and as many ...ams on his hands and hired for the ...son. Transley galloped all that ...ht into the foothills; when he re...rned next evening he had a con...ct with the Y.D. to cut all the hay ...m the ranch buildings to the Forks. ...ransley traded his dump scrapers ... mowing machines, and three days ...er his outfit was at work in the ...per reaches of the Y.D.

The contract had been decidedly ...ofitable. Not an hour of broken ...ather had interrupted the opera...ons, and today, with two thousand ...s of hay in stack, Transley was ...oving down to the headquarters of ...e Y.D. The trail lay along a broad ...lley, warded on either side by ...nges of foothills; hills which in any ...her country would have been digni...d by the name of mountains. From ...eir summits the gray-green up-tilted ...estone protruded, whipped clean of ...l by the chinooks of centuries. ...re and there on their northern ...pes hung a beard of scrub timber; ...arp gulleys cut into their fast...sses to bring down the turbulent ...tters of their snows.

...Some miles to the left of the trail ... the bed of the Y.D., fringed with ...plar and cottonwood and occasional ...rk green splashes of spruce. Be...nd the bed of the Y.D., beyond the ...othills that looked down upon it, ...ng the mountains themselves, their ...nt crests pitched like mighty tents ...owsing placidly between earth and ...aven. Now their four o'clock veil ... blue-purple mist lay filmed about ...eir shoulders, but later they would ...nd out in bold silhouette cutting ...o the twilight sky. Everywhere ... silences of the eternal, broken ...ly by the muffled noises of Trans...y's outfit trailing down to the Y.D.

Linder, foreman and head teamster, ...shioned his shoulders against his ...f load of hay and contemplated the ...e with amicable satisfaction. The ...y fields of the foothills had been a ...asant change from the railway ...des of the plains below. Men and ...rses had fattened and grown con...nt, and the foreman had reason to ...ow that Transley's bank account ...d profited by the sudden shift in ... operations. Linder felt in his ...cket for pipe and matches; then, ...th a frown, withdrew his fingers. ... himself had laid down the law that ...re must be no smoking in the hay ...ds. A carelessly dropped match ...ght in an hour nullify all their ...or.

Linder's frown had scarce vanished ...en hoof-beats pounded by the side ... his wagon, and a rider, throwing ...self lightly from his horse, dropped ...side him in the hay.

"Thought I'd ride with you a spell, ... That Pete-horse acts like he was ... sore on the off front foot. Chuck ...the Y.D. tonight?"

"That's what Transley says, George, ... he knows."

"Ever et at the Y.D.?"

"Once."

"Know old Y.D.?"

"Only to know —is name is good on a check, and they say he still throws a good rope."

George wriggled to a more comfortable position in the hay. He had a feeling that he was approaching a delicate subject with consummate skill. After a considerable silence he continued:

"They say that's quite a girl old Y.D.'s got."

"Oh," said Linder, slowly. The occasion of the soreness in that Pete-horse's off front foot was becoming apparent.

"You better stick to Peter," Linder continued. "Women is most uncertain critters."

"Don't I know it?" chuckled George, poking the foreman's ribs companionably with his elbow. "Don't I know it?" he repeated as his mind apparently ran back over some reminiscence that verified Linder's remark. It was evident from the pleasant grimaces of George's face that whatever he had suffered from the uncertain sex was forgiven.

"Say, Lin," he resumed after another pause, and this time in a more confidential tone, "do you s'pose Transley's got a notion that way?"

"Shouldn't wonder. Transley always knows what he's doing, and why. Y.D. must be worth a million or so, and the girl is all he's got to leave it to. Besides, no doubt she's well worth having on her own account."

"Well, I'm sorry for the boss," George replied, with great soberness. "I allus hate to disappoint the boss."

"Huh!" said Linder. He knew George Drazk too well for further comment. After his unlimited pride in and devotion to his horse, George gave his heart unreservedly to womankind. He suffered from no cramping niceness in his devotions; that would have limited the play of his passion; to him all women were alike—or nearly so. And no number of rebuffs could convince George that he was unpopular with the objects of his democratic affections. Such a conclusion was, to him, too absurd to be entertained, no matter how many experiences might support it. If opportunity offered he doubtless would propose to Y.D.'s daughter that very night—and get a boxed ear for his pains.

"Do You S...ppose Transley's Got a Notion That Way?"

The Y.D. creek had crossed its valley, shouldering close against the base of the foothills to the right. Here the current had created a precipitous cut-bank, and to avoid it and the stream the trail wound over the side of the hill. As they crested a corner the silver ribbon of the Y.D. was unraveled before them, and half a dozen miles down its course the ranch buildings lay clustered in a grove of cottonwoods and evergreens. All the great valley lay warm and pulsating in a flood of yellow sunshine; the very earth seemed amorous and content in the embrace of sun and sky. The majesty of the view seized even the unpoetic souls of Linder and Drazk, and because they had no other means of expression they swore vaguely and relapsed into silence.

Hoof-beats again sounded by the wagon side. It was Transley.

"Oh, here you are, Drazk. How long do you reckon it would take you to ride down to the Y.D. on that Pete-horse?" Transley was a leader of men.

Drazk's eyes sparkled at the subtle compliment to his horse.

"I tell you, boss," he said, "if there's any jackrabbits in the road they'll get tramped on."

"I bet they will," said Transley, genially. "Well, you just slide down and tell Y.D. we're coming in. She's going to be later than I figured, but I can't hurry the work horses. You know that, Drazk."

"Sure I do, boss," said Drazk, springing into his saddle. "Just watch me lose myself in the dust." Then, to himself, "Here's where I beat the boss to it."

The sun had fallen behind the mountains, the valley was filled with shadow, the afterglow, mauve and purple and copper, was playing far up the sky when Transley's outfit reached the Y.D. corrals. George Drazk had opened the gate and waited beside it.

"Y.D. wants you an' Linder to eat with him at the house," he said as Transley halted beside him. "The rest of us eat in the bunkhouse." There was something strangely modest in Drazk's manner.

"Had yours handed to you already?" Linder managed to banter in a low voice as they swung through the gate.

"H—l!" protested Mr. Drazk. "A fellow that ain't a boss or a foreman don't get a look-in. Never even seen her. . . . Come, you Pete-horse!" It was evident George had gone back to his first love.

The wagons drew up in the yard, and there was a fine jingle of harness as the teamsters quickly unhitched. Y.D. himself approached through the dusk; his large frame and confident bearing were unmistakable even in that group of confident, vigorous men.

"Glad to see you, Transley," he said cordially. "You done well out there. 'So, Linder! You made a good job of it. Come up to the house—I reckon the missus has supper waitin'. We'll find a room for you up there, too; it's different from bein' under canvas."

So saying, and turning the welfare of the men and the horses over to his foreman, the rancher led Transley and Linder along a path through a grove of cottonwoods, across a footbridge where from underneath came the babble of water, to "the house," marked by a yellow light which poured through the windows and lost itself in the shadow of the trees.

The nucleus of the house was the log cabin where Y.D. and his wife had lived in their first married years. With the passage of time additions had been built to every side which offered a point of contact, but the log cabin still remained the family center, and into it Transley and Linder were immediately admitted. The poplar floor had long since worn thin, save at the knots, and had been covered with edge-grained fir, but otherwise the cabin stood as it had for twenty years, the whitewashed logs glowing in the light of two bracket lamps and the reflections from a wood fire which burned merrily in the stove. The skins of a grizzly bear and a timber wolf lay on the floor, and two moose heads looked down from opposite ends of the room. On the walls hung other trophies won by Y.D.'s rifle, along with hand-made bits of harness, lariats, and other insignia of the ranchman's trade.

The rancher took his guests' hats, and motioned each to a seat. "Mother," he said, directing his voice into an adjoining room, "here's the boys."

In a moment "Mother" appeared drying her hands. In her appearance were courage, resourcefulness, energy—fit mate for the man who had made the Y.D. known in every big cattle market of the country. As Linder's eye caught her and her husband in the same glance his mind involuntarily leapt to the suggestion of what the offspring of such a pair must be. The men of the cattle country have a proper appreciation of heredity. . . .

"My wife—Mr. Transley, Mr. Linder," said the rancher, with a courtliness which sat strangely on his otherwise rough-and-ready speech. "I been tellin' her the fine job you boys has made in the hay fields, an' I reckon she's got a bite of supper waitin' you."

"Y.D. has been full of your praises," said the woman, as she led them into another room, where a table was set for five. Linder experienced a tang of happy excitement as he noted the number. Linder allowed himself no foolishness about women, but, as he sometimes sagely remarked to George Drazk, you never can tell what might happen. He shot a quick glance at Transley, but the contractor's face gave no sign. Even as he looked Linder thought what an able face it was. Transley was not more than twenty-six, but forcefulness, assertion, ability, stood in every line of his clean-cut features. He was such a man as to capture at a blow the heart of old Y.D., perhaps of Y.D.'s daughter.

"Where's Zen?" demanded the rancher.

"She'll be here presently," his wife replied. "We don't have Mr. Transley and Mr. Linder every night, you know," she added, with a smile.

"Dolling up," thought Linder. "Trust a woman never to miss a bet."

But at that moment a door opened, and the girl appeared. She did not burst upon them, as Linder had half expected; she slipped quietly and gracefully into their presence. She was dressed in black, in a costume which did not too much conceal the charm of her figure, and the nut-brown luster of her face and hair played against the sober background of her dress with an effect that was almost dazzling.

"My daughter, Zen," said Y.D. "Mr. Transley, Mr. Linder."

She shook hands frankly, first with Transley, then with Linder, as had been the order of the introduction. She gave the impression of one who has herself, and the situation, in hand.

"We're always glad to have guests at the Y.D.," she was saying. "We live so far from everywhere."

Linder thought that a strange peg on which to hang their welcome. But she was continuing:

"And you have been so successful, haven't you? You have made quite a hit with Dad."

"How about Dad's daughter?" asked Transley. Transley had a manner of direct and forceful action. These were his first words to her. Linder would not have dared be so precipitate.

"Perhaps," thought Linder to himself, as he turned the incident over in his mind, "perhaps that is why Transley is boss, and I'm just foreman." The young woman's behavior seemed to support that conclusion. She did not answer Transley's question, but she gave no evidence of displeasure.

"You boys must be hungry," Y.D. was saying. "Pile in."

The rancher and his wife sat at the ends of the table; Transley on the side at Y.D.'s right; Linder at Transley's right. In the better light Linder noted Y.D.'s face. It was the face of a man of fifty, possibly sixty. Life in the open plays strange tricks with the appearance. Some men it ages before their time; others seem to tap a spring of perpetual youth. Save for the gray mustache and the puckerings about the eyes Y.D.'s was still a young man's face. Then, as the rancher turned his head, Linder noted a long scar, as of a burn, almost grown over in the right cheek. . . . Across the table from them sat the girl, impartially dividing her position between the two.

A Chinese boy served soup, and the rancher set the example by "piling in" without formality. Then followed a huge joint of beef, from which Y.D. cut generous slices with swift and dexterous strokes of a great knife, and the Chinese boy added the vegetables from a side table. As the meat disappeared the call of appetite became less insistent.

"She's been a great summer, ain't she?" said the rancher, laying down his knife and fork and lifting the carver. "Transley, some more meat? Pshaw, you ain't et enough for a chicken. Linder? That's right, pass up your plate. Powerful dry, though. That's only a small bit; here's a better slice here. Dry summers gen'rally mean open winters, but you can't never tell. Zen, how 'bout you? Old Y.D.'s been too long on the job to take chances. Mother? How much did you say, Transley? About two thousand tons? Not enough. Don't care if I do"—Helping himself to another piece of beef.

"I think you'll find two thousand tons, good hay and good measurement," said Transley.

"I'm sure of it," rejoined his host, generously. "I'm carryin' more steers than usual, and'll maybe run in a bunch of doggies from Manitoba to boot. I got to have more hay."

The Chinese boy served a pudding of some sort, and presently the meal was ended.

"She's been a dry summer—powerful dry," said the rancher, with a wink at his guests. "Zen, I think there's a bit of gopher poison in there yet, ain't there?"

The girl left the room without remark, returning shortly with a jug and glasses, which she placed before her father.

"I suppose you wear a man's size, Transley," he said, pouring out a big drink of brown liquor, despite Transley's deprecating hand. "Linder, how many fingers? Two? Well, we'll throw in the thumb. Y.D.? If you please, just a little snifter. All set?"

The rancher rose to his feet, and the company followed his example.

"Here's ho!—and more hay," he said, genially.

"Ho!" said Linder.

"The daughter of the Y.D.!" said Transley looking across the table at the girl. She met his eyes full; then, with a gleam of white teeth, she raised an empty glass and clinked it against his.

Here's the time-old situation—two eligible men and an attractive heiress. Which one will get her?

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Getting New Ones

Major Muggs, retired, was playing his usual 18 holes before lunch, but was a long way below his usual standard, making many bad shots.

In consequence of this his temper, never one of the best, became somewhat ruffled, and his anger increased when he noticed that a man was following from hole to hole. At last the major could stand it no longer.

"What the devil are you looking at?" he burst out.

"Looking, sir," replied the man, "I ain't looking, I'm listening."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Dr. Frederick R. Green,
Editor of "Health."

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

PREVENT DISEASE BY CARE OF TEETH

DO YOU want to protect your children against sickness and death? Of course you do. Every parent does.

Then have their teeth cared for from early childhood.

In a recent address before a scientific body, Dr. Charles Mayo of Rochester, Minn., said that infections of the mouth, nose and throat were responsible for 80 per cent of all diseases and 90 per cent of all deaths among children.

Better care of the mouth and throat will prevent four out of every five illnesses and nine out of every ten deaths among children.

That's worth while, isn't it?

The most important factor in keeping the mouth free from infection is regular visits to the dentist.

Our grandfathers never went to the dentist until their teeth began to ache. By that time it was too late to do anything except to pull the tooth.

Our fathers and mothers went to the dentist when their teeth began to decay.

Now the dentist says, "Bring the child to see me early enough and often enough, and I can prevent any infection and decay of the teeth."

It's better to keep the teeth whole than to let them decay and then pay for having them filled.

The old idea was that the baby teeth would decay anyhow. They don't. If a child's teeth are properly cared for and if the child is early taught to keep them clean, there will be no decay. If the baby teeth are kept straight and sound, the permanent teeth will come in evenly and regularly. There is no reason why every child shouldn't reach maturity with a sound, straight, perfect set of teeth.

This would be a tremendous advantage in after life. Perfect teeth prevent mouth infections and root abscesses, which cause "rheumatism," neuralgias, sciatica and many other painful conditions. They also make it possible for you to chew your food thoroughly and so avoid many of the common troubles of digestion.

If your teeth are not in good condition, have them attended to at once.

If your child's teeth are defective have them put in good shape and kept that way. There is no present you could give him that would be worth as much to him as sound, perfect teeth.

Expensive?

Not at all. It costs less to keep the teeth sound than it does to have them repaired.

The child who grows up with a perfect set of teeth probably won't have to spend more than a few dollars a year for dental bills for the rest of his life.

Visit the dentist every six months and save money and greatly increase your health and happiness.

BREAD

BREAD is the staff of life.

When Christ taught his disciples the Lord's Prayer, he taught them to say "Give us this day our daily bread." Not meat nor milk, vegetables nor fruits, pies nor cakes, desserts nor sweets, but bread.

Bread in some form is the principal article of diet of the human race.

Up to fifty years ago most of man's knowledge regarding bread and its importance was based on experience alone. The housewife added yeast to her dough to make it rise. She didn't know why it rose or how the yeast worked.

Pasteur in 1850 found out all about yeast and fermentation. Osborne in recent years has done equally important work on the chemistry of wheat proteins.

Millers and bakers today try to get for bread-making the flour that has the highest percentage of protein and the smallest amount of mineral matter, or ash, in it.

Our wheat crop last year was 800,000,000 bushels, only 60,000,000 bushels of which, or about one-thirteenth, was suitable for the production of the highest grade flour.

The consumption of bread in this country requires at least 100,000,000 bushels of wheat a year.

The bread on which our forefathers were raised was not as fine or as white as what we have today. The wheat was ground in the handmill or in the small water-power mill with rough stones instead of by the steam roller process of today.

The flour was not as finely screened or as carefully bleached. We eat more beautiful bread than our grandparents did, but it is not as nutritious or as wholesome as the nutbrown loaf our mothers used to make.

Whole wheat flour and graham flour, which contain more of the mineral and nutritive substances of the wheat, make better bread than the highly refined white flour, so commonly used.

Give your children brown bread or whole wheat bread and they will have better bones and better teeth.

Eat it yourself and you'll have better digestion and better elimination.

WRIGLEY'S

Chew it after every meal

It stimulates appetite and aids digestion. It makes your food do you more good. Note how it relieves that stuffy feeling after hearty eating.

Whitens teeth, sweetens breath and it's the goody that L-a-s-t-s.

Power Plant on Wheels

Every one thinks he knows all about the steam locomotive because it has been with us so long, but today we have a new locomotive, a power plant on wheels which has achieved an output in some cases of 135 pounds of steam an indicated horse-power hour, a record which puts the steam locomotive in the class of efficient noncondensing power plants. Locomotives are in service with power and flexibility enough to enable them to haul 10,000 tons at 18 miles an hour on level track, or to pull 4,500 tons on a ten-minute clearance ahead of a limited express, scheduled at 45 miles an hour for 90 miles without a stop.

White Cedar in Japan

Japanese white cedar of the highest grade is considered sacred. All of the wood 18 inches and up in diameter is reserved for the building of temples, and the cheaper grades are disposed of like other woods. Especially fine pieces are reserved for the temples of the emperors. Only white cedar grown in Japan is used for building temples.

Most of the white cedar shipped to Japan is used for exposed beams on the inside of dwelling houses, where the wood is prized for its appearance and durability. One instance is known in which a Japanese paid $1,100 gold in this country for a choice beam 18 inches square and 20 feet long, with perfect diagonal grain.

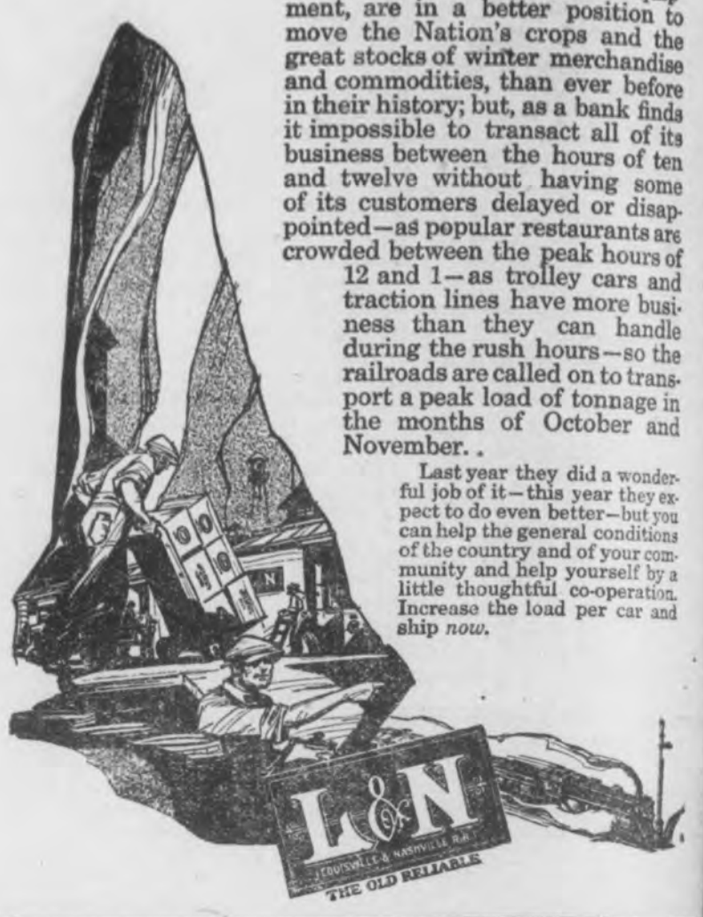
Means Lowering the Peak of Fall Tonnage ~



THE RAILROADS, by constant striving for betterment of service and by the addition of millions of dollars worth of new equipment, are in a better position to move the Nation's crops and the great stocks of winter merchandise and commodities, than ever before in their history; but, as a bank finds it impossible to transact all of its business between the hours of ten and twelve without having some of its customers delayed or disappointed—as popular restaurants are crowded between the peak hours of 12 and 1—as trolley cars and traction lines have more business than they can handle during the rush hours—so the railroads are called on to transport a peak load of tonnage in the months of October and November.

Last year they did a wonderful job of it—this year they expect to do even better—but you can help the general conditions of the country and of your community and help yourself by a little thoughtful co-operation. Increase the load per car and ship now.

The Hydro-Power Decade
in ALABAMA

Tse first of a series of advertisements dealing with the relationship of this company to the state at large.

Statewide hydro-electric service was first introduced in Alabama in 1914 when the vision of Alabama men was realized by the opening of Lock 12.

Coincident with the advent of hydro-electrice power there began in Alabama the greatest industrial revival which this or any other state has experienced in a single decade.

The paramount needs of most inductries are raw materials, labor, a short haul to ready markets and POWER.

Of these needs—POWER—cheaper and more abundant than is available in other sections—is one of the fundamental and final requirements.

When hydro-electric power became available for industrial purposes, the eyes of the nation turned to Alabama's raw materials and resources.

The growth of industry in Alabama is reflected to a marked degree in the steady increase of power consumption—from a connected load of 6500 horsepower in 1913 to 360,000 horsepower on December 31st, 1923.

The effects of this industrial expansion have been confined to no particular locality. While their benefits have been greatest in those towns and cities where the company supplies power, all sections of the state have profited indirectly from the statewide scope of Alabama Power Company activities.

In this industrial development Alabama Power Company has played more than a passive role—that of furnishing the power to new industries which require it—it has advertised Alabama opportunities and assets—gone actively into the field to bring new industries into Alabama to help utilize Alabama's potential resources.

Alabama Power Company operations are confined exclusively in Alabama. It is officered by Alabama men. its stock is owned by citizens in nearly every town in the state. It is throughout—an Alabama corporation.

It is reasonable therefore for it to take every means at its command to encourage aggressively the development of Alabama on the theory that the growth of this state and the growth of the company are indissolubly bound to each other—that whatever benefits the one will benefit the other.

Alabama's progress in the last ten years—the hydro power decade—proves this fact.

WHY SHE LIVES IN ARIZONA

A few weeks ago the story of Leora Lobban Brewer was typed for the editor. It told of a cheery woman who wrote in snatches, between running the "Brewer Furniture" business, and nursing her husband through an illness. "The business is transacted in Tucson, Ariz.," it said lightly. "Now the United States census places Tucson in the 'Cities and Towns Having From 10,000 to 25,000 Inhabitants.' Tourists on fast trains to California whiz past asking, 'Don't we ever get through the desert?'

"Are you sorry for Mrs. Brewer?

"Don't be! Of a pile of letters on my desk, hers is the happiest. 'J. V.' is better. Last Saturday she closed early to speak at the prohibition rally in the Baptist church. Swaying one's audience brings the same thrill in Tucson as in New York. The postmistress, Mrs. Brewer's candidate, has been elected president of the new business women's club. Furthermore, Leora Brewer has just been asked to travel through the state in the interests of a big national organization.

"'Of course, I won't take salary for work so near my heart,' she writes. 'Store clerk as I am, I manage to make a comfortable amount so that I can do this other work for pleasure.'"

All this the story of a few weeks back. There's another letter from Mrs. Brewer today. It, too, is scribbled, but this time on a train. Mr. Brewer's illness in May proved more serious than she had let herself believe, and the reason for living in the desert country is passed.

Her brief little correspondence card says, "I am almost home." Then her honesty puts a question mark, thus, home (?), and goes on, "that is, my native home, where I shall visit. . . . I plan to remain in Arizona. I have my business, the furniture store. And there also, I believe, is my field for the Master."

So she's going back to the desert country, that isn't a desert for her. When the Arizona Star has included her in a series on "Interesting Tucsonians"; when as a daughter and wife of a storekeeper and proprietor of a store she has learned to write ads that attract attention and customers; when she feels that "city parks cannot make up for country in the best climate on earth"; and when a girlhood vow to help create a dry country has brought an additional field of usefulness and honor, why should Mrs. Brewer have anything but love for Arizona?

THRILLS ON "THE MAIN STREET MESSENGER"

The life of the small-town reporter has many thrills. Eva Hunt Dockery of the Idaho Daily Statesman of Boise lists, as a few of the more dramatic, interviewing Paderewski through a knothole, being set upon bodily by an irate wife who mistook Mrs. Dockery for her husband's affinity, writing up the first motor trip to California while the dusty gentleman gave out details from a barber-shop bath house, and having the police called when she tried to get a picture of a murdered woman.

The woman reporter in the smaller place, Mrs. Dockery says, gets a chance to interview notables when they come through the town. If she were on a big city daily these interviews would go to the star reporters and her own progress toward the most interesting feature of news writing would thus be delayed or curtailed. Among Mrs. Dockery's choicest possessions are notes from Schumann-Heinck, Ida Tarbell, and other notables. A silver dagger, specially inscribed, is a memento of what promised to be an impossible interview with Mme. Nordica, but which eventuated into such a friendship that the singer always sent for the writer when she reached Boise.

Originally a trained librarian, the secretary of the Idaho state free library commission once lost her position through a change of political color at the statehouse. Just then the Statesman was short a society editor, hunted her up and offered her the job.

"It was when I went to San Francisco and talked with the newspaper women there," Mrs. Dockery writes, "that I first realized my good fortune in receiving training on a small-town paper. Of course we consider ours the biggest little newspaper in the country. Anyway, the bright young newspaper girls I met claimed quite to envy me my varied experience covering police and Supreme courts, hotel interviews and celebrities—everything at one time or another except the legislature. Even in the matter of finances I believe the small-town newspaper woman has the best of the argument. While the pay is small, living expenses are cheaper and there is always a chance at sidelines such as writing ads for stores which cannot pay a regular ad writer, doing publicity for campaigns, etc."

The Perfect Arch

It has been said there is nothing improved by anger except the arch in a cat's back.

Cretonne With Silk and Satin; Pink Slip Under Lace Frock

ALL white, with a splash of color, so does this season's fashion code specify. To obey this mandate designers have, it would almost seem, requisitioned about all the cretonne in sight with orders placed for more in the future. In days gone by, a little cretonne now and then was considered good for dress design, but now not simply a judicious touch, but entire coats, wraps and frocks are largely of cretonne formed.

The suits which employ cretonne in their making, supplemented, of course, with a plain material, are referred to in fashion circles as compose costumes. Such is the charming model shown here. For this attractive compose costume cretonne forms partnership with bleached white silk pongee. The border of cretonne about the skirt portion relates the frock to its gay printed coatee.

Charming Cretonne Frock.

Another pleasing whim of fashion is to applique black satin with motifs cut from what once was considered mere upholstering material. As a sort of camouflage gold threads are so interstitched, one feels almost as if a rare piece of tapestry had been borrowed from some storehouse of ancient treasure, to lend its wealth of color to present day fashion. Some of the handsomest straightline black satin coats are bordered each side down the front with cut out strips and garlands of cretonne flowers. A really handsome and unique effect is the result.

Nor do stylists let cease their flights of creative imagination with coat, frock and compose suit and wrap. Indeed not, they top their summer costumes with hats and even parasols of cretonne.

What prettier ensemble can one wish for than a plaited crepe frock, say beige, tobacco brown, gray or black. It may or may not be bordered with the cretonne, but one thing is sure, and that is a three-quarter length coat cut of the cretonne perhaps finished with dull metal braid and a solid crepe to add color composition to the design.

Of all the delectable sights, none is more so than woman beautiful, as she graces country club and garden scene, frocked in exquisite tea-dyed lace over a flesh-tinted or peach pink silken slip. Correct English may not permit, but surely under the plea of poetic license one may apply the adjective "delicious" to this adorable color symphony.

The idea of wearing flesh-tinted or peach pink slips under lace frocks which the mode so ardently stresses this season, is a most charming one. It matters not whether the lace be cream color, tea-shade, white or black, fashion decrees that the underslip be some shade of pink, preferably flesh or peach.

Furthermore the mode's beauty hints suggest flesh-colored hosiery, ribbons and furbelows which reflect the glory of pink, the entire crowned by a chapeau which shall radiate a pink glow about the head of milady fair. The lace costume in the picture owes much of its charm to just such an entrancing color scheme. The gown is a combination of embroidered net and Italian filet. The underslip is peach satin. There is a rosette of mellow pink ribbon-made buds at waist. A flattering pink crepe faces the hat brim with pink ribbon embroidery on the crown.

A lace frock is not an extravagance, for with different underslips and accessories it can be worn at varied occasions throughout the summer.
